Mary Pickford Once Had Keen Distaste for Movies

Chapter III.

"I loved my work—everything connected with it."

Thus Miss Pickford explained her success as a child actress. Consciously or not, she had hit upon the secret of success in any line of endeavor. Yet, later, I could not help going back to this statement of hers and contrasting it with her equally frank dislike of "the movies"—for she made no secret of the scorn she had felt for the silent drama at the time she made the change from stage to screen. If there still lurks in some hidden corner of her heart the old ambition to mount high in Thespis' realm—one may be very sure that the day will come when she will essay another role in the spoken drama. For it is a very purposeful young woman, is Mary Pickford. But to come back to her recital—

"For the first few years we continued to live in Toronto, my engagements in the stock company becoming more and more frequent, as I have already told you, and little by little Lottie and Jack getting bits to do more and more often. Mother saw to it that none of this interfered with our education. At first she taught us herself, and later—as soon as she could afford it—employed a woman to teach us at odd moments at rehearsals. All of us got probably as much education in this fashion as the average child gets in the lower grades in school. But finally, one day, when I was eight years old, came my first chance to leave Toronto—with a traveling company, a very cheap repertoire organization offering very mellow melodramas to not too discerning communities, referred to in theatrical parlance as 'one nights.'

"The manager of this company had happened to drop in for a chat one evening with the stock company manager, and had looked in on our performance. My part in that especial play was better than usual and made my performance stand out. The visiting manager liked my work. He needed a child actress for his repertoire company. He made inquiries about me. Presently my real friend, the stock company manager, came back to my dressing room (where my mother was with me, as always), and told me about it.

"'You can do better for yourself with him than you can by staying with me,' he said frankly. 'I'd hate to lose you, Gladys, but if you are going on with your work this is a chance you can't afford to overlook.'

"Of course I had every intention of showing New York and London and Paris and Rome—one wonderful day—just exactly what Shakespeare had in mind when he created the lovely lady I loved most, Juliet. I had listened to the grown-ups in the company talk about the great actors of the past and bewail their lack in the down-at-the-heels present day stage of the theater, and had secretly resolved that in good time I should do my bit to make histrionism takes its rightful place once again in the category of great achievements. Oh, vaunting Ambition had a permanent abiding place in my eight-year-old brain!

"But hard experience had made me more than wary. Even my mother was hardly more cautious and practical. As things were, we were able to pay our rent each month and pay all our other little bills on time. In a vague sort of way I knew that there was little more for me to learn by remaining with the stock company. The parts that came my way were, and must continue to be, only little parts. But in a repertoire of smashing melodramas—of the general ilk of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin'—there were really great big emotional roles for a child to play. Of course, generally, the 'child' chosen for such parts was old enough to have children of her own. Only occasionally could a child actress, capable of playing these big parts, be found. The opportunity, from the viewpoint of advancing my art, was undoubtedly present in this unexpected offer. Also I had the natural, healthy curiosity of the child that makes its heart beat fast at the prospect of travel, of seeing cities that have been only names. But against all the consideration were the cold hard facts which I never forgot for long—facts personified by my mother, by Lottie, by Jack. If I went away, what about them?

"At my own manager's urgent suggestion I consented to meet the repertoire man after the performance. Before he came I had had a little talk with my mother, and let her understand I'd not let my enthusiasm run away with me. Naturally the one thing uppermost in my mother's mind was the thought of my leaving home and her protection.

"The repertoire man turned out to be very, very nice. The salary he named—$30.00 a week and all my traveling expenses—was too good to be true. I knew I could live on half of it. That meant I could send $15 a week home—every week! It was far better than I had been able to do in stock. And the parts I'd have a chance to play! Real 'star' parts! My eyes danced at the thought. But then came the one big objection back into my mind. Who would take care of me? Now let me make this point very clear. It wasn't that I wasn't absolutely self reliant and sure of myself. Although I was only eight years old I knew I could take care of myself in any situation. I had learned to dress myself and care for my teeth—and teach Lottie and Jack to do these things for themselves—long before. My mother believed in self reliance for her children. But on 'the road'—in the provinces, as I believe they say in England—I felt instinctively I should have somebody, some woman on whom I could depend, to whom I could go for advice.

"My luck was in that night. The repertoire man had just that very day arranged with a woman my mother knew quite well—a Mrs. Gish—to go along with his troupe to take care of her two daughters, Dorothy and Lillian. He was sure Mrs. Gish would take me under her wing. And, of course, she was willing to look after me, when my mother put it up to her the next day. And so everything was settled.

"That first season on the road was a succession of roseate day dreams for me. I loved it all—the cheap hotels, the dirty little theaters, the noisy audiences—all of it. For after the first few weeks of hard work at rehearsals we had plenty of time—to explore the new towns we visited each day, and for me every little city presented a new fascination all its own. It was very hard to have to put in hours of study with Dorothy and Lillian, but Mrs. Gish insisted on the schooling. Today, I am very grateful to her for it. But then it seemed such a waste of time when one might be outside on exploration bent! I remember the thrill it used to give me when other little girls, oblivious of my near presence, would step in front of one of the lurid posters depicting a scene from one of our plays—and make wide-eyed, rapturous exclamation about it! It was all I could do, in this days, to keep from telling them who I was.

"'See that beautiful little golden-haired girl going up to heaven?' I'd want to ask them. And then after they had turned to see me, I'd picture myself smiling very sweetly and saying, 'It's me.'

"As it was I contented myself

rted the results of my nego to His Majesty and he in me to take up the matter e Foreign Minister I ex to Prince Lobanov Rostovski had come to an oral agree ith Li Hung Chang regarding [illegible] of a secret Russo-Chinese pact and that the only thing left now was to embody the agreement in a formal written instrument After listening to my statement of the terms of the agreement the prince took a pen and wrote the text of the treaty The document was drafted so skilfully that I approved it without the slightest reservation The prince told me that the following day he would submit the document to His Majesty and return it to me if it was approved by the Emperor

When the text of the treaty came back to me I discovered to my great surprise a substantial alteration in the paragraph dealing with the Russo-Chinese union against Japan The words "against Japan" (by Japan) were missing from the text [illegible] part provided for the mutual defense of the two countries in the event of an attack upon either of them not by Japan alone but by any other power I was actually frightened The alteration was of momentous import A defensive alliance against all the other powers was quite different from such an alliance against Japan Several European powers including France our ally and England have interests in China and to obligate ourselves to defend China from all those countries meant to arouse them all against us and to invite no end of trouble

I immediately went to see the emperor and laid the matter before him He instructed me to ask Prince Lobanov Rostovski to make the necessary correction in the text of the agreement The situation was very delicate I was much younger than the foreign minister and much below him in official rank For me to correct what he had done was to affront him and arouse him against me I made known my apprehensions to his majesty and asked him personally to take up the matter with the prince He agreed Soon afterwards we all went to Moscow to attend the solemnities of the coronation

In Moscow I devoted much time and attention to Li Hung Chang for I considered it a matter of primary importance to the State to bring our negotiations to a successful consummation The Russo-Chinese alliance meant two things first a great railroad extending as far as Vladivostok on a straight line without curving northward along the Amur river and second firmly established peaceful relations with our neighbor the Chinese Colossus

The emperor assured me that he had spoken to the foreign minister and that the latter had promised to restore the original version of the treaty His majesty spoke so definitely that no doubts were left in my mind on the subject After this I met Prince Lobanov Rostovski several times but neither of us referred to the matter

In the meantime I continued my negotiations with Li Hung Chang, to the end of inducing the Chinese government to grant the concession for the construction of the Eastern Chinese section of the Trans-Siberian to the Russo-Chinese Bank which was already functioning At the same time I prepared an agreement with this bank whereby it ceded the concession to the Eastern Chinese Railroad Corporation soon to be formed by the Russian government

Finally we set the day for the signing of the secret agreement the signatories on the Russian side being Prince Lobanov Rostovski and myself and on the Chinese side Li Hung Chang, who had received instructions directly from Peking It was agreed that we would meet in the office of the foreign ministry and there sign the document with all the formalities prescribed by law and etiquette On the appointed day the Russian plenipotentiaries with the officials attached to them and Li Hung Chang with his retinue gathered in the office of the ministry and were seated around a table Prince Lobanov Rostovski opened the session and declared that both sides were familiar with the text of the agreement that the instrument had now been carefully copied by the secretaries and that it could be signed without reading Nevertheless he said he was perfectly willing to let the Chinese re-read the document if they so wished Accordingly a copy of the agreement—the document was to be signed in duplicate—was handed to Li Hung Chang's assistants I took the other one and began to scan it suspecting no evil Suddenly to my horror I noticed that the paragraph relating to our defensive alliance with China had not been changed notwithstanding his majesty's assurance and that unlike my version it provided for an obligation on our part to defend China from an attack by any power

I approached Prince Lobanov Rostovski called him aside and whispered in his ear that the provision regarding the defensive alliance had not been changed in accordance with his majesty's will

My God he exclaimed, striking his forehead I clear forgot to tell my secretary to insert that paragraph in its original wording Nevertheless he was not in the least taken aback He looked at his watch It was a quarter past 12 He clapped several times to call the servants and said turning to the gathering It is past noon Let's take luncheon We will sign the agreement afterwards

We all went to have luncheon except the two secretaries who, while we were lunching copied the document and made the necessary corrections These new copies were quietly substituted for the ones which had been circulated before luncheon and were duly signed by Li Hung Chang on one side, and by Prince Lobanov Rostovski and myself on the other

The Legend of Sleepy Hollow

(WASHINGTON IRVING)

Ichabod Crane had the learning market cornered in Sleepy Hollow. Into the plain and solid heads of country youth he pounded geometry, singing and the A B C s boarding around with the families whose offsprings he taught Ichabod wasn't much on looks but he was full of parlor tricks Gaunt and bony, and with a face like a glorified earthworm's still he shook a mean schottische, and had Scheherezade skinned a Catskill mile for small talk In other words, Ichabod was a cross between a five foot classic and a parlor snake

Katrina Van Tassel was the village sweetie Only child of the rich old farmer Van Tassel, she could support her husband-to-be in style if not luxury She was a member of Ichabod's singing class and in spite of the jealousy displayed by Katrina's other suitor Brom Van Brunt commonly known as Brom Bones, Ichabod thought he could make the Van Tassel home his permanent headquarters Brom Bones couldn't sing

I just ain't built like a mockingbird said Brom Bones but I got a dog can sing

*So he tied his musical terrier below the window when Ichabod start*ed trilling The dog won the contest and Ichabod lost a point in Katrina's favor

BITTER RIVALRY DEVELOPS

Brom Bones was a big brother Sylvest' who boasted that he would fight anything that wore hide or hair Ichabod was for diplomacy and wouldn't fight, so Brom Bones took it out in doing all he could to rile the Professor

Brom Bones was a reckless horseman, among his other accomplishments Ichabod would never set a circus afire with his feats on his faithful pinto, Gunpowder but he scored a bullseye when he started spinning tales of ghosts and goblins to the elders Fast and frenzied poured the tales—from that of the Headless Horseman who carried his head on the pommel of his saddle, down to the mean old ghost who pushed the widow woman's biddies in the creek—until Ichabod had goose-bumps backing out on the countenance of his audience

And when Ichabod left cheerful firesides to ride home through the night, his stories recurred to him Even old Gunpowder shivered and sighed when they passed a snow-blanketed bush Ichabod was like an old maid hunting a burglar He always expected a ghost, and was only half relieved when he failed to find one But it's a bum cooked goose that has no turnings

One day Ichabod was rounding out his school work Before him stood the listless pupils, puzzling over pronouns and logarithms A messenger tapped at the door of the temple of knowledge, bearing an invitation for Ichabod to a quilting party at the Van Tassel's Holiday was declared at once and Ichabod threw a three-yard leg over the transparent Gunpowder

ICHABOD MOVES IN SOCIETY

Down the thick road ploughed the oogle-eyed schoolmaster's mount, pausing only now and then while Gunpowder drooped his head and snitched forty winks He reached the party and after feeding his face to the beaming he led the buxom Katrina out to trip the feathery fantastic Brom Bones sulked in a corner because the Professor seemed to be gathering in all the honeyed smiles of the fair Katrina Before he left, Ichabod led his inamorata into a corner and poured a few grammatical verb phrases in her ear, but when he departed the Professor wore a dejected air that swung down to his flapping coat tails Sadly he mounted Gunpowder and started down the road

Suddenly there was a crunching in the underbrush The bushes parted A horse and rider strode forth Gunpowder snorted Ichabod looked back The rider had no head! Gunpowder started to gallop Another look from the Professor Yes, he had a head—it rested on the pommel of his saddle

Giddap, Gunpowder! I wish they'd named you cannon ball shrieked Ichabod

Gunpowder doubled his speed Back of them galloped the Headless Horseman

"You let me pass I let you pass!" sang the hoofbeats of the horses Ichabod's coat tails were straight out in the wind, a fine course for marble playing The saddle broke and slipped from Ichabod Around Gunpowder's neck he clung

On—on—on Faster and faster sped the twain

Ichabod thought he could make the Van Tassel home his permanent headquarters Brom Bones couldn't sing

"One feather and we'd be flying," sang the Headless Horseman

At last in the distance hove the white blur of tombstones They were approaching the marble orchard where the Headless Horseman was said to end his ride

THE HORSEMAN HEAVES HIS HEAD

Suddenly the beanless wonder stood high in his stirrups Aloft in his hands he poised his head

"Bang!" went something in Ichabod's ear, as he toppled from Gunpowder's back Gunpowder dashed on alone

The neighborhood turned out next day to hunt for the absent Professor At the graveyard was a well-rubbed spot, beside which lay a broken pumpkin

Brom Bones married Katrina, and at the wedding the guests began to talk and calculate how the Headless Horseman had carried off Ichabod Crane

"I thought I saw him in a town nearby, teaching school" ventured a visiting guest

"Tain't him," insisted an inhabitant of Sleepy Hollow The Headless Horseman carried him away"

"But what do you suppose that pumpkin was doing at the spot where the horseman caught him?"

And Brom Bones laughed and went to dance with his wife.

with listening to their wistful little hopes that their daddies would take them to the show—and I always echoed those hopes On the infrequent occasions when I didn't feel too well or when somehow I couldn't get all I ought to out of my part, I'd think about little girls I had heard talking this way—and that would be all I'd have to do Playing to them—I simply had to do my best!

"For two whole seasons I went on playing one night stands By the end of that time there were few cities from the Atlantic ocean to the Rocky mountains in which I had not appeared Incidentally the original zest for travel that had caused me to ignore discomforts of no inconsiderable kind—during the first few months—had by now largely disappeared. The same bed two nights in succession had come to be a thing to be thankful for. I was happier than I can say to get home Of course there were compensations. My name, Gladys Smith, be it remembered had been accounted not theatric enough for melodrama—had by now become fairly well known. At least in repertoire circles I had established my reputation as a child actress of dependability Offers were many. I had reached the stage where I could pick and choose I was ten years old

"Before finally signing a contract for the following season I gave deep thought to what was then and still is the all decisive matter of my family's well being. By this time Lottie and Jack were old enough and had had enough experience in the Toronto stock company to play speaking parts themselves. I made up my mind that I wasn't going to be separated from them again. As for my mother—I made up my mind on that point too. Anybody that wanted me that next season would have to want my family!

"Everybody, I suppose, knows that big stars of the stage are permitted by their contracts to carry with them at least one maid, and not infrequently a mother as well with the management paying railroad and hotel bills for maid and mother as well as star. But I was hardly in that class. Any contract I might sign would be with a management in whose experience the very word 'maid' would mean nothing at all. For me to persuade any manager who wanted me to take my mother and Lottie and Jack also—well, it wasn't the easiest thing in the world to accomplish. But I made up my mind that it was what I was going to do!

"As things turned out, I did it. I found a manager who could use all three of us children. To me he would pay $50 a week Lottie should have $20. There wasn't any part for Jack in the play, but he would have one written in—to make me happy. There wouldn't be any salary for Jack, nor any railway expenses paid for him. But that didn't matter so much—considering the fact that he really looked, at six, less than five, and would be carried free by the railroads. With our total earnings of $70 a week we could easily afford to have mother with us. And so it was settled.

"Everything went well until one night in Buffalo, half way through the week's engagement It was almost time for the curtain to go up. The house was packed. In my dressing room I heard sounds of violent commotion on the stage. I hurried down. Here was Jack, all dressed and made up for his part—standing on a chair and emphatically laying down the law to the company manager, behind whom a crowd of grinning stage hands was gathered The point was that Jack had suddenly decided that he must have a salary! No pay, no work, was the point of his heated remarks And it must be settled on the spot. If the manager wouldn't agree to pay him, he wouldn't go on—a threat piped out in his childish treble with all the earnestness in the world. But the manager only grinned and, turning to me, 'guessed' he'd have to get on as best he could without the services of the 'striker' And so for several days Jack was out of the cast, wrapped in sullen gloom and outraged pride. In the end he gave in, and humbly asked to be allowed to have his part back."

"Discipline and education are to be found in the theater, you see."

The Spoonbill's Dream

The following article is a transcript from the mud at the upper end of Lake Merritt where the original article had been scrawled by one of Oakland's feathered guests It is with the greatest care that the waterfront reporter who is an expert on this sort of thing made the translation It was necessary to interview the duck himself before it could be declared accurate

By A Spoonbill

I have just arrived after a long tiresome flight from Columbia where I have been having a tough time keeping out of the hunters' way Always no matter where I go there is some darn shark hunter on my trail In the [illegible] over the bank [illegible] I have been very lucky though and each time have managed to get away although on several occasions I have carried shot with me

Up in the rice fields they kept hammering away at me giving me no time for meals or rest I slipped over to Point Isabel one day and there some fellow down in the blinds cracked it to me and I came down It was only to climb back again and wing my way northward I lit up here on the [illegible] and first thing I knew a couple of scull boats were creeping up on me So I beat it again and saw this place and came down for a spell There seem to be a lot of ducks around here and I see a lot of people going by Just how long it will be before they open up on this gang I don't know but let's hope I have time to rest for a spell

Next Day

Well that guy hasn't shown up yet I've been sitting way out in the middle of the lake because from experience I am quite sure there are no shotguns that can shoot that far But I just slipped in to scribble a note or so to my daily diary I notice all the ducks assembling down at this end I don't know what it means I shall run and ask some one of them

Later

Just had a brief chat with a silly old seagull He said they were coming down here to get fed Funny old thing he is! Seagulls are just like that—all I have ever met They don't tell the truth Maybe he thinks he can get away with that kind of guff but here's one duck won't stand for it I told him he was crazy and he promptly pecked me on the back Silly old thing I hope he's with the next flock of ducks that gets [illegible] Well now I'll run along and have a chat with a duck I happen to know I saw him up in Columbia

Evening

Shucks! This is no place for me I don't mind jokes but hate to be kidded Even a couple of ducks have been trying to feed me that same stuff the gull poked down me I have an idea I've staggered into a duck lunatic asylum I never heard of one before but this must be it It's nice here though If I'm not crazy already I'll pretend I am so I can stay Perhaps if these birds thought I had my right mind they would all [illegible] me or something Anyway I'll stay so long as that hunter keeps away I hope by this time he's broke a ramrod off in his gun or something like that

P S—Just came back to say that I'm leaving for the center of the lake See a man coming down along the lake and all these nuts are swimming over toward him where he can get a good range on them Not me I may be part nutty but I'm not as bad off as that old seagull

P S—I don't think I'm in range here so will stick around and see what happens Gee I never saw such a nutty bunch of fowls

Next Day

Oh Lord Geesquak! Geesquak! I never had so much to eat in my life I'm dreaming or gone out of my mind I don't know which They say this is duck heaven instead of the nut house Oh swak Squak Squik! Oh I feel miserably good That old seagull knew what he was talking about all right—the silly old scalawag!

Just Folks

LITTLE BY LITTLE

Little by little we build our lives, little by little we move along,
Here the touch of a care survives there is the lilt of a bit of song,
Here we blundered and spoiled the plan, there we proved that our work was good,
For spite of the grief and the tears which ran, our faith was true and the temple stood

Faith is the roof which shelters all, and hope the glass where the sun comes through,
Love is the mortar which holds the wall, and joy the promise of all we do,
A touch of beauty the structure needs, for desolate would our labor be Without the roses of kindly deeds for the weary passer by to see

Little by little our lives we build First the foundation of youth appears,
Then with joys are the corners filled, then come dangers and griefs and fears,
Care besets us and days of woe seem to baffle and blind us all,
But, however the storms of life may blow, the roof of our faith must never fall

Brave the sorrows and bear the pain, build in beauty and strength and truth,
Never a good deed's done in vain! Age still treasures the joys of youth,
The storms pass by and the cares depart, but always something of worth survives,
To live life well is the truest art, as little by little we build our lives.

FATHER GOOSE MELODIES

by FRED EMERSON BROOKS

Virginia's Toads

Virginia is the sweetest child
In all the country wide—
That's what her Grandpa "Bobby" says—
And many more beside.
When out with Grandpa 'tother day
To help him make the garden
They soon uncovered two big toads
And never asked their pardon.

Virginia's eyes grew very big
At such a funny thing.
Two hop-toads sitting side by side
Just waiting for the spring.
And when she saw their pulsing throats,
She swung her little hat
And asked with joyous, bird-like notes
What they were laughing at.

There's papa toad and mamma toad
Each winking with their eyes
As tho' they had a heavy load—
A tummy full of flies.
But where's the little baby toad?
I guess that his grandpop
Has taken him way up the road
To teach him how to hop.

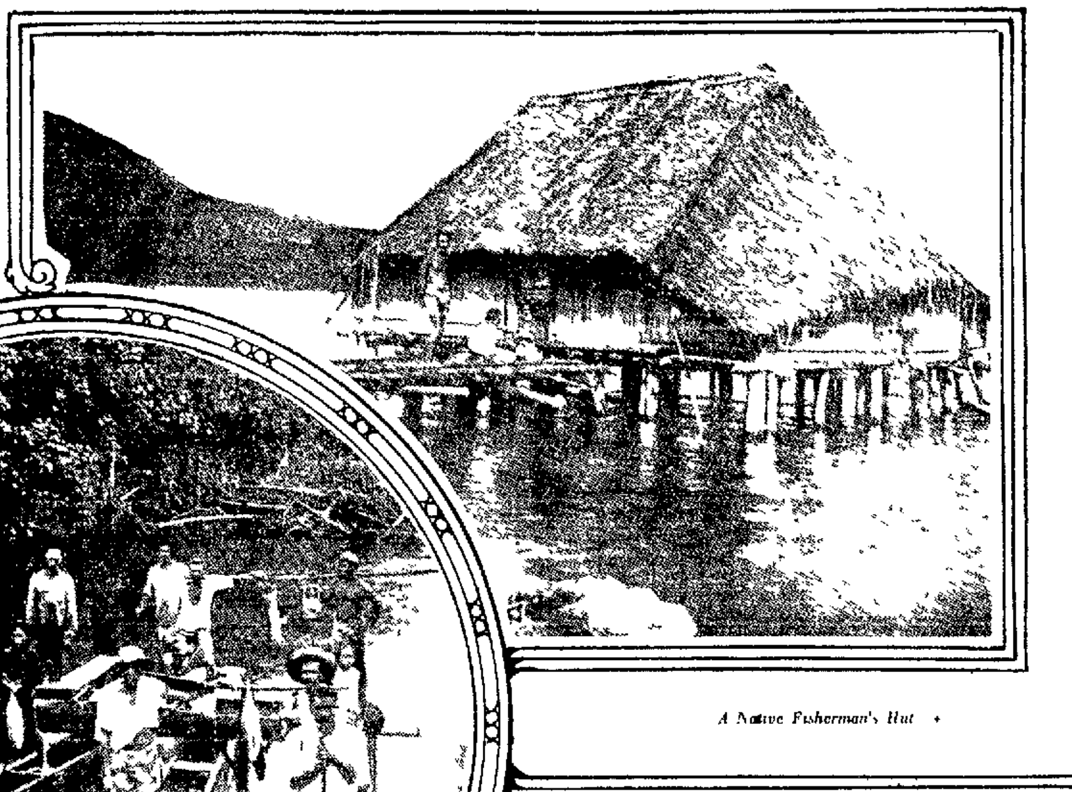
White Shadows in the South Seas

by FREDERICK O'BRIEN

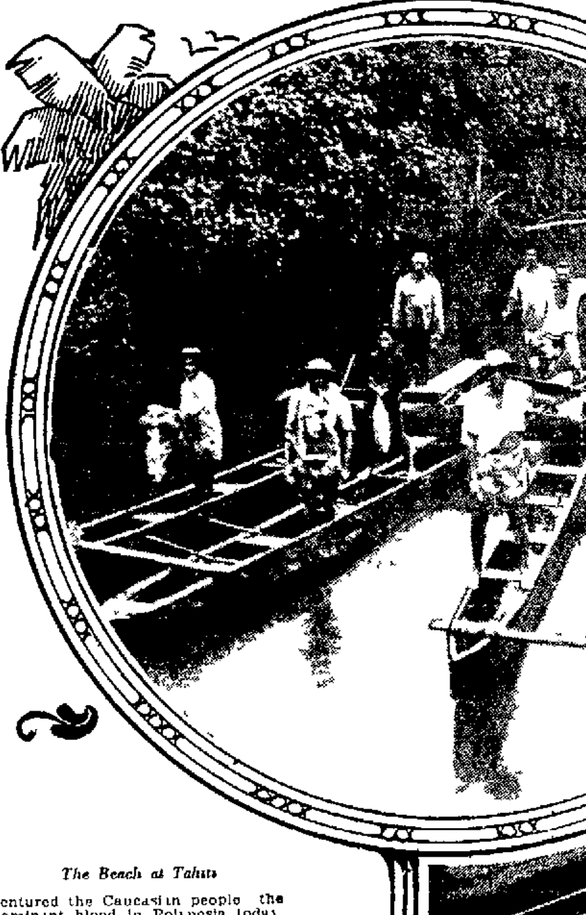
1.—The "Morning Star" Sails the South Seas

From Tahiti, Across Leagues of Ocean and Back Through Centuries of Time.

This is the first chapter of the greatest adventure book that has been written in a decade. It is the work of a former San Francisco newspaper man, now living at Sausalito, who spent many happy days in the wonder isles of the Marquesas.



A Native Fisherman's Hut



The Beach at Tahiti

Double Canoes

Where the Belles of Tahiti Live in the Shade to Whiten Their Complexions

A Marquesan Beauty

By the ancient coral wall of Papeete beach the schooner Fetia Taiao (Morning Star) lay ready to put to sea. Beneath the skyward sweeping green heights of Tahiti the narrow shore was a mass of colored gowns, dark faces, slender waving arms. All Papeete, flower crowned and weeping, was gathered beside the blue lagoon.

Lamentation and wailing followed the brown sailors as they came over the side and slowly began to cast the moorings that held the Morning Star. Few are the ships that sail many seasons among the Dangerous Islands. They lay their bones on rock or reef or sink in the deep and the lovers, sons and husbands of the women who weep on the beach return no more to the huts in the cocoanut groves. So at each sailing on the long course the anguish is keen.

"Ia ora na i te Atua!" "Farewell and God keep you!" the women cried as they stood beside the half buried cannon that serve to make fast the ships by the coral bank. From the deck of the nearby Hinano came the music of an accordeon and a chorus of familiar words:

I tere ote mahana
Ne tere no oe e Hati
Na te Moana
Let us sing and make merry
For we journey over the sea

It was the Mimene Tatou Arearea. Kelly, the wandering I. W. W., self acclaimed delegate of the mythical Union of Beachcombers and Stowaways, was at the valves of the accordeon and about him squatted a ring of joyous natives. "Wela ka hoa! Hot stuff!" they shouted.

Suddenly Caroline of the Marquesas and Mamoe of Moorea, most beautiful dancers of the quays, flung themselves into the upaupahura, the singing dance of love. Kelly began "Tome Tome," a Hawaiian hula. Men unloading cargo on the many schooners dropped their burdens and began to dance. Rude squareheads of the fo'c'sles beat time with pannikins. Clerks in the traders' stores and even Marechal the barber were swept from counters and chairs by the sensuous melody and bareheaded in the white sun they danced beneath the crowded balconies of the Cercle Bougainville, the club by the lagoon. The harbor of Papeete knew ten minutes of unrestrained merriment, tears forgotten, while from the warehouse of the navy to the Poodle Stew cafe the hula reigned.

The anchor was up, the lines let go, and suddenly from the sea came a wind with rain.

The girls from the Cocoanut House, a flutter of brilliant scarlet and pink gowns, fled for shelter, tossing blossoms of the sweet tiare Tahiti toward their sailor lovers as they ran. Marau, the haughty queen, drove rapidly away in her old chaise, the Princess Bonta leaning out to wave a slender hand. Prince Hinoi, the fat spendthrift who might have been a king, leaned from the balcony of the club, glass in hand, and shouted "Aritho i te revaraa!" across the deserted beach.

So we left Papeete, the gay Tahitian capital, while a slashing downpour drowned the gay flamboyant blossoms, our masts and rigging creaking in the gale and the sea breaking white on the coral reef.

Like the weeping women who doubtless had already dried their tears, the sky began to smile before we reached the treacherous pass in the outer reef. Beyond Moto Utu, the tiny islet in the harbor that had been harem and fort in kingly days, we saw the surf foaming on the coral and soon we were through the narrow channel.

We had lifted no canvas in the lagoon, using only our engine to escape the coral traps. Past the ever present danger, with the wind now half a gale and the rain falling again in sheets—the intermittent deluge of the season—the Morning Star under reefed foresail, mainsail and staysail pointed her delicate nose toward the Dangerous Islands and hit hard the open sea.

She rode the endlessly tossing waves like a seagull, carrying her head with a care free air and dipping to the waves in jaunty fashion. Her lines were very fine, tapering and beautiful even to the eye of a land lubber.

A hundred and six feet from stem to stern, twenty three feet of beam and ten feet of depth, she was loaded to water's edge with cargo for the islands to which we were bound. Lumber lay in the narrow lanes between cabin-house and rails, even the lifeboats were piled with cargo. Those who reckon dangers do not laugh much in these seas. There was barely room to move about on the deck of the Morning Star, merely a few steps were possible abaft the wheel amid the play of main sheet boom and traveler. Here, while my three fellow passengers went below, I stood gazing at the rain whipped illimitable waters ahead.

Many leagues before us lay Les Isles Dangereux, the Low Archipelago, first stopping point on our journey to the far cannibal islands yet another thousand miles away across the empty seas. Before we saw the green banners of Tahiti's cocoanut palms again we would travel not only forward over leagues of tossing waters but backward across centuries of time. For in those islands isolated from the world for eons there remains a living fragment of the childhood of our Caucasian race.

Darwin's theory is that these islands are the tops of a submerged continent or land bridge which stretches its crippled body along the floor of the Pacific for thousands of leagues. A lost land whose epic awaits the singer, a mystery perhaps forever to be unsolved. There are great monuments, graven objects, hieroglyphics, customs and languages, island peoples with suggestive legends—all, perhaps, remnants of a migration from Asia or Africa a hundred thousand years ago.

Over this land bridge, mayhap, ventured the Caucasian people, the dominant blood in Polynesia today, and when the continent fell from the sight of sun and stars save in those spots now the mountainous islands like Tahiti and the Marquesas, the survivors were isolated for untold centuries.

Here in these islands the brothers of our long forgotten ancestors have lived and bred since the Stone Age, cut off from the main stream of mankind's development. Here they have kept the childhood customs of our white race, savage and wild amid their primitive and savage life. Here three centuries ago they were discovered by the peoples of the great world, and rudely encountering a civilization they did not build, they are dying here. With their passing vanishes the last living link with our pre-historic past. And I was to see it before it disappears forever.

"Come have a drink!" Captain Pincher called from the cabin, and leaving the spray swept deck where the rain drummed on the canvas awning I went down the four steps into the narrow cabin house.

The cabin, about twenty feet long, had a tiny semi-private room for Captain Pincher and four berths ranged about a table. Here, grouped around a demijohn of rum, I found Captain Pincher with my three fellow passengers, McHenry and Gedge, the traders, and M. Lhermier des Plantes, a young officer of the French colonial army bound to the Marquesas to be their governor.

The captain was telling the story of the wreck in which he had lost his former ship. He had tied up to a reef for a game of cards with a like minded skipper who berthed beside him. The wind changed while they slept. Captain Pincher awoke to find his schooner breaking her back on the coral reefs.

The traderoom of the Morning Star, opening from the cabin, was to me the door to romance. When I was a boy there was more flavor in traderooms than in war. To have seen one would have been as a glimpse of the Holy Grail to a sworn knight. Those traderooms of my youthful imagination smelt of rum and gunpowder, and beside them were racks of rifles to repel the dusky figures coming over the bulwarks.

The traderoom of the Morning Star was odorous, too. It had no window, and when one opened the door all was obscure at first, while smells of rank Tahiti tobacco, cheap cotton prints, a broken bottle of perfume and scented soaps struggled for supremacy. Gradually the eye discovered shelves and bins and goods heaped from floor to ceiling, pins and anchors, harpoons and pens, crackers and jewelry, cloth, shoes, medicine and tomahawks, socks and writing paper.

Trade business, McHenry's monologue explained, is not what it was when these petty merchants dared not trust themselves ashore, their guns guarded against too eager customers. But now almost every inhabited island has its little store and the trader has to pursue his buyers, who die so fast that he must move from island to island in search of population.

Gedge was chief of the commercial part of the expedition, and his manner proclaimed it. Thin lipped, cunning eyed, but strong and self reliant, he was absorbed in the chances of trade. He had been twenty years in the Marquesas islands. A shrewd man among kanakas, unscrupulous by his own account, he had prospered. Now, after selling his business, he was paying a last visit to his long time home to settle accounts.

For two days at sea after leaving Papeete we did not see the sun. This was the rainy and hot season, a time of calms and hurricanes, of sudden squalls and maddening quietudes, when all signs fail and the sailor must stand by for the whims of the wind if he would save himself and his ship. For hours we raced along at seven or eight knots with a strong breeze on the quarter and the seas ruffling about our prow. For still longer hours we pushed through a windless calm by motor power. Showers fell incessantly.

We lived in pajamas, barefooted, unshaven and unwashed. Fresh water was limited, as it would be impossible to replenish our casks for many weeks. McHenry said it was not difficult to accustom one's self to lack of water both externally and internally.

There was a demijohn of strong Tahitian rum always on tap in the cabin. Here we sat to eat [illegible] raised to drink and [illegible]. There was Bordeaux wine at lunch [illegible] and dinner, Martinique [illegible], Tahitian rum and absinthe between meals. The ship's bell was struck by the steersman every half hour and McHenry made it the knell of an ounce.

Captain Pincher took [illegible] every hour or two [illegible]

Thirty seven [illegible] Marquesas [illegible] morning [illegible] days varied [illegible] by rain squalls [illegible] threatening seas [illegible] the clear sky. [illegible] passing [illegible] lifted its sail above the [illegible] the horizon. It was as though we [illegible] through space in their world.

Yet all around us there was life, life in a thousand varying forms filling the sea and the air. On calm morning the swelling waves were [illegible] by myriad of leaping fish; the sky was the playground of [illegible] birds soaring, diving, [illegible] through the [illegible] strong [illegible] the human [illegible] [illegible] illimitable [illegible]

I spent long [illegible] the [illegible] these sea birds [illegible] through the sky in great number. The frigate birds were called by the sailor the man-o'-war bird and also the sea hawk. They [illegible] marvelous flyers [illegible] the size of the pectoral muscles, which compared with those of other birds are extraordinarily large. They cannot rest on the water but must sustain their flights from land to land, yet [illegible] they were [illegible]

My eyes would follow [illegible] higher and higher till he became [illegible] dot in the [illegible], though but a few moments earlier he had risen from his pursuit of fish in the water. He spread his wings fully and did not move them as he climbed from air level to air level, but his long forked tail expanded and closed continuously.

Sighting a school of flying fish which had been driven to frantic leaps from the sea by pursuing bonito, he begins to descend. First his coming down is like that of an aeroplane in a glide, but a thousand feet from his prey he volplanes. He falls like a rocket and [illegible] a fish in the air [illegible] his way is up to the clouds.

If he [illegible] that flying fish he stops [illegible] in mid air and [illegible] them [illegible] their catch, which he [illegible] as it falls. Refusal to pay up the [illegible] is punished by blows on the head, but the gannets [illegible] fear the frigate that they [illegible] have the courage to [illegible]. I think a better name for the frigate would be pirate [illegible] law restrains [illegible]

[illegible] that the male fills the [illegible] throat [illegible] with air when he [illegible] some other [illegible] female likes it and [illegible] wind [illegible] more than the [illegible] he who gets the [illegible] egg [illegible]

[illegible] the egg warm [illegible] called the [illegible] [illegible] latitudes [illegible] [illegible] white [illegible] [illegible] feathers [illegible] [illegible] they [illegible] [illegible] with the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the French [illegible] his [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] he [illegible] compared to us [illegible] he was a dandy [illegible]

I kept on deck [illegible]. The squalls had passed, and as we neared Hiva oa the sea became glassy smooth, but the leagues long lazy roll of it rocked the schooner like a cradle.

The night before the islands were to come into view the sea was lit by phosphorescence so magnificently that even my shipmates absorbed in ecarte below called to one another to view it. The engine took us along at about six knots and every gentle wave that broke was a lump of love fire. The wake of the Morning Star was a milky path lit with trembling fragments of brilliancy and below the surface beside the rudder was a strip of green light from which a billion sparks of fire shot to the air.

Land loomed at daybreak, dark, gloomy and inhospitable. Rain fell drearily as we passed Fatu hiva, the first of the Marquesas islands sighted from the south. We had climbed from Tahiti seventeen degrees south of the equator to between eleven and ten degrees south and we had made a westward of ten degrees. The Marquesas islands lay before us, dull spots of dark loam upon the gray water.

They are not large, any of these islands; sixty or seventy miles is the greatest circumference. Some of the eleven are quite small and have no people now. On the map of the world they are the tiniest pin pricks. Few dwellers in Europe or America know anything about them. Most travelers have never heard of them. No liners touch them, no wire or wireless connects them with the world. No tourists visit them. Their people perish. Their trade languishes. In Tahiti, whence they draw almost all their sustenance, where their laws are made and to which they look as capital of the world, only a few men who traded here could tell me anything about the Marquesas. These men had only the vague exaggerated ideas of the sailor who goes ashore once or twice a year and knows nothing of the native life.

Seven hundred and fifty miles as the frigate flies separate these islands from Tahiti, but no distance can measure the difference between the happiness of Tahiti, the sparkling brilliant loveliness of that flower-decked island, and the stern forbidding aspect of the Marquesas lifting from the sea as we neared them. Gone were the laughing vales, the pale green hills, the luring feminine guise of nature, the soft-lapping waves upon a peaceful shining shore. The spirit that rides the thunder had claimed these bleak and desolate islands for his own.

That gaunt, dark shore itself recalls that the history of the Marquesas is written in blood, a black blot on the white race. It is a history of evil wrought by civilization, of curses heaped on a strange simple people by men who sought to exploit them or to mold them to another pattern, who destroyed their customs and their happiness and left them to die apathetic, wretched, hardly knowing their own miserable plight.

The French have had their flag over the Marquesas since 1842. In [illegible] Magellan must have passed between the Marquesas and Paumotas, but he does not mention them. Seventy three years later a Spanish flotilla sent from Callao by Don Garcia Hurtado de Mendoza, viceroy of Peru, found the island of Fatu-hiva, and its commander, Mendana, named the group for the viceroy's lady, Las Islas Marquesas de Mendoza.

One hundred and eighty years passed and Captain Cook again discovered the islands and a Frenchman, Etienne Marchand, discovered the northern group. The fires of liberty were blazing high in his home land and Marchand named his group the Isles of the Revolution in celebration of the victories of the French people. A year earlier an American, Ingraham, had sighted this same group and given it the name of his own beloved hero, Washington.

Had not Captain Porter failed to establish American rule in 1814 in the island of Nuka-hiva, which he called Madison, the Marquesas might have been American. Porter's name, like that of Mendana, is linked with deeds of cruelty. The Spaniard was without pity; the American may plead that his killings were reprisals or measures of safety for himself. Murder of Polynesians was little thought of. Schooners trained their guns on islands for pleasure or practice and destroyed villages with all their inhabitants.

The French made the islands their political possessions with little difficulty. The Marquesans had no king or single chief. There were many tribes and clans and it was easy to persuade or compel petty chiefs to sign declarations and treaties. But it was not easy to kill the independence of the people and France virtually abandoned and retook the islands several times, her rule fluctuating with political conditions at home.

There were wars, horrible bloody scenes when the clansmen slew the whites and ate them, and the bones of many a gallant French officer and sailor have moldered where they were heaped after the orgy following victory. But as always the white slew his hundreds to the natives' one and in time drove the devil of liberty and defense of native land from the heart of the Marquesan.

Before the French achieved this, however, the white had sowed a crop of deadly evils among the Marquesans that cut them down faster than war and left them desolate, dying, passing to extinction.

As I looked from the deck of the [illegible] the forbiddingness of the scene, Fatu hiva [illegible] behind and Hiva oa, our destination, was before us, bleak and threatening. To my eyes it appeared as it had been in the eyes of the gentler Polynesians of old time, the abode of demons and of a race of terrible warriors. Hence descended the Marquesans, vikings of the Pacific, in giant canoes, and [illegible] the fighting men of the [illegible], the Raiateans and the [illegible], slaughtering their hundreds and carrying away scores to feast upon in the High Places.

May's mother and this mysterious man recognized each other and who should this man be but May's father! He told the story to his wife. He had a very rich gold mine and was becoming more rich every day. Some thieves knew how rich he was so they took him away, but they were caught and Mr. Brann was free. He worked for a long time in his gold mine but soon sold it. He happened to be going to New York and he saw May and thought she wouldn't be safe alone and when she told him about her family he thought he was acquainted some way. May's mother was very happy when she heard the story and that her husband had come back to her.

Now as May's father was rich they had a very happy Christmas and lived very happy afterwards.

A CHRISTMAS POEM.

Oh! What a joyous time it is,
This wintry snowy month,
This month when Santa Claus comes round,
With packs of toys
For one and all,
With dolls, balls,
Games and such.
On Christmas morn
When we awake,
We see a wondrous sight—
A Christmas tree!
Aglow with candles burning bright.

And while we are so happy,
And are having such a good time,
Just think of the poor, and the ones
Who need help,
And try to be good and kind.

SANTA'S SURPRICE.

"My goodness, dearie me," said Santa,
"Really, I'm surprised,
So many children have been good
this year,
I can't believe my eyes."

"Why, every house I peek into, I find a good child there.
Now Ted, the boy who last year said he didn't care.
Has gone to work so earnestly
I really think within a week,
The best boy in the class he'll be!

"Then there is Nan,
Who never helped her mother
with the work,
She's now improved quite splendidly,
She's helping all she can!
Well, I suppose they realize,
That doing good does pay,
So see if I don't well reward them
all on Christmas Day."

Here comes one of the dandiest stories! Jeannette submitted it for the contest, but did not tell Aunt Elsie whether it was original or not. For that reason it was not given a prize at first. But now Jeannette says she wrote it all herself, and you may be sure a prize went somersaulting through the mails.

FOUR CORNER'S BEST CHRISTMAS.

The people of Four Corners opened their eyes wide when one morning a huge automobile came along the one street of their village. Old Samuel, the keeper of the Four Corner's grocery, dropped his pipe from his mouth and ejaculated in surprise:

"Wall, I swan!"

Mrs. Anderson's children Hilda and Jan, ran and hid beneath her voluminous skirts.

"Oh, ma," wailed Hilda. "Dey iss bane going to eat us."

Their mother did not answer, for she continued staring at the huge vehicle. She knew at once that the man inside the machine had built on Chestnut Hill the large white "mansion." The man wore a heavy overcoat with a fur collar which "must 'er been six inches thick" as Tillie Bolton told her mother that night. He wore a glass in one eye which was "'ristocrat" according to Jim Davis' story.

The people stood staring at the machine till the last speck of black could hardly be seen as it vanished going to the other side of the hill. The people agreed with what "Old Man Whiskers" had to say:

"This 'ristocrat feller will think that he can rule us but we ain't going to let him do it. He'll think that he owns the town." And Old Man Whiskers took out a piece of tobacco to chew, rolling his eyes to impress the people. But as night was fast coming on, the people who were about a hundred in number hurried to their homes.

That night the rich man was long discussed over the supper tables and if he had known we are sure that he would have laughed heartily.

Mr. Fentwood was not an earl nor a lord as some of the people thought. He was only a plain person as you or I. His wife's health was very poor so he had come to live in the country. He had known from the expression on the people's faces that they were very much surprised to see an automobile.

The next morning Mr. Fentwood decided to go to town. He surprised old Samuel by stepping into his small store and asking for a box of Flora de Italy cigars.

"Ain't got none," said Samuel in his most polite manner, "but I hev some King George cigars."

Mr. Fentwood said he would take a box of them and went out of the store laughing, thinking what a funny fellow old Samuel was.

The children of Four Corners were saying, "Christmas will soon be here." These children did not have a Christmas like we do. They did not have very many ornaments on their trees or dolls and boats. They were content with what they had and got more joy out of some of their crude toys and little trinkets than some of us do.

Mr. Fentwood had a plan of which we will be so curious as to see what it was. He wanted the people, and especially the children to like him, so he and his wife decided to give the children and the people a Christmas party. His wife who liked to sew, was busy making dresses for the dolls and also cute little capes and bags.

One morning the people of Four Corners were surprised to be asked by Mr. Fentwood's chauffeur to the party which Mr. Fentwood had planned. Of course they all accepted and for the few days before Christmas the women and girls were talking about the dresses they were going to wear.

At last the great day came. Promptly at 6.30 everybody arrived and they were greeted by Mr. Fentwood and his wife. The children enjoyed themselves by playing games they had never played before and the older people were induced to do some old folk dances.

At 8:30 refreshments of ice cream and many cakes were served. After this the people were ushered into another room and lo and behold, in the center of the room stood a large Christmas tree! Everybody received presents and had a very happy time.

Mr. Fentwood has never been called on "'ristocrat" any more and everybody agreed that it was the Four Corners' best Christmas.

A DAY IN BED.

It had been the twins' eighth birthday and Daddy had had a splendid swing put up in the garden. It was waiting for them when they came home from school that morning and they had played in it all afternoon and evening.

The next morning they awoke ever so early.

"Joe," whispered Joyce, "haven't you got a tiny wee little bit of a sore throat? If we had Mummy would keep us at home, and it's sure to be a hot day so we would play in the garden."

"My," whispered Joe, "you are clever Joyce."

Then he sat up in bed and swallowed hard two or three times.

"Yes," he said slowly, "I do believe it is a bit sore. Is yours?"

Joyce swallowed hard too, and nodded her head. Very soon nurse got up.

"Nannie," said Joyce, in a very small voice, "my throat seems a bit sore when I swallow."

"Mine seems a bit sore, too," said Joe, feeling under his pillow for his handkerchief, and blowing his nose hard.

"Oh, well," said nurse, "bed's the best place if you are starting a cold."

CHAP. 2.

She went away, and Joe and Joyce sat up and giggled.

"It's worked beautifully," said Joyce.

Very soon mother came in on her way down to breakfast.

"Poor little chicks," she said, "are the throats very bad?" and she kissed them and put her nice cold hands on their foreheads, and Joe and Joyce felt just a wee bit ashamed of themselves.

After awhile nurse came up with two bowls of bread and milk.

"This will be easy for you to swallow," she said, and she did not seem to notice the look of disgust in Joe's face, nor the tears in Joyce's eyes. BREAD AND MILK!

"There now," said nurse, when she had propped them up comfortable. "I'm going to have my breakfast and then I'll come up and wash you and give you some toys and books."

"Do you know," said Joe very slowly, "I don't believe nurse is going to let us up. She said she would give us something to play with and suppose she keeps us in bed all day!"

When nurse came up again she seemed quite worried that Joyce had not eaten her bread and milk.

"You're sure your head doesn't ache?" she asked. "Perhaps we'd better have the doctor after all."

"Oh no," said Joyce eagerly, "don't have the doctor, Nannie. My throat seems better now. It does really."

They expected nurse to say they could get up then and go into the garden, but instead of that she looked awfully grave.

"It looks horribly like measles," she said. "I've nursed children with measles before and I remember they saying the very same thing. Their throats seemed to get better and then suddenly got worse again. The only thing to do is to keep you warm in bed till the spots come out. I'll just take your temperatures."

Mother came in again just as the temperatures were being taken. Nurse took the thermometer out of Joe's mouth, looked at it, and handed it to her.

"Ninety-eight!" cried Nurse.

"Point four!" said nurse, and she shook the thermometer down and put it under Joyce's tongue.

"Ninety-eight!" cried mother.

"Point four," Nurse cried again, when she had taken it out and looked at it.

CHAP. 3.

"We'd better just keep them quite quiet," said mother. "I'll come and sit here directly and perhaps they'll get a little sleep."

"Oh, oh!" cried Joyce when mother and nurse left them alone for a moment. "Why ever did we do it? Pretending to have sore throats could not have made us have temperatures. My tummy feels quite flat with hungeriness."

"And I ache with lying still," groaned Joe, "and there's the swing waiting to be swinged on!"

Ten o'clock struck; half-past ten; eleven o'clock—and the birds were singing in the garden and the swing was waiting to be used!

"Mummy," said Joyce, desperately, "can I have a drink, please?"

"Yes, of course, darling," said mother. "Would you like your bread and milk now? Nurse will heat it up in a minute."

"Yes, please," answered Joyce weakly, and she ate it all up and nearly scraped a hole in the basin.

After dinner they were allowed to sit up in bed with books to look at but still the hours seemed to crawl past and when at last bed time came the twins began to wonder if they really would have spots the next day.

The next morning Nurse got up and looked at their chests.

"No spots!" she said, "and you both feel so cool so it can't be measles. Would you rather get up and go to school or would you like another nice quiet day in bed?"

"Up and school for me!" cried Joe, springing out of bed and beginning to dress like mad.

"And for me," said Joyce, "no more nice, quite, horrid days in bed for us, thank you."

Though the twins never pretended sore throats again they often wondered how pretending could have given them those dreadful temperatures.

Well, I'll let you into the secret. Nurse was awake that morning and heard what they whispered because they did not whisper very softly, and she told Daddy and Mother and ninety-eight point four sounds very dreadful when you hear it said the way mother and nurse said it, if you don't happen to know that it is just the right temperature for children when they are feeling very fit and well.

THE FOOLISH GOBBLER

Proud Mr. Turkey Gobbler
Strutted up and down the yard.
He said, "A graceful carriage
For me is nothing hard;
But all these low-bred fowls
With their awkward, slouchy walk,
And heads held down upon their breasts
Have got no room to talk!

"For all the folks, when they come out
The farmyard flock to view.
They say, 'That turkey gobbler
Is one among a few.'
It makes me blush to hear such praise,
But I suppose it's right.
For a head held high and a tall spread out
Is lost to no one's sight!"

But on the morn before Thanksgiving
Poor Mr. Gobbler's head
Lay on the ground beside the axe,
And the vain fowl was dead.
And all the hens stood round and sighed
And said, "We're glad that we
Are just plain low-bred laying hens,
That we may safe still be."

"Here now, I got it first." "You leave it alone," said Tom, "I won't, I got it first," said his sister, "I want to read Aunt Elsie's page." "Well, so do I," said Tom. Just then, their mother came in and they reported it to her. "I'll tell you," she said; "let Tom have the Pirate's Den and Susie have Witches Cave." "All right, mother," they both said. "Oh, goodie, I am going to write a Christmas story to win this darling prize from Aunt Elsie." "And so am I," said Tom; "it's a peach of a prize for the boys." So they both got down to write and then sent their letters off.

On Christmas morning they woke and down at the foot of their stockings were their prizes.

MARY IN FAIRYLAND.

One hot day in Arizona there was a little girl named Mary. She was playing in her yard with her doll and buggy. Soon a cloud rolled by and Mary saw a beautiful fairy dressed all in white. The fairy lifted her up and up until she found herself in Fairyland.

There she saw beautiful roses of many colors, and squirrels storing their nuts for winter. She stayed all day with the fairies.

Soon it began to grow dark and one fairy said:

"I must take you home for it is growing dark." Mary found herself in her own yard then. Soon she heard her mother calling her. She realized she had fallen asleep in the hammock.

Mary told her mother about it, she ate her supper and went to bed for she was awful tired. And her visit to Fairyland was only a dream.

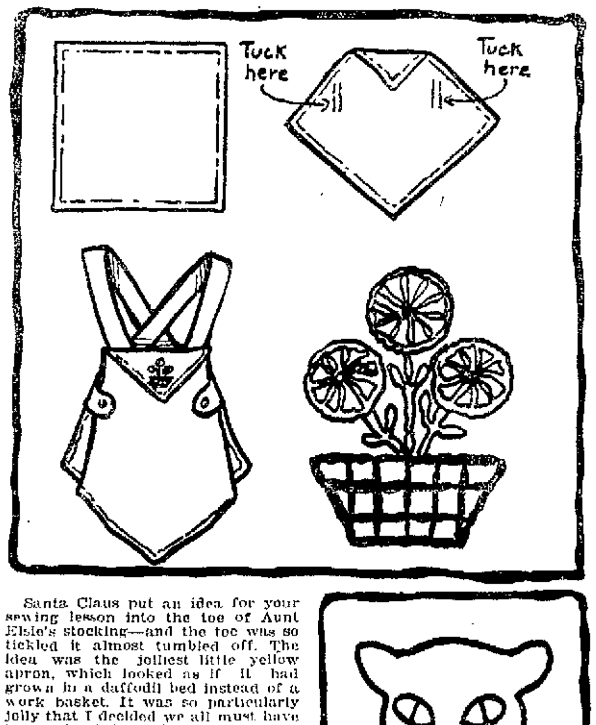
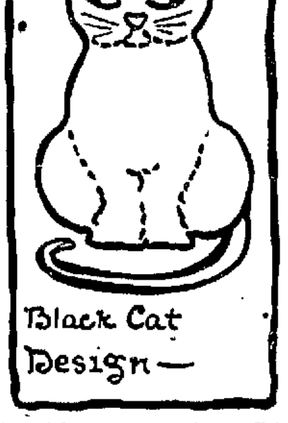
SEWING LESSON





Santa Claus put an idea for your sewing lesson into the toe of Aunt Elsie's stocking—and the toe was so tickled it almost tumbled off. The idea was the jolliest little yellow apron, which looked as if it had grown in a daffodil bed instead of a work basket. It was so particularly jolly that I decided we all must have 'em and call 'em witch aprons. So here we come.

First you'll need a square of chambray—27 in. square. This will be large enough for even the biggest witches or mother. If it is for tiny witches, of dolly, you'll want to make it much smaller. Bind the square neatly around the edges with white muslin binding—which you may buy by the piece or make for yourself.

Next cut two strips of the chambray about 2½ in. wide and 34 in. long. You may need to piece the goods neatly to make them long enough. Bind these straps along the sides and one end with the white muslin.

Now turn over one corner of the square and add a little decoration. The corner on my apron was turned down 8 in. from the corner. I have drawn the decoration which was on mine. It was put on very simply in outline and buttonhole stitch which mother can easily show you. The flowers were in old rose, the leaves in green and the basket in black. I have also given you the pattern for a sassy little black cat which you may cut out of some washable black material and apply with bright green yarn—making it a very witchy apron indeed. Give him green eyes. In case you do not wish to use the black cat for an apron decoration he'd make a splendid pen wiper.

After you've finished your decoration attach the strips in back of the turned down corner, as shown. Take a wee tuck in each side of the apron, as the drawing shows, and put on a snap faster, to which snaps on the ends of the straps connect. The straps go over the shoulders, cross, come under the arms, snap—and there you are—ready to capture the bravest Pirate that ever poked his nose into a candy kettle.

NEATNESS.

A boy in an office needed a clerk, so he advertised for one. Quite a few came.

When the door was opened all rushed in except one, who stayed behind and closed the door, picked up the book off the floor, which the others had stepped over, and he took his cap off and stood at the end of the line.

"You are just the man I want," said the boss, "for if everyone would be a little neater the world would be much happier."

So the man got the job, which taught the other men to use their eyes more than their mouths.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF VIOLA VIOLET.

I really haven't much to tell you for a real story, but a certain little girl has been begging me to send my story to you, so here it is.

I have lived a very simple life with my mother, brothers and sisters. We had always lived in a shady, secluded spot where we had our own patch. No one ever bothered us until one day a little girl discovered us. That day was a RED letter day to most of us.

From that day on we lived on "the fat of the land." Every day she carefully watered us and "pruned" us as carefully as ever a gardener pruned his trees. Well, one day she came running up, and what do you think she did? She picked some of my brothers and sisters and even ME! Then she took us to her home and twined some pretty smilax around us for company. We soon learned tht her father was going to San Francisco. Soon she brought us to him and put is in his buttonhole. He seemed to like us very much.

Before long he was getting off the train in the city. That evening when he came to his apartments, he discovered that we were probably tired. He put us in a glass of water. There we thrived for a few days, and then started to die. Then he took a big dictionary and put us in. I soon fell asleep.

When I awakened I found myself in the hands of my little mistress. Then she told me about how we had been pressed and then sent up to her by mail.

Tht certain little girl I told you about seems to think that this is a remarkable story and it may be, but to me it is just a story of my life, and one of its pleasant experiences.

Lady Rose and little May were on their trip for the summer. They were sitting on the deck of the big ship, "Virginia," when the captain came and told every one to go to their rooms for a big storm was coming.

May was a brave girl and she told her mother to be brave, and have courage. The storm got worse. The ship rocked back and forth and finally a big jerk and the people were thrown over into the ocean and part of the ship was under water.

Now all this time May was on deck and just before the ship went over she jumped into the water, for she was a great swimmer and a great sportswoman.

Finally she made her way to shore and the ship could be seen no more. There she was in a forest, nothing but the trees to protect her.

It happened when May was a baby she was saved, out in some wilderness by a boy her age who shot a bear that was to attack her. She never forgot that day nor the young man who looked at her so kindly.

Night was coming on. Where could she go, what coul., she do?

May as I told you was a brave girl, and decided to sleep in a tree. This she did for two nights, with only her clothes which she had dried, to keep her warm.

Two days without food and no way of getting it! It was about midday of the third day when she thought she heard some shots. The fust thing she thought was her home, and looking for a ship, she saw none. After lookin~ for a ship for about fifteen minutes she thought she heard footsteps and turning around saw a young man in a hunting suit.

The man, too, was surprised, and said, "Who are you?"

Then May, surprised, answered, "I swam ashore from the ship lost in the storm. I am May Rose. What is your name?"

Then he answered, "I am John Long."

Then he told her of saving a young girl in the very same woods about five years ago.

She came toward him and before he knew it she had fallen in his arms and he heard her whispering, "Oh, I love you, I love you."

SPECIAL SNORTU

SPECIAL TO AUNT ELSIE KIDDIES!

A beautiful free picture of Mary Pickford, America's little sweetheart, goes to every boy and girl reader of the Aunt Elsie Kiddie Page, who joins the Aunt Elsie Club during the month of January.

Only one picture will be allowed each kiddie who becomes a club member. All you have to do is to write a letter to Aunt Elsie asking how to join the Aunt Elsie Club, as explained below, and a letter of instruction will be immediately sent back to you explaining both how to join the club and how to secure one of these beautiful pictures of Mary Pickford.

OLD MEMBERS, ATTENTION

Old members of the club can also secure one of these pictures of Mary Pickford by writing a letter to Aunt Elsie. Simply ask her how you can secure a Mary Pickford picture free, and be sure to say that you are already a member of the Aunt Elsie Club and sign your name and address to the letter.

If you want Aunt Elsie to answer your letter by mail be sure and enclose a 2-cent stamp when you write.

Don't ask to have your letter put in "next Sunday," kiddies, because it's impossible for Aunt Elsie to do that. Your section is always made ready for the presses two weeks in advance and you must wait your turn.

Any kiddies who would like to write to another kiddie, boy or girl, through the "Your Letter" section, may do so by beginning the letter with the name of the chum they wish to write to instead of with Aunt Elsie's name. It will then be published in the regular way and the other kiddie may answer in the same way. But Aunt Elsie cannot forward personal letters to anyone.

Remember always, little pals, that Aunt Elsie isn't just a newspaper friend—but a really, truly chum, whom you can turn to with any trouble at any time. You may write to her about anything and she will answer you—and your letter will not appear if you do not wish it to.

If you want to write to Aunt Elsie this is her address—

S O S Pals—Both Pirates and Witches—ATTENTION! Here's a Pal whom we helped out before but who needs it again. He needs your letters LIKE SIXTY and every time you help him you pass a whole bunch of joy around to some other pals too. Read his letter—and after you've read it won't you please look through your old books and see if you haven't an adventure story or a boy scout book of some sort which would happify him up a bit? He's just the dandiest sort of a Pal and we all want to give him a boost. Has anyone any stamps to send him?

Dear Aunt Elsie—

I was so glad to hear from you—but what's the matter with the other Pals? I wrote all the letters I could but I don't hear from them. I guess they are on the high seas. I was so glad when I heard from them before. Those stamps you sent me were well. I didn't have any of them. I am making a collection of stamps. Can anyone help me? It's so lonesome here—I have to do something. I read that Bill Hart book—about five times. It was so good and the boys are still passing it around reading it. My leg is getting along but I think I have to have another operation. Will you write just as soon as you can because I'm so glad to hear from the outside.

The Mystery of the Missing Bonds.

In West Virginia there lived a family which was exceedingly wealthy. They were of a noble English family by the name of Wellington.

After the parents of a young man named Roy, heir to the Wellington estate, had died he was the only one left of the noble family. He was twenty-six years of age, medium height, black hair and gray eyes.

It was one day he was walking over the old Wellington mansion grounds that he became aware of someone following him. Twice he looked back but could see no one save the gardener on the other side of the garden. He entered the house and went to see if the bonds his father left him were safe.

He went to his room because that was where the safe was. He unlocked the door because he always locked it when he left his room. He went immediately to the safe set in the wall and shut from view by a panel. He opened it and the sight that met his eyes sickened him — THE BONDS WERE GONE!

He kept very quiet about it, and decided to investigate. He wondered who could have gotten in his room to get them. He made an investigation of the walls and found them HOLLOW.

One stormy night he sat up in his room. The lights were out but occasionally the room was lit up by a flash of lightning. All of a sudden the strangest thing happened. One of the walls parted and out stepped a man. He touched the combination wheel of the safe and fell over dead!

Outside waited Fu Chow's assistant. Waiting so long he went up the secret stairway to the open walls which were opened by pressing a button and came in. Roy captured the second Chinaman and made him tell where the bonds were. He told Roy that if he wanted them he would have to go to the old mill down by the river, knock three times on the door and enter.

What killed Fu Chow was a strong current of electricity, a trick devised by Roy.

Roy went to the old mill, knocked three times and entered. He entered into a beautifully furnished room full of Chinese. The Chinese, not knowing it was him, thinking it was Fu Chow, paid no attention to him. Suddenly Roy drew his automatic and cried

HANDS UP!

The Chinese were so surprised that they didn't know what to do. Roy made one of them give him the bonds. After he received them he had all the Chinamen arrested and married a beautiful American girl held captive there. They lived many pleasant years afterward.

A Pirate Story.

A long, long time ago there was an island named Golden Island. There were trees and rocks and among them was buried a treasure. In the treasure was money.

There were some Pirates going after it and there were some people going after the Pirates. They were to go after it, but they fought about it.

There was a little boy named Jimmy. Jimmy was in a barrel and a Pirate stuck a knife in it to get an apple. Jimmy nearly got stuck, but Jimmy stuck an apple on it!

Soon they [illegible] instead of going to the island they went to the Pirate Ship. When they got there they fought the Pirates. Some were killed and some weren't killed. Jimmy went to the island and fell in the treasure, and got a bunch of money.

And here comes another good old Pirate story—

Jack Is a Hero.

Jack was a little boy that lived in a steamboat and he knew everything about the old vessel. One day he saw a small craft coming toward the vessel.

So Jack waited its approach, and it grew nearer. He began to think of what his father, Captain Jack, as he was called, had told him of the terrible pirates of the sea, and so he said to himself

"I will be a hero!"

Jack had always wanted to be a hero.

So he thought this was his chance. It was about twelve p. m. when the craft had got close to the ship and all the crew had gone to the galley for lunch, but Jack. He stayed on deck.

Of course Jack's father had a gun, so Jack went to the cabin where the gun and ammunition were kept. So Jack got the gun and some shells and went on deck. By this time the pirates had not got quite there but he saw them coming not over a quarter of a mile away. At first he thought he would do it but a very bright thought came into his head and he said

I will hide where they come on board and when they get on I will say "Hands Up!" and if they will try to get away I will shoot them.

So in about three minutes the vessel had come alongside the one that Jack was on and the men began to get aboard, and Jack crept into a box and he waited and in a moment he saw them coming and he jumped out and said

HANDS UP! and the pirates looked around and saw Jack with the gun, and they at once put their hands up. So Jack marched them up on deck and blew a whistle which made all the crew come flying out in all directions and when he got the pirates all tied up the crew came and killed them and tugged the pirates' ship to shore and searched the ship and found $66,000 in gold of stolen money. So this was Jack was made a hero. Jack got all the money and the ship that belonged to the pirates.

So Jack got all the candy and ice cream and chocolate bars he wanted and him and his father lived on dry land which was Denver, Colorado and are living high. Many other boys and girls can get money for bravery too if they want to try it. I know I can.

Here's another new laddie with a mighty thrilling mystery story.

In the United States in a forest were some bandits. Everybody who went through the forest was attacked or killed. In the country near there were three boys. Their names were Joe, Bob and Bill.

They disguised themselves as bandits and went to the bandit camp.

The bandits said, Who are youse guys?

The boys said they were caught by cops a long time ago and the bandits told them what they were going to do that night in the town not far away. They said they were going to rob the bank.

Bob, Bill and Joe said they would be watching so that there would be no cops in sight. Then they went to town to really get some cops. They told the policemen to stay behind the entrance door.

The bandits came and the boys in front of the bank. The bandits went in but the boys stayed where they were. The bandits were caught and put in jail.

The boys got a reward of a thousand dollars each. They bought an aeroplane and took pictures up in the air. They got money for the pictures too.

One summer day a tramp was walking by a farm and he saw a sign which read

A Man Wanted.

He went in and asked for the job but the man was mean and said

'GO!'

The tramp went out to the road and found $100. He took it to the police. After a week no one claimed it so they gave it back to him.

The man who threw him out said Buy some land and start a farm.

The tramp said Alright.

The man said I will sell you some land for $50. That will be an acre.

The tramp bought it. The ground was only some dry land. He dug a well for water. One day while he was digging he struck oil.

Oil was on every lip in that city. He is now the richest man in that city.

Ding dong, ding dong, ding dong
They tell us all to be happy
Open our doors and let me come in
Do you know what I'm bringing?
A whole long year of days that are coming
After me one by one
Perhaps you can tell how many there are
Each day will bring something new
To each little boy and girl [illegible]

One day while he was playing on [illegible] he saw a ship about a mile out in the sea waving flags of white. Near it he saw another ship and smoke was coming out of the cannons.

So Jack ran for his father's boat. Jack's father was sick and on his deathbed. It was a ship with gold on it and the other was a Pirate ship.

Jack went in his motorboat and got the police. They captured the Pirate ship and Jack got a reward of $500 and also married a pretty girl on the gold boat.

AUNT ELSIE'S LETTER TO YOU.

PIRATES AHOY!

Every time I've ever written a letter these Witches have grabbed it and stuck it over on their page. Just as if Aunt Elsie only belonged to Witches! But this time we fooled 'em for I gave the High Sign of the Pirate Club to the ole Printing Press and here we are with cutlasses stuck behind our ears and a black patch over our eyes. And now listen.

I'm writing this letter because the Pirate Feeling is creeping into my heart. Every year when the grass begins to sprout under foot and the sun gets warm on the back of my neck I fairly BOIL ALL OVER WITH PIRATE FEELINGS. I want to kick the lil' ole typewriter into the coal skuttle and take a flying jump from the top of The TRIBUNE clock and land in the middle of the ROARING WILDERNESS with a dirk in my hand and blood in my eye and nothing to do but play hookey.

I'm telling you about it Pal BECAUSE I KNOW YOU FEEL THAT WAY TOO. Most grown folks don't understand that Boy Pals feel that way—and if they do understand they don't have any sympathy with it. They think it's BAD. I don't think it's bad—I think it's just a bully feeling and IF there weren't other folks to take care of we'd all loot the pantry and set off tomorrow [illegible] for Buried Treasure, wouldn't we?

If—IF—That 'if' is what stands in our way. IF we didn't have to go to school—IF we didn't have to work after school in the corner grocery—IF mother didn't want the wood brought in—If dad hadn't said to hoe the weeds—IF's a miserable old word, isn't it? But there it is and we'll have to make the best of it FOR THE SAKE OF THE REST OF THE GANG.

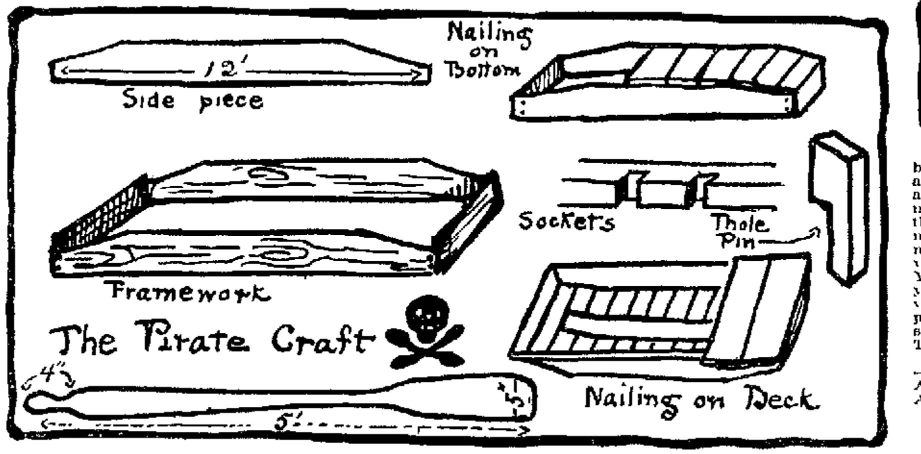
There's the whole secret of brave living for little pals or big ones—the whole secret of REAL adventuring—TO CARRY ON FOR THE REST OF THE GANG.

We can't jump off the top of The TRIBUNE Clock into the middle of the wilderness, you and I, because there's someone else that needs us. We'd love to, wouldn't we? And when the spring's coming on we just HATE AND ABOMINATE school and work and errands and being good, don't we? I do—and I know you do too. I know just how you long to play hookey and play bandit and raise Cain—and perhaps tell a few things that aren't exactly true and take a few things that aren't exactly yours and—well you know. I DO KNOW MY PALS!

And because I know how hard it is for Boy Pirates and Aunt Elsie Pirates to be good with spring coming on I'm writing this especially for you. Don't try to forget your adventure love—but do try to remember the rest of the gang. Let's not be slackers—although we want to be. Let's carry on at school without grumbling. Let's carry on at home without whining—let's be REGULAR FELLOWS! What say you Kiddies?

I'LL TELL THE WORLD YOU WILL!

Your own old Pirate Aunt
AUNT ELSIE.



PIRATE PUNCHES

Now that Christmas is over you're hopping ahead in your mind to the next big jollification time—VACATION! Golly! don't you wish it would hurry though! And won't it be larks to be out in the hills again, making caves and secret camps or down by the creek playing Pirate. My pals are particularly lucky—they don't have to go miles off to find adventure for the whole ocean world is whooping in to their toes. So while you're waiting for school to forget itself suppose you get ready for the Big Days by building a PIRATE CRAFT in the back shed. Some folks might call her a scow—but you and I know she's a low rakish craft wot flies the Jolly Roger. So come on—get out the oil pail o' nails and let's get busy. And here are the honest to goodness measurements and directions how to build her—all taken from a dandy book—The Scientific American Boy.

First get two ¾ in. pine boards 12 in. wide and 12 ft. long. These are to be used as side pieces of the boat and to be tapered off at the end to a width of 3½ in. This is done by making a straight cut from the end to a point three feet back along the board and then rounding off the end with a draw knife—as the drawing shows. Be sure and cut the two boards exactly the same size. For the end pieces take two strips 4 in. wide and 2 ft. 10½ in. long of inch thick board. For the bottom use ¾ in. boards cut into strips 3 ft. long and 8 in. wide.

Before nailing on the boards saturate strips of flannel with paint and lay them between the seams as you nail in order to make the boat perfectly water tight. Nail side and end boards together first with flannel in between seams, the side boards overlapping the end boards.

After planing down the end boards until their edges are flush with the edges of the side pieces nail the bottom pieces on, using the flannel as directed.

To brace the bottom a ¾ in. board should be placed along the center inside the boat and bent down against the floor to which it is nailed with wire nails. Drive the nails into the board from the outer side of the boat and clinch them inside.

Now nail two strips 2 in. wide and 1 in. thick along the upper edges of the side boards. Cut two notches in the inner side of each strip before it is nailed on. The notches should be ½ in. deep, 1½ in. wide, 3 in. apart and about 4 ft. from the stern end. When the strips are nailed in place these notches form sockets to receive the rowlocks.

A strip is also nailed across the stern of the boat and formed with two central notches to receive the rowlocks for a steering oar. This strip should be 1 in. wide and should project 1 in. above the end board so as to lie flush with the deck boards which are to be applied later.

Now cut six thole pins from an oak board—each one being ¾ in. thick, 11½ in. long and 2 in. wide. Reduce the lower end of each pin to a width of 1½ in. for the length of 2 in. The thole pins should then fit snugly into the notches.

Two cleats nailed to the side boards inside 7 in. below the upper edge serve to support a seat board 1 in. thick and 2 ft. 10½ in. long. The aft end of the seat should be about 10 in. forward of the rowlocks. Complete the boat by nailing on a couple of deck boards at each end.

The oars should be made of 2 in. pine boards 7 feet long and 5 in. wide. It's best to have them blocked out at some wood yards if you can and then shaped up at home. But with patience you can make them all. [illegible] Pirates didn't have any wood yards, you know. They should be 1½ in. at the handle and 2 in. immediately below, tapering down to a diameter of 1½ in. at the top of the blade. [illegible] planing should be [illegible] wide and planed down to a thickness of ¾ in. along the edge.

AMERICAN BOYS' HAND-BOOK OF CAMP-LORE AND WOODCRAFT

By Dan Beard.

These rainy winter days are just the time to study up for next summer's camping trip and Dan Beard, the founder of the First Boy Scouts' Society and the author of many books of woodcraft for boys has written us a new one this year THE AMERICAN BOYS' HANDY BOOK OF CAMP-LORE AND WOODCRAFT.

A real camping trip—and I mean a REAL one—not the kind that you used to take when you were wearing windsor ties and a dutch cut and mother and grandma and all the family hired a tent and put up a stove in front and mother did all the work—but a REAL one where you where you have to depend on yourself needs a lot of preparation.

Dan Beard says: Many people are so accustomed to have other people wait upon them that they are absolutely funny when you meet them in the woods when their canoe runs its prow up upon the sandy beach and there is a portage to make. Such people stand helplessly around waiting for some red capped porter to come and take their baggage but the only red caps in the woods are the red headed woodpeckers and they will see you in Germany before they will help tote your duffel across the portage.

When one gets into the real woods one soon discovers that there are no drug stores around the corner, the doctor is a long way off, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, trolley cars, telephone and taxi cabs are not within touch, sight or hearing; then a fellow begins to realize that it is up to himself to tote his own luggage, to build his own fires, to make his own shelters and even to help put up the other fellows' tents or to cook the meals. Yes, and to wash the dishes too.

There are fifteen chapters covering the subjects of fire making by friction and by percussion, how to build fire, how to build a good cooking fire, the camp kitchens, camp food, packing horses, the use of dogs, preparing for camping trip, saddles, choosing a camp site, axe and saw, council grounds and fires, and the ritual of the council fire. ALL of the chapters are illustrated by diagrams and pictures by the author and Boy Scouts who already are trained in woodcraft will be especially interested in the new details and the many little short cuts gleaned from the author's years of experience in the woods.

At the very end of the book is Dan Beard's message to boys and men. It is too long to print here but here is some of it—and it gives us all something to thing about, doesn't it?

Of course the boy readers of this book are not going to be top sawyers or make use of a sawpit; that is a real man's work, a big He man's work, but the boys of today should know all these things; it is part of history and they can better understand the history of our own country when they know how laboriously, cheerily and cheerfully their ancestors worked to build their own homesteads and in the building of their own homesteads they unconsciously built that character of which their descendants are so proud, also they built up a physique that was healthy, and a sturdy body for which their descendants are particularly thankful, because if your parents, your grandparents and your greatgrandparents were all healthy, wholesome people you started your life as a healthy, wholesome child.

There is nothing in life that is not dangerous, and the greatest danger of all is not firearms, is not edged tools, is not wild beasts, is not tornadoes or earthquakes, avalanches or floods, but it is LUXURY. It is ice cream, soda water, candy, servants and automobiles; it is everything which tends to make a boy dependent upon others and soft in mind and muscle and to make him a sissy. But hardship and doing hard work like chopping trees and sawing logs, makes a rugged body, a clean healthy mind and gives long life. So boys, don't be afraid to build your own little shack, shanty or shelter, to chop the kindling wood for your mother, to split up logs for the fun of doing it or just to show that you know how. Don't be afraid to be a real pioneer so that you may grow up to be a real Abe Lincoln.

erwood is the name we gave to a little ntry place belonging to a member of my ly located in Mendocino county twenty or so northwesterly from Cloverdale in world-famed redwood belt of California location is made more attractive by son of its situation on the banks of that tiful stream known to trout fishermen ughout the country as the Rancheria The erty embraces a broad but short canyon ing into the narrow valley or canyon of Rancheria With its gentle sloping sides suggestive of a grand and huge amphi ter covering between eight and ten acres area. The greater part of the floor is under vation and dotted with trees that in their sons supply us with the most perfect and ious fruits On three sides—south west north—the towering wall of the redwood fir forest forms the margin of our nook not only lends a feature of grandeur to site but by its protecting height shelters rom the severities of strong winds Our hitheater with its open side to the east s us a vista up the main canyon for a dis of a mile or two until obstructed by the ly-wooded mountain range whose steep form the east side of the canyon of the heria The dwelling we occupy upon our sional visits to Deerwood is situated on elevation of the back part of the amphi ter affording us an advantageous point which to enjoy this beautiful landscape racing numerous representatives of the s famed in the flora of California — the white black and the evergreen the ely laurel the handsome madrone maple and alders The view is varied by open ons of green carpeted spots enlivened at es by the presence of cattle or sheep and unfrequently by deer Besides there is a npse of the running waters of the Ranch its gravely bed and willow lined banks add the charm of the picture hen I contemplate the beauty and varied ntity of wild flowers and ferns to be found together with the great number of birds uding the sweetest songsters whose de tful music fills the air from the first break ay to twilight and numerous other forms life whose habits and characters make a that widens our vision of things and s the doors to some of the wonders of re I feel as if this was one of the spots re the Almighty ruler of the universe had sen for an earthly temple wherein there gathered in the springtime of the year npies of His most beauteous work for the ple who find pleasure in association with n, as well as for the education of students ature who would know more of His law knowledge of which gives a fuller insight the purpose and utility of all organic life of those relations that make for the better nt and greater comfort of all mankind was in this environment that I passed weeks and more of the latter part of April the first of May and I now propose to ate some of the things that came under my rvation that interested me and may pos y be a source of interest to others

wenty-six Species of Birds Noted

n our amphitheater were more birds than ld be found in any neighboring sections the course of two or three days I noted nty six different species The greater part this number were observed from my com able seat on the porch of our dwelling doubt I could have increased the list if I given the time for search among the s and undergrowth of the grounds for the re shy kinds The popularity of the place n the bird life was probably due to the fact re were less of their natural enemies in area occupied by the house and orchard greater amount of sunlight in the opening uch of surrounding country being densely oded), and the greater abundance of food the way of seeds and insects

The list of birds included a majority of the st songsters we have in our state and while light lasted their sweet joyous and musical es could be heard at all times but it was early morning and at the close of day that singers seemed inspired to fill the hour th their best and most choice selections pecially was this so in the evenings when grosbeaks perched on the topmost anches of the trees the linnets about the use, the little wrens in the rosebushes g sparrows in the willows nearby orioles the treetops and the russet back thrush a neighboring canyon were the principals these grand concert most [illegible] ear and soul inspiring

This was the height of the nesting season in the birds were mating and building their s adding further interest in the activities our feathered neighbors and associates for y were about us and with us all day long d day after day The other morning a little n-faced chickadee flew onto our porch and s hopping about in search of nesting mate picking and pulling everything that ght yield a thread In the course of its rch it came within two feet of my position wing no fear in its anxiety to find just at was wanted or needed in the construc of its nest The next day it made a visit in familiar manner to the kitchen part of premises, where it was more successful in its search for strings Its squeaky little chirps in keeping with its diminutive size seemed like notes of joy and contentment

Two pair of wrens were nesting nearby One couple built in an old tree that shaded the house The location of the other pair I was not able to discover One of these couple had selected the fire box of our cooking stove before our arrival and had a nest well along in its construction when our necessities compelled them to seek another location The stove's place is on the back porch and the little birds found entrance by the hole made for the pipe of the waterback removed when the stove left civilization This species of wren is known in ornithology as the Vigors wren Thryomanes bewicki spilurus They are restless little creatures and can be seen and heard singing about the house at any hour of the day

For several days a black-throated gray warbler (Dendroica nigrescens) a bird somewhat smaller than the wren with not quite so long a foreign name was a common visitor to our front yard where it gathered material for its nest After securing the particular thing it wanted it would fly to a scrub oak about ten yards away Consequently I concluded there was where I would find the nest if I wished to inspect it later on But subsequently I discovered that the flight to the oak was deceptive that the bird went out on the opposite side and then flew to a thick manzanita bush where it had built its nest This bush was so located on one side that a direct flight to it from our front yard was but a few feet more distant than the flight to the oak I leave it to the reader to determine whether or not the warbler in taking the course it did was not trying to [illegible] the location of its nest building operation

Linnet Makes Nest in Attic

While the linnets or redheads were among our most numerous visitors I noticed only one nest and that was in the attic of our house The nest was built on one of the rooms [illegible] away from the wall making a projection and support As this part of the dwelling was not used or occupied by our family we did not dispute the bird's preemption of the premises but left it to rear its family in peace and the security from natural enemies the spot afforded How did the bird enter this part of the house? This was the first thing that came into my mind when I discovered the nest Upon looking around I saw a pane of glass missing in one of the windows Subsequently I saw the linnet make use of the opening

At no other place in the state did I ever see so many grosbeaks as were to be seen at this time in and about our amphitheater As mentioned elsewhere their melodious warblings, trillings and whistlings were to be heard from morning until night and were so musical and sweet that it never became tiresome There was one singer that spent the greater part of the day on the topmost branches of a large madrone tree not more than sixty yards from the house that seemed to be a superior songster He possessed a greater range of change in his song and his execution of trilling and soft whistling notes in which he indulged more at evening time was not equaled by any of the other singers occupying other treetops thereabouts This fine singer was one of a pair building a nest in a young oak tree near the house However it was the lady of the household as in some families of the highest order of life who was doing all the work of constructing the nest If the male member had contributed a straw twig string or anything for the cradle the mother required for her babies the act was not witnessed If he had done so perhaps we should have been denied the pleasure of much of his song In his own defense he would have probably declared he could not render classical music and work at the same time

Quail Makes Nest Near Back Gate

A valley quail selected a place within 60 feet of our back gate for her nest Under a bunch of dry grass that would not ordinarily attract attention she had shaped a place to hold her brood of eggs When we first discovered the nest by nearly stepping on the bird only one egg was in it But nearly every day the mother bird returned to the nest and deposited an egg and on the day of our departure for home there were six eggs in it The call the mountain quail makes in the mating season was frequently heard by us from the adjacent woods surrounding our place but the birds are so shy that we have seen but one pair though from the noise they made one would think the woods were full of them

Enumeration of the species of birds to be found here will vary but little from the census of bird life of other wooded parts of Central California I missed here the presence of the mocking bird that I have seen on the Pleasanton ridge Alameda county on Mt Diablo and in northern Mendocino also some of the warblers and sparrows common to the first two districts mentioned But what we lacked in variety was made up by quantity

Of the four footed forms of animal life common to this section deer were formerly most prominent Up to three or four years ago one could not go more than a few hundred yards in any direction from our place without expecting to come across one or more of these beautiful animals But now the automobiles having made all distant hunting grounds more accessible and with the greater number of hunters by reason of the rapid increase of the population of the state the number of deer has been greatly reduced also the possibility of seeing one in our rambles Though one day on this trip while out whipping the Rancheria for a mess of trout a doe and yearling came down into the bed of the stream and [illegible] on a gravel bar about 60 feet away As long as I remained motionless they gave no attention to my presence but evidently they sniffed danger for they held their heads high nervously flipping their big ears and looking first one way, then another However when I made the first step they were off like a flash the little one quickly passing the mother into the brush that hid them from further view

Another time while fishing on this same stream in a large pool made dark by overhanging treetops I saw a mink come down the bank on the opposite side At the edge of the water it stopped long enough to look around and then to my great astonishment took to the water and swam directly towards me As I stood in the margin of the pool when the mink landed on my side it was on top of my right foot which was in position for a strong kick which was made with enough force to land the animal half way across the pool into which it fell with a splash In all probability the spell of astonishment was transferred from man to animal by the act At any rate it was so thoroughly convinced that it had come into sudden contact with a superior force that it did not come to the surface of the water again but swam like a fish to a retreat on the other side

The handsome big bushy tailed gray squirrel must like so many other forms of life finds this place well adapted to its needs and comforts for the species is well represented On warm bright days it was no trouble to see one In fact [illegible] see them running along the [illegible] of the fence about our dwelling Their friendly visits extended even to the roof of the building One afternoon while sitting on the porch I heard a squirrel on the roof overhead I whistled softly and it soon peered down at me over the edge of the roof Apparently not satisfied in its curiosity it came down to a board fastened to the porch posts about six feet above my head and after full inspection of me it leisurely hopped along the entire length of the board then returned to the roof I think it would be no trouble to make them so tame they would come for food and be pets about the place

As might be imagined from the description of the country formerly coons skunks and other objectionable animals were also very numerous hereabouts but the very high price at which their pelts sold during the last year or so incited every man and boy in the country to trapping and as a result very few of these animals remain to represent species once so common The destruction of these animals especially the skunks will in all probability be of advantage to brooding quail as there are so few left to destroy the eggs or the young birds after hatching Therefore there should be a corresponding improvement in the numbers of these handsome game birds An event quail hunters will hail with delight

In the matter of wild flowers I know of several districts of the coast section of the State where a greater variety prevail but I know of no place where native flowers that find representation grow to greater perfection and beauty This is particularly true of the iris which is to be seen almost everywhere The creamy white species Douglasiana are extra large I found some specimens that measured nearly five inches across four and a quarter inches were very common Great clumps of varied shades of the Macrosiphon were not uncommon Beds of baby blue eyes and delicate tinted violets were common enough to satisfy the most sentimental lover of flowers

Blossoms Prove Lure to the Bees

The grass covered slope of a half acre or more in front of our house presented a beautiful sight for nearly a fortnight It was mantled by a mass of bright yellow poppies blue eyed grass brodiaeas and other flowers of lesser prominence The effect of the colors of these blossoms was suggestive of the Blue and Gold of our university I will not dwell longer on the subject of flowers other than to say the profusion of blossoms had attractions for some of the lower orders of life as well as for the highest The flowers [illegible] brought numbers of various kinds of insects and [illegible] of the doings and habits of some of these neighbors I propose to give a few interesting details

Let us begin with the bees for their life history generally speaking is inseparable from flowers and they were present in greater numbers than any other single insect family Nearly every genus of the Bee family was represented in our amphitheater from the big hairy bumble bee to the most diminutive form of Halictidae not more than a quarter of an inch in length Of course the bees I am writing about are wild bees I never have seen a beehive in this section of country but hive bees that have gone wild are quite numerous Though as I have said that bees of nearly all kinds that are common to this section are in evidence and seemingly very busy in their employments very few of their nearest relatives the wasps are around yet. The time I am writing about is the last of April in another month however the wasp family will outnumber the bees

The first bees to attract my attention on this trip were the big Carpenter bees Xylocopa In the United States there are several species which vary in size but so far as I can learn the habits of all are much the same The females of the two large species that I have seen on the Coast are entirely black while the males of one species are all yellow and in the other the males have only a yellowish thorax with black abdomen The former of these are the largest of the giants of the bee family These I saw on the Colorado desert It was members of the other species I found so numerous here

In tearing down a small structure we found a [illegible] split redwood post the upper end of which for a distance of twelve inches contained several holes made by the Carpenter bees I cut off the perforated part and split it open revealing the tunnels shafts and rooms connected with the entrances bored into the sides of the post From the highest to the lowest part of this internal work the measurement was almost thirteen inches The inside excavations were all connected whether by accident or by design, must remain a matter of speculation until we have some evidence that will settle the question

While the diameter of the excavations in the post justified the conclusion that the work was that of the Carpenter bees the foreign material found in a section of one side excavation showed that Carpenter bees were not the only kind that had made use of a portion of these quarters to raise their young In a cavity exposed by the splitting of the post there were six partitions made of clay dividing it into as many cells or rather they were parts of partitions for they had been broken through by the insects hatched in the cells after reaching the stage of maturity In the last cell I found the remains of two small black bees There was enough of the desiccated bodies of the insects left to enable one to identify the remains as being those of bees and to suggest the probability that they were of a genus known as Osmia which is quite numerous in this section of our State I recovered a wing in perfect form and an examination of its venation confirmed the conclusion as to the species It is also characteristic of the Osmia to utilize hollowed out places made by other agencies than themselves for nesting places How they managed to pre-empt a section of the Carpenter bees apartments and hold it against their big overgrown relatives is a mystery The latter may have tolerated the little bees or possibly the last mentioned may have occupied the place late in the season when Carpenter bees were not using it However it may have been the little bees showed their disposition to avoid hard work by pre-empting the old cells When there are no ready made places for nests to be found by the small bee it excavates the pith from elderberry bush stems or like pithy growths The desire to shun the work of excavating in wood or pith by both species of bees mentioned is hardly reconcilable with the theory of those writers who insist that such insects act only under the impulse of instinct. Their idea is that nature has endowed these lower forms of life with an instinct that impels them to perform certain acts in a particular way at certain times filling out their cycle of life and for this reason they cannot execute any of the requirements in their life history in a different way According to this theory the Carpenter bee being endowed with instinct that directs it to bore holes in dry wood for nesting it would be expected that these bees should be found boring holes for the purpose instead of insidiously hunting for a hole made by some more industrious bee or other agency the year or years before an act that seems to indicate some reason and judgment and the possession of dislike for laborious work a disposition so commonly manifested among the human kind

The Osmia according to Sharp is one of the most important genera of bees in Europe. The famous entomologist of France H Fabre gives much space to the doings of these bees in his writings so popular the world over

Anthidium is the name of another small bee noticed at Deerwood We discovered it while in the very act that has given it the name of wool gatherer The bees were engaged in stripping off the woolly substance or pubescence of the underside of leaves of wormwood plants It was very interesting to watch them in the operation and note the thoroughness and dexterity they showed in shaving off the so-called wool. The insects did the work with their mandibles, which are broadened on the ends and bear minute saw toothed edges The shaving was rapidly done with a cleanness and smoothness that would excel the operations of a [illegible] The wool as it came off the leaves was held under the chins of the bees and rolled into the form of a ball and held there with the aid of the fore legs The shaving operation continued until a bee gathered a bunch as large as a small buckshot and would then fly away Some observers say this wool is gathered to line the cells of the nests they make in excavations made by other insects The cells made one on top of another are filled with pollen and honey for food for the larvae when hatched from the single egg deposited in each cell We were not fortunate enough to find any nests of these little members of the bee family

It was here that I first met the Vandevort brothers, Benjamin and John. The latter was my traveling companion on various trips which I took later in life. "Vandy" appears as my chum in "Round the World." Our neighbors Mr. and Mrs. Stewart became more and more dear to us, and the acquaintance we had before ripened into lasting friendship. One of my pleasures is that Mr. Stewart subsequently embarked in business with us and became a partner, as "Vandy" did also. Greatest of all the benefits of our new home however was making the acquaintance of the leading family of Western Pennsylvania, that of Honorable Judge Wilkins. The Judge was then approaching his eightieth year, tall, slender and handsome, in full possession of all his faculties, with a courtly grace of manner and the most wonderful store of knowledge and reminiscence of any man I had yet been privileged to meet. His wife, the daughter of George M. Dallas, Vice President of the United States, has ever been my type of gracious womanhood in age—the most beautiful, most charming venerable old lady I ever knew or saw. Her daughter, Miss Wilkins, with her sister, Mrs. Saunders, and her children, resided in the stately mansion at Homewood, which was to the surrounding district what the [illegible] hall in Britain is or should be to its district—the center of all that was cultured, refined and elevating.

To me it was specially pleasing that I seemed to be a welcome guest there. Musical parties, charades and theatricals in which Miss Wilkins took the leading parts furnished me with another means of self-improvement. The Judge himself was the first man of historical note whom I had ever known. I shall never forget the impression it made upon me when in the course of conversation, wishing to illustrate a remark, he said "President Jackson once said to me" or "I told the Duke of Wellington so and so." The Judge in his earlier life (1834) had been Minister to Russia under Jackson, and in the same easy way spoke of his interview with the Czar. It seemed to me that I was touching history itself. The house was a new atmosphere and my intercourse with the family was a powerful stimulant to the desire for improvement of my own mind and manners.

The only subject upon which there was always a decided though silent antagonism between the Wilkins family and myself was politics. I was an ardent Free Soiler in days when to be an abolitionist was somewhat akin to being a republican in Britain. The Wilkinses were strong Democrats with leanings toward the South, being closely connected with leading Southern families. On one occasion at Homewood on entering the drawing room I found the family excitedly conversing about a terrible incident that had recently occurred.

"What do you think!" said Mrs. Wilkins to me. "Dallas (her grandson) writes me that he has been compelled by the commandant of West Point to sit next a negro! Did you ever hear the like of that? Is it not disgraceful? Negroes admitted to West Point!"

"Oh!" I said, "Mrs. Wilkins, there is something even worse than that. I understand that some of them have been admitted to heaven!"

There was a silence that could be felt. Then dear Mrs. Wilkins said gravely:

"That is a different matter, Mr. Carnegie."

By far the most precious gift ever received by me up to that time came about in this manner. Dear Mrs. Wilkins began knitting an afghan and during the work many were the inquiries as to whom it was for. No, the dear queenly old lady would not tell; she kept her secret all the long months until, Christmas drawing near, the gift finished and carefully wrapped up, and her card with a few loving words enclosed, she instructed her daughter to address it to me. It was duly received in New York. Such a tribute from such a lady! Well, that afghan, though often shown to dear friends, has not been much used. It is sacred to me and remains among my precious possessions.

I had been so fortunate as to meet Leila Addison while living in Pittsburgh, the talented daughter of Dr. Addison, who had died a short time before. I soon became acquainted with the family and record with grateful feelings the immense advantage which that acquaintance also brought to me. Here was another friendship formed with people who had all the advantages of the higher education. Carlyle had been Mrs. Addison's tutor for a time, for she was an Edinburgh lady. Her daughters had been educated abroad and spoke French, Spanish, and Italian as fluently as English. It was through intercourse with this family that I first realized the indescribable yet immeasurable gulf that separates the highly educated from people like myself. But the wee drap o' Scotch bluid 'atween us' proved its potency as usual.

Miss Addison became an ideal friend because she undertook to improve the rough diamond, if it were indeed a diamond at all. She was my best friend, because my severest critic. I began to pay strict attention to my language and to the English classics which I now read with great avidity. I began also to notice how much better it was to be gentle in tone and manner, polite and courteous to all—in short, better behaved. Up to that time I had been, perhaps, careless in dress and rather affected it. Great heavy boots, loose collar, and general roughness of attire were then peculiar to the West and in our circle considered manly. Anything that could be labeled foppish was looked upon with contempt. I remember the first gentleman I ever saw in the service of the railway company who wore kid gloves. He was the object of derision among us who aspired to be manly men. I was a great deal the better in all these respects after we moved to Homewood, owing to the Addisons.

Chapter VIII.

Civil War Period

In 1861 the Civil War broke out and I was at once summoned to Washington by Mr. Scott, who had been appointed Assistant Secretary of War in charge of the Transportation Department. I was to act as his assistant in charge of the military railroads and telegraphs of the government and to organize a force of railway men. It was one of the most important departments of all at the beginning of the war.

The first regiments of Union troops passing through Baltimore had been attacked and the railway line cut between Baltimore and Annapolis Junction, destroying communication with Washington. It was therefore necessary for me with my corps of assistants to take train at Philadelphia for Annapolis, a point from which a branch line extended to the Junction joining the main line to Washington. Our first duty was to repair this branch and make it passible for heavy trains, a work of some days. General Butler and several regiments of troops arrived a few days after us and we were able to transport his whole brigade to Washington.

I took my place upon the first engine which started for the Capital and proceeded very cautiously. Some distance from Washington I noticed that the telegraph wires had been pinned to the ground by wooden stakes. I stopped the engine and ran forward to release them, but I did not notice that the wires had been pulled to one side before fastening. When released in their spring upwards they struck me in the face, knocked me over and cut a gash in my cheek which bled profusely. In this condition I entered the city of Washington with the first troops, so that with the exception of one or two soldiers wounded a few days previously in passing through the streets of Baltimore, I can justly claim that I shed my blood for my country among the first of its defenders. I gloried in being useful to the land that had done so much for me and worked, I can truly say, night and day to open communication to the South.

I soon removed my headquarters to Alexandria, Virginia, and was stationed there when the unfortunate battle of Bull Run was fought. We could not believe the reports that came to us, but it soon became evident that we must rush every engine and car to the front to bring back our defeated forces. The closest point then was Burke Station. I went out there and loaded up train after train of the poor wounded volunteers. The rebels were reported to be close upon us and we were finally compelled to close Burke Station, the operator and myself leaving on the last train for Alexandria, where the effect of panic was evident upon every side. Some of our railway men were missing, but the number at the mess on the following morning showed that, compared with other branches of the service, we had cause for congratulation. A few conductors and engineers had obtained boats and crossed the Potomac, but the great body of the men remained, although the roar of the guns of the pursuing enemy was supposed to be heard in every sound during the night. Of our telegraphers not one was missing the next morning.

Soon after this I returned to Washington and made my headquarters in the War Building with Colonel Scott. As I had charge of the telegraph department as well as the railways, this gave me an opportunity of seeing President Lincoln, Mr. Seward, Secretary Cameron and others, and I was occasionally brought in personal contact with these men, which was to me a source of great interest. Mr. Lincoln would occasionally come to the office and sit at the desk awaiting replies to telegrams or perhaps merely anxious for information.

All the pictures of this extraordinary man are like him. He was so marked of feature that it was impossible for any one to paint him and not produce a likeness. He was certainly one of the most homely men I ever saw when his features were in repose, but when excited or telling a story, intellect shone through his eyes and lit up his face to a degree which I have seldom or never seen in any other. His manners were perfect because natural; and he had a kind word for everybody, even the youngest boy in the office. His attentions were not graduated. They were the same to all, as deferential in talking to the messenger boy as to Secretary Seward. His charm lay in the total absence of manner. It was not so much, perhaps, what he said as the way in which he said it that never failed to win one. I have often regretted that I did not note down carefully at the time some of his curious sayings, for he said even common things in an original way. I never met a great man who so thoroughly made himself one with all men as Mr. Lincoln. As Secretary Hay so well says: "It is impossible to imagine any one a valet to Mr. Lincoln; he would have been his companion." He was the most perfect democrat, revealing in every word and act the equality of men.

When Mason and Slidell in 1861 were taken from the British ship Trent there was intense anxiety on the part of those who like myself knew what the right of asylum on her ships meant to Britain. It was certain war or else a prompt return of the prisoners. Secretary Cameron being absent when the Cabinet was summoned to consider the question, Mr. Scott was invited to attend as assistant secretary of war. I did my best to let him understand that upon this issue Britain would fight beyond question, and urged that he stand firm for surrender, especially since it had been the American doctrine that ships should be immune from search. Mr. Scott, knowing nothing of foreign affairs, was disposed to hold the captives, but upon his return from the meeting he told me that Seward had warned the Cabinet it meant war, just as I had said. Lincoln too was at first inclined to hold the prisoners but was at last converted to Seward's policy. The Cabinet however had decided to postpone action until the morrow, when Cameron and other absentees would be present. Mr. Scott was requested by Seward to meet Cameron on arrival and get him right on the subject before going to the meeting, for he was expected to be in no surrendering mood. This was done and all went well next day.

The general confusion which reigned at Washington at this time had to be seen to be understood. No description can convey my initial impression of it. The first time I saw General Scott, then commander in chief, he was being helped by two men across the pavement from his office into his carriage. He was an old, decrepit man, paralyzed not only in body but in mind, and it was upon this noble relic of the past that the organization of the forces of the Republic depended. His chief commissary, General Taylor, was in some degree a counterpart of Scott. It was our business to [illegible] with these and others scarcely less fit for the opening of communications and for the transportation of men and supplies. They were seemingly one and all martinets who had passed the age of usefulness. Days would elapse before a decision could be obtained upon matters which required prompt action. There was scarcely a young active officer at the head of any important department—at least I cannot recall one. Long years of peace had fossilized the service.

The same cause had produced like results, I understood, in the Navy department, but I was not brought in personal contact with it. The navy was not important at the beginning; it was the army that counted. Nothing but defeat was to be looked for until the heads of the various departments were changed, and this could not be done in a day. The impatience of the country at the apparent delay in producing an effective weapon for the great task thrown upon the government was no doubt natural, but the wonder to me is that order was so soon [illegible] prevailed in every branch of the service.

As far as our operations were concerned we had one great advantage. Secretary Cameron authorized Mr. Scott (he had been made a colonel) to do what he thought necessary without waiting for the slow movements of the officials under the secretary of war. Of this authority unsparing use was made, and the important part played by the railway and telegraph department of the government from the very beginning of the war is to be attributed to the fact that he had the cordial support of Secretary Cameron. He was then in the possession of all his faculties and grasped the elements of the problems far better than his generals and heads of departments. Popular clamor compelled Lincoln to change him at last, but those who were behind the scenes well knew that if other departments had been as well managed as was the War department under Cameron, all things considered, much of disaster would have been avoided.

Lochiel, as Cameron liked to be called, was a man of sentiment. In his ninetieth year he visited us in Scotland and, passing through one of our glens sitting on the front seat of our four in hand coach, he reverently took off his hat and bareheaded rode through the glen, overcome by its grandeur. The conversation turned once upon the efforts which candidates for office must themselves put forth and the fallacy that office seeks the man, except in very rare emergencies. Apropos of this Lochiel told this story about Lincoln's second term.

One day at Cameron's country home near Harrisburg he received a telegram saying that President Lincoln would like to see him. Accordingly he went to Washington. Lincoln's second term.

"Cameron, the people come to me telling me that it is my patriotic duty to become a candidate for a second term; that I am the only man who can save my country, and so on, and do you know I'm just beginning to be fool enough to believe them a little. What do you say, and how could it be managed?"

"Well, Mr. President, twenty eight years ago President Jackson sent for me as you have now done, and told me just the same story. His letter reached me in New Orleans and I took ten days to reach Washington. I told President Jackson I thought the best plan would be to have the Legislature of one of the states pass resolutions insisting that the pilot should [illegible] during the coming stormy times and so forth. If one state did this I thought others would follow. Mr. Jackson concurred and I went to Harrisburg and had such a resolution prepared and passed. Other states followed, as I expected, and as you know, he won a second term."

"Well," said Lincoln, "could you do that now?"

"No," said I, "I am too old to do it, Mr. President, but if you desire it I might get a friend to attend to it, I think."

"Well," said President Lincoln, "I leave the matter with you."

"I sent for Foster here (who was his companion on the coach and our guest) and asked him to look up the Jackson resolution. We changed them a little to meet new conditions and passed them. The like result followed as in the case of President Jackson. Upon my next visit to Washington I went in the evening to the President's public reception. When I entered the crowded and spacious East room, being, like Lincoln, very tall, the President recognized me over the mass of people and holding up both white gloved hands, which looked like two legs of mutton, called out 'Two more in today, Cameron, two more.' That is, two additional states had passed the Jackson Lincoln resolutions."

Apart from the light this incident throws upon political life, it is rather remarkable that the same man should have been called upon by two presidents of the United States, twenty eight years apart, under exactly similar circumstances, and asked for advice, and that the same expedient being employed, both men became candidates and both secured second terms. As was once explained upon a memorable occasion: "There's figuring in all them things."

When in Washington I had not met General Grant, because he was in the west up to the time of my leaving, but on a journey to and from Washington he stopped at Pittsburg to make the necessary arrangements for his removal to the east. I met him on the line upon [illegible] with me in Pittsburg. There were no dining cars then. He was the most ordinary looking man of high position I had ever met and the last that one would select at first glance as a remarkable man. I remember that Secretary of War Stanton said that when he visited the armies in the west, General Grant and his staff entered the car. He looked at them one after the other as they entered and, seeing General Grant, said to himself:

"Well, I do not know which is General Grant, but there is one that can not be." Yet this was he. (Reading this years after it was written I laugh. It is pretty hard on the General, for I have been taken for him more than once.)

In those days of the war much was talked about strategy and the plans of the various generals. I was amazed at General Grant's freedom in talking to me about such things. Of course he knew that I had been in the War office and was well known to Secretary Stanton, and had some knowledge of what was going on, but my surprise can be imagined when he said to me:

"Well, the President and Stanton want me to go east and take command there, and I have agreed to it. I am just going west to make the necessary arrangements."

I said, "I suspected as much."

"I am going to put Sherman in charge," he said.

"That will surprise the country," I said, "for I think the impression is that General Thomas should succeed."

"Yes, I know that," he said, "but I know the men and Thomas will be the first to say that Sherman is the man for the work. There will be no trouble about that. The western end is pretty well in hand; we must push the eastern end down a little."

That was exactly what he did. And that was Grant's way of putting it, in his own words. It was my privilege to become well acquainted with him in after years. If ever a man was without the slightest trace of affectation, Grant was that man. Even Lincoln did not surpass him in that. But Grant was a quiet, slow man, while Lincoln was always alive and in motion. I never heard Grant use a long or grand word or make any attempt at manner, but the general impression that he was [illegible] was a mistake. He was surprisingly [illegible] talk. His sentences were always short and to the point and his observations upon things remarkably shrewd. When he had nothing to say he said nothing. I noticed that he was never tired of praising his subordinates in the war. He spoke of them as a fond father speaks of his children.

The story is told that during the [illegible] of war in the West General Grant began to indulge too freely in liquor. His chief of staff, Rawlins, boldly ventured to tell him so. That this was the act of a true friend Grant fully recognized.

"You do not mean that? I was wholly unconscious of it. I am surprised," said the General.

"Yes, I do mean it. It is even beginning to be a subject of comment among your officers."

"Why did you not tell me before? I'll never drink another drop again."

He never did. Time after time in later years, dining with the Grants in New York, I have seen the General turn down the wine glass at his side. That indomitable will enabled him to keep his resolve, a rare gift, as experience goes. Some have refrained for a time. In one case I [illegible] one of our partners refrained for three years, but alas, the old enemy at last reclaimed him.

Grant when President was accused of being pecuniarily benefited by certain appointments or acts of his administration, while his friends knew that he was so poor that he had been compelled to announce his intention of abandoning the customary state dinners, each of which he found cost eight hundred dollars—a sum which he could not afford to pay out of his salary. The increase of the President's salary from $25,000 to $50,000 a year enabled him during his second term to save a little, although he cared no more about money than about uniforms. At the end of his first term I know he had nothing. I found when in Europe the impression was widespread that the highest officials [illegible] was something in [illegible] mainly by appointment. [illegible] in America how [illegible] truth to these charges, but it would have been well for those who make them so recklessly to have considered what effect they would produce upon public opinion in other lands.

The cause of democracy suffers more in Britain [illegible] generally received opinion that American politics are corrupt, and therefore that republicanism produces corruption, than from any other one cause. Yet speaking with some knowledge of politics in both lands I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that for every ounce of [illegible] in the new land of republics there is one in the old land of monarchy; only the forms of corruption differ. Titles are the bribes in the monarchy, not dollars. Office is a corruption and proper reward in both. There is however this difference in favor of the monarchy: titles [illegible] openly and are not considered by the recipients or the mass of the people as bribes.

When I was called to Washington in 1861 it was supposed that the war would soon be over, but it was seen shortly afterwards that it was to be a question of years. Permanent officials in charge would be required. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company was unable to spare [illegible] and Mr. Scott in turn decided that I must return to Pittsburgh, where my services were urgently needed, owing to the demands upon the Pennsylvania by the Government. We therefore placed the department at Washington in the hands of others and returned to our respective positions.

After my return from Washington relaxation followed and I was taken with my first serious illness. I was completely broken down, and after a struggle to perform my duties was compelled to seek rest. One afternoon, when on the railway line in Virginia, I had experienced something like a sunstroke which gave me considerable trouble. It passed off, however, but after that I found I could not stand heat and had to be careful to keep out of the sun—a hot day wilting me completely. That is the reason why the cool Highland or Scottish summer has been to me a panacea for many years. My physician has insisted that I must avoid our hot American summers.

Leave of absence was granted me by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the long sought opportunity to visit Scotland came. My mother and my bosom friend, Tom Miller, and I sailed in the steamship Etna June 28, 1862, I in my twenty seventh year, and on landing in Liverpool we proceeded at once to Dunfermline. No change ever affected me so much as this return to my native land. I seemed to be in a dream. Every mile that brought us nearer to Scotland increased the intensity of my feelings. My mother was equally moved and I remember when her eyes first caught sight of the familiar yellow bush she exclaimed:

"Oh! there's the broom, the broom!"

Her heart was so full she could not restrain her tears, and the more I tried to make light of it or to soothe her, the more she was overcome. For myself I felt as if I could throw myself upon the sacred soil and kiss it.

In this mood we reached Dunfermline. Every object we passed was recognized at once, but everything seemed so small compared with what I had imagined it that I was completely puzzled. Finally reaching Uncle Lauder's and getting into the old room where he had taught Dod and myself so many things, I exclaimed:

"You are all here, everything is just as I left it, but you are now all playing with toys."

The High Street, which I had considered not a bad Broadway, uncle's shop which I had compared with some New York establishments, the little mounds about the town in which we had run on Sundays to play, the distance, the height of the houses, all had shrunk. Here was a city of the Lilliputians. I could almost touch the eaves of the house in which I was born, and the walk to the sea, to which on a Saturday had been considered quite a feat, was but three miles distant. The rocks at the seashore among which I had gathered wilks (whelks) seemed to have vanished and a tame flat shore remained. The schoolhouse, around which had centered many of the rich recollections of my only Alma Mater, and the playground upon which mimic battles had been fought and races run, had shrunk into [illegible]. The fine residences, Broomhall, Fordel, and especially the conservatories at Donibristle, fell one after the other into the petty and insignificant. What I felt on a later occasion on a visit to Japan, with its small toy houses, was something like a repetition of the impression my old home made upon me.

Everything was there in miniature. Even the old well at the head of Moodie Street, where I began my early struggles, was changed from what I had pictured it. But one object remained all that I had dreamed of it. There was no disappointment in the glorious old Abbey and its [illegible] grand enough, and the memorable carved letters on the top of the tower—"King Robert The Bruce"—filled my eye and my heart as fully as of old. Nor was the Abbey bell disappointing, when I heard it for the first time after my return. For this I was grateful. It gave me a rallying point, and around the old Abbey, with its Palace ruins and the Glen, other things adjusted themselves in their true proportions after a time.

My relatives were exceedingly kind, and the oldest of all, my dear old Auntie Charlotte, in a moment of exultation exclaimed:

"Oh, you will just be coming back here some day and keep a shop in the High Street!"

To keep a shop in the High Street was her idea of triumph. Her son in law and daughter, both my full cousins, though unrelated to each other, had risen to this sublime height, and nothing was too great to predict for her promising nephew. There is an aristocracy even in shop keeping, and the family of the green grocer of the High Street mingles not upon equal terms with him of Moodie Street.

Auntie, who had often played my nurse, liked to dwell upon the fact that I was a sore trying infant that had to be fed with two spoons, as I yelled whenever one left my mouth. Captain Jones, our superintendent of the steel works at a later day, described me as having been born with two rows of teeth and holes punched for more, so insatiable was my appetite for new works and increased production. As I was the first child in our immediate family circle there were plenty of now venerable relatives begging to be allowed to play nurse or auntie among them. Many of my childhood pranks and words they told me in their old age. One of them that the aunties remembered struck me as rather precocious.

I had been brought up upon wise saws and one that my father had taught me was soon given direct application. As a boy returning from the seashore three miles distant he had to carry me part of the way upon his back. Going up a steep hill in the gloaming he remarked upon the heavy load, hoping probably I would propose to walk a bit. The response however which he received was:

"Ah father, never mind, patience and perseverance make the man, ye ken."

He toiled on with his burden, but shaking with laughter. He was hoist with his own petard, but his burden grew lighter all the same, I am sure of this.

My home of course was with my instructor, guide and inspirer, Uncle Lauder, he who had done so much to make me romantic, patriotic and poetical at eight. Now I was twenty-seven, but Uncle Lauder still remained Uncle Lauder. He had not shrunk; no one could fill his place. We had our walks and talks constantly and I was "Naig" again to him. He had never had any name for me but that and never did have. My dear, dear uncle, and more, much more than uncle to me.

I was still dreaming, and so excited that I could not sleep, and had caught cold in the Carron [illegible]. The natural result of this was a fever. I lay in uncle's house for six weeks, a part of that time in a critical condition. Scottish medicine was then as stern as Scottish theology. (Both are now much softened.) and I was bled. My thin American blood was so depleted that when I was pronounced convalescent it was long before I could stand upon my feet. This illness put an end to my visit, but by the time I had reached America again the sea voyage had done me so much good I was able to resume work.

I remember being deeply affected by the reception I met with when I returned to my division. The men of the eastern end had gathered together with a cannon, and when the train passed they greeted with a salvo. This was [illegible] the object of my demonstration, and their reception made a lasting impression. I knew how much I cared for them, and it was pleasing to know that they reciprocated my feeling. Working men always do reciprocate kindly feeling. If we truly care for others we need not be anxious about their feeling for us. Like draws to like.

Chapter IX.

Bridge-Building

During the Civil War the price of iron went up to something like $130 per ton. Even at that figure it was not so much a question of money as of delivery. The railway lines of America were fast becoming dangerous for want of new rails, and this state of affairs led me to organize in 1864 a rail making concern at Pittsburgh. There was no difficulty in obtaining partners and capital and the Superior Rail Mill and Blast Furnaces were built.

In like manner the demand for locomotives was very great, and with Mr. Thomas N. Miller I organized in 1866 the Pittsburgh Locomotive Works, which has been a prosperous and creditable concern, locomotives made there having obtained an enviable reputation throughout the United States. It sounds like a fairy tale today to record that in 1906 the one hundred dollar shares of this company sold for three thousand dollars—that is, thirty dollars for one. Large annual dividends had been paid regularly and the company had been very successful—sufficient proof of the policy, "Make nothing but the very best." We never did.

When at Altoona I had seen in the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's works the first small bridge built of iron. It proved a success. I saw that it would never do to depend further upon wooden bridges for permanent railway structures. An important bridge on the Pennsylvania Railroad had recently burned and the traffic had been obstructed for eight days. Iron was the thing. I proposed to H. J. Linville, who had designed the iron bridge, and to John L. Piper and his partner, Mr. Schiffler, who had charge of bridges on the Pennsylvania line, that they should come to Pittsburgh and I would organize a company to build iron bridges. It was the first company of its kind. I asked my friend, Mr. Scott, of the Pennsylvania Railroad to go with us in the venture, which he did. Each of us paid for a one-fifth interest, or $1250. My share I borrowed from the bank. Looking back at it now the sum seemed very small, but "tall oaks from little acorns grow."

In this way was organized in 1862 the firm of Piper and Schiffler, which was merged into the Keystone Bridge Company in 1863—a name which I remember I was proud of having thought of as being most appropriate for a bridge-building concern in the State of Pennsylvania, the Keystone State. From this beginning iron bridges came generally into use in America, indeed, in the world at large so far as I know. My letters to iron manufacturers in Pittsburgh were sufficient to insure the new company credit. Small wooden shops were erected and several bridge structures were undertaken. Cast iron was the principal material used, but so well were the bridges built that some made at that day and since strengthened for heavier traffic still remain in use upon various lines.

The question of bridging the Ohio River at Steubenville came up and we were asked whether we woul undertake to build a railway bridge with a span of three hundred feet over the channel. It seems ridiculous at the present day to think of the serious doubts entertained about our ability to do this, but it must b remembered this was before the day of steel and almost before the use of wrought iron in America. The top cords and supports were all of cast iron. I urged my partners to tr it anyhow and we finally closed the contract, but I remember well whe President Jewett of the railway company visited the works and cast his eyes upon the piles of heavy cast iron lying about, which were parts of the forthcoming bridge, that h turned to me and said:

"I don't believe these heavy castings can be made to stand up an carry themselves, much less carry train across the Ohio River."

The Judge however lived to believe differently. The bridge remained until recently, thoug strengthened to carry heavier traffic. We expected to make quite sum by this first important undertaking, but owing to the inflation of the currency which occurred before the work was finished our margin of profit was almost swallowed up. It is in evidence of the fairness of President Edgar Thompson of the Pennsylvania that upon hearing the facts of the case he allowed an extra sum to secure us from loss. The subsequent position of affairs, he said, was not contemplated by either party when the contract was made. A great and a good man was Edgar Thomson, a close bargainer for the Pennsylvania Railroad, but ever mindful of the fact that the spirit of the law was above the letter.

In Linville, Piper and Schiffler we had the best talent of that day—Linville an engineer, Piper a bustling active mechanic and Schiffler sure and steady. Colonel Piper was an exceptional man. I heard President Thomson of the Pennsylvania once say he would rather have him at a burnt bridge than all the engineering corps. There was one subject upon which the Colonel displayed great weakness (fortunately for us) and that was the horse. Whenever a business discussion became too warm, and the Colonel showed signs of temper, which was not seldom, it was a sure cure to introduce that subject. Everything else would pass from his mind; he became absorbed in the fascinating topic of horseflesh. If he had overworked himself and we wished to get him to take a holiday we sent him to Kentucky to look after a horse or two that one or the other of us was desirous of obtaining, and for the selection of which we would trust no one but himself. But his craze for horses sometimes brought him into serious difficulties. He made his appearance at the office one day with one half of his face as black as mud could make it, his clothes torn and his hat missing, but still holding a whip in one hand. He explained that he had attempted to drive a fast Kentucky colt; one of the reins had broken and he had [illegible] as he expressed it.

He was a grand old fellow, "Pipe" as we called him, and when he took a fancy to a person, as he did to me, he was for and with him always. In later days when I removed to New York he transferred his affections to my brother, whom he invariably called Thomas instead of Tom. High as I stood in his favor, my brother afterwards stood higher. He fairly worshiped him and anything that Tom said was law and gospel. He was exceedingly jealous of our other establishments, in which he was not directly interested, such as our mills which supplied the Keystone Works. [illegible] disputes arose between the mill managers and the Colonel as to quality, price, and so forth. On one occasion he came to my brother to complain that a bargain which he had made for the supply of iron for a year had not been carried out correctly. The prices were [illegible] and nothing had been said about net when the bargain was made. He wanted to know just what that word "net" meant.

"Well, Colonel," said my brother, "it means that nothing more is to be added."

"All right, Thomas," said the Colonel, entirely satisfied.

There is much in the way one puts things. "Nothing to be deducted" might have caused a dispute.

Geraldine on MOTHER in LORS!!!

Whose Claims Come First, Those of the Mother Or the Loving Young Wife?

Come now the MOTHER-IN-LORS. Can we usually get along with 'em?

We can't.

Is it mostly their fault?

I don't think so.

I think we don't know how to get along with mother-in-laws because, primarily, WE DON'T KNOW HOW TO GET ALONG WITH OURSELVES.

There are lots of folks in this world and lots of jobs to do together. We all need elbow room and if we don't get it there's trouble. Someone's always shoving in back, or pushing in front, hanging on our hands or walking on our necks. That's Life. A most untidy and exasperating scramble, but we can't alter it. AND WE CAN'T LIVE IT ALONE. We need those shovers and pushers just as they need us. And tho we may think we could swing the whole deal unassisted, we'd put up an awful holler if anyone handed it to us to do. So, since we're doomed to stay in the midst of the gang it behooves us to figure out how we're going to get along with all these friends and enemies, strangers and partners, invited and uninvited guests. And PARTICULARLY with MOTHER-IN-LAWS.

We really want to adjust the rest of the world to suit OUR requirements, don't we? Don't be ashamed to acknowledge it. It's a perfectly natural and wholesome desire and here's how to set about doing it:

THE FIRST ESSENTIAL IN ADJUSTING THE WORLD IS TO ADJUST YOURSELF.

If you want to make folks do things for you YOU MUST FIRST DECIDE WHAT YOU WANT DONE. You must know and rule your own mind before you can know and rule the minds of others.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR OWN MIND, MY FRIEND?

IT'S DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS YOU DON'T.

The first thing the average person does on meeting a Human Source of Irritation is to begin carping at the other fellow. "He does this" or "She says that" with increasing vehemence and wrath.

Rarely does the affronted party sit down quietly and say—"Here's a Johnny or a Jane with whom I am obliged to associate. I can't get out of it. Now he or she has many qualities which I enthusiastically dislike. They grate on me. They hamper me. They're a mustard plaster on my peace of mind. I can't get rid of this person but I must find some way to function joyously in spite of those irritating qualities. NOW WHAT DO I REALLY NEED TO ACHIEVE HARMONY IN THIS RELATIONSHIP? I must expect to make certain sacrifices—but what are the ESSENTIAL FREEDOMS and CONSIDERATIONS which I have a right to demand?"

Until you have done that—until you have gone quietly apart and questioned your own soul, rejecting its petty quibblings and holding fast to only its basic needs, you cannot succeed in ANY human association. Until you've done that YOU DON'T DESERVE TO SUCCEED, for your brain's in a scramble and you're just as much to blame as the other chap if things go wrong.

But when you have done it and have come to know and curb yourself, then you'll be ready to take the other fellow in hand and get what you want out of life. And you'll get it.

These are the general sporting rules for all human association. And now, with rolled up sleeves, we approach the MOTHER-IN-LAW PROBLEM.

First allow me to offer you my most Judicial Hunch concerning the meeting of all grief, whether it be of the lesser varieties such as new fangled suspenders or bootlegging hair bleaches—or the greater tragedies of life like uplift societies, motor cops AND MOTHERS-IN-LAW. If there is a way of HONORABLY avoiding these and other crosses, AVOID 'EM. Don't stop to argue or listen to the neighbors. Don't hesitate because you think you may look well in a Martyr's Crown of Glory. A MARTYR'S CROWN MAY LOOK LIKE 14 KARAT GOLD ON THE OUTSIDE, BUT INSIDE IT FEELS LIKE A HEADACHE. So forget it. When you see Trouble a-coming, be on your way! Take your foot in your hand and light out for the horizon. Fade, children, FADE.

Proverbially the combination of One Daughter-in-law plus One Mother-in-law makes what Sherman said war was. There are delightful and lovable mother-in-law exceptions. You know them. I know them. May they ever be near when the baby has the colic or the biscuits won't rise. But we're not discussing exceptions. We're discussing the situations which have filled the funny magazines with their oldest jokes—and life with its saltest tears. If ever there was a trouble that should be avoided if it is possible to HONORABLY do so, it's the mother-in-law trouble.

Generally it CAN BE AVOIDED NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN. THE MOTHER-IN-LAW TROUBLE IS BROUGHT ABOUT BY THE [illegible] OF ECONOMIC STRESS OR THE STUBBORNNESS OR IGNORANCE OF THE HUSBAND. Sometimes, but rarely, it is the wife's mother who causes the trouble. But usually the grief arises from the cooping up of two alien natures within four walls and their rivalry in a common love.

The old Mother heart, which has given the boy a life time of devotion, cannot bear to see the slightest neglect, real or imagined, on the wife's part. He was HER TOY—do not her claims come first?

The young Wife heart, which has cleaved to him in flesh and spirit, cannot bear to see the slightest interference, real or imagined, on the mother's part. He is HER MAN—do not her claims come first?

And the Husband sees nothing of it all. What in the world should there be to quarrel over? Haven't they enough to eat—enough to wear? Haven't they both a good home? Doesn't he love them both? Then why in the name of reason should they row? What's all this talk of the wife's about cattiness and meddling and trying to alienate him? Tommy rot—woman silliness—that's what it is. Doesn't she suppose he knows his OWN MOTHER after all these years? Why, she wouldn't hurt a fly. And what does the mother mean by suggesting that Friend Wife is not just the finest little girl in all the world? But at this point unfortunately his loyalty is apt to begin to waver a bit. For after all, Mother has bandaged too many whacked fingers, eased too many tummy aches not to figure in with the Great Powers, and her suggestions are a bit like messages from the White House. So just about then the trouble is apt to begin.

And at THAT point they fall on Jerry's shoulder. Take this for instance:

Dear Geraldine:

I have been married almost two years. Since the day I was married until now we have never gotten along. Sometimes I would start a fight and sometimes he would. The reason I would start a fight is because when he's got anything to say he always goes to his mother—the least little ache or pain he gets why he goes to her. If anything happens he tells her. He bawls me out in front of his folks, fights and hits me in front of them. If I do anything wrong he tells them. He wants me to do everything his parents want. He always takes his mother's part. Does he love me when he does all this or does he take me for a fool?

Everything is for his mother. He hardly stays home any more at all. Sometimes I feel like killing myself but for the sake of my baby boy I won't. Please help me, Geraldine.

MRS. MARY.

Or one like this:

What do you think of the mother-in-law problem? My fiance told me after we became engaged that his mother would have to live with us as he practically had to support us. Some of my friends advised me not to marry him and others said "Go ahead and take a chance." I really don't know what to do. However, I told him I would ask you and we're waiting for your decision.

ANXIOUS.

Or the following one which I am not printing in full by request, but only giving parts that my answer may be intelligible to you all:

Dearest Jerry—

For some years my husband's mother has lived with us and now it looks as though she were to remain with us for good. She is very kind to me and of course adores my husband—but I know for a positive fact that she is (oh Jerry, it is a very disagreeable thing to say, but I do know it) two faced in every respect.

She is not only two faced but terribly ignorant and not interested in a thing outside her little sphere and the scandals in the newspapers. She irritates me more and more and always by this terrible ignorance. She is really what I would call common and oh, it hurts. For my husband is a dear and so different in every way. I'd fly forever if he were not so wonderful.

For years I've planned for a lovely little home where I could have company. We could have it now, but with her in the home all day—oh, I can't. I can't have company because I'm afraid she'll say something unpleasant, or might have "said"—or "I seen" or "I done" or something equally trying in all its appearance.

We MUST support her—we can't of course afford to rent a place for her, and besides, after all she is HIS MOTHER and naturally he has the love for her he should have.

But oh Jerry, is it right for a person who dreamed of all kinds of nice things to have their dreams fade because of a condition like that?

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

I'm going to answer all three of those letters together. NO, I DO NOT THINK IT RIGHT THAT YOUR DREAMS SHOULD FADE BECAUSE OF THE MOTHER-IN-LAW. And now let's see how we can remedy it.

In the first place, before you try to adjust yourself to this problem, see if you can't avoid it. As I've advised, IT SHOULD BE AVOIDED. No man has a right to ask you to marry his mother as well as himself. You're not selfish or unreasonable or catty or narrow-minded to take your position firmly on that point. But you should take it FAIRLY as well as FIRMLY. He

Misery in Unhappy Homes Laid to False Viewpoint

[illegible] owe a big duty to that mother. He might see that she is provided for OUTSIDE THE WALLS OF HIS OWN HOME. That home should be the temple of New dreams, New life, New love. It should not be influenced by the life of another generation. It is meant for more than eating, sleeping, playing. Within it will a Miracle of Progress come if Love has built those walls. But the miracle must be built by TWO ALONE and cannot be guided by other hands. For his own sake, for his wife's sake and most of all for the sake of the dear old mother whose heart he would shield, the husband should realize it.

Only the wife can make him realize this and he can't make him realize it by storms or tears or sulks or scolding. She must make him see the deep fairness of her attitude toward the mother. Men appreciate fairness even when they cannot understand more subtle resentments or desire. They do not rule their working lives by resentments or desires. They rule them by a crude but sufficient standard of square dealing. If the wife will show this in her argument they will understand it where they cannot understand an argument of tears or reproaches.

But the wife must do more than merely convince the man of the fairness of such a move. She must be willing to SUPPLY THE LACK WHICH SUCH A MOVE WILL CREATE. He has clung to that old mother BECAUSE SHE MOTHERED HIM. She alone knew the deep truth about him—that he is only a little needy boy—foolish, tired, hungry for love and jealous sympathy. THE WIFE MUST ALSO KNOW THAT TRUTH AND SERVE THAT NEED. Unless she can do it the mother will come first though she be ten thousand miles away and SHE WILL DESERVE TO COME FIRST.

With this in your heart go to your men, Anxious, Mrs. Mary and Daughter-in-law. Tell them frankly and fairly without snappy resentment what you desire. FIND IN YOUR OWN HEART WHAT YOU REALLY DESIRE. Don't lay before him a lot of catty remarks which he will not understand and at which he will sneer. Do not point at past hurts. Point at a future DREAM OF BEAUTY which you cannot realize unless you two are alone. Offer to make any sacrifice to care for her outside in all tenderness and comfort. Make him feel that you are aiming not at Greater Comfort—but at GREATER SERVICE.

It may be impossible for you thus to separate yourselves even though both of you may desire. Then indeed you will need to go apart quietly and seek to know and curb your own pride. Then you must frame up that platform by which you shall find strength and joy in spite of this irritating relationship.

It will take all the power and humor and kindness you have within you—but it can be done. Don't [illegible] MUST you have a quiet room [illegible] detail [illegible] MUST you have [illegible] help in the housework [illegible] when you are working? Will you [illegible] if you can [illegible] afternoons for your own friends, and will you be willing [illegible] in return [illegible] afternoon for her friend? Do you want a night out every week with hubby, and will you in return arrange [illegible] for her [illegible].

Are these some of the things you MUST have to keep your [illegible] and power and are you willing to try to [illegible] power? Think it over. Don't [illegible] your mind. Frame your platform and when it's all [illegible] go to her and talk it over. Tell her frankly, even though there be tears, what you wish to do for your and her peace. AND THEN STICK TO IT. IF YOU ARE FAIR IN YOUR INNERMOST DESIRES IT WILL WORK OUT. BUT IF YOU ARE BEING MERELY CATTY WATCH OUT. CLAWS SCRATCH WHERE THEY WERE NOT AIMED SOMETIMES.

Yes, you can find the harmony you wish, Daughter-in-law and Mrs. Mary, but first you must find it in yourselves. Some of your grievances are real. Some are just a prickly heat of irritation. Some of the finest folks I've ever known said "I done" and "I come," Daughter-in-law. People of rich experience—who in their lives have mastered many crafts, who were vital masters of men through deep and vital power. Yet they couldn't have told a salad fork from a butter [illegible] because they never had seen either one. They ate with their knives—[illegible] and [illegible] curl papers. YET I WAS PROUD WITH A GREAT HUMILITY TO CALL THEM MY FRIENDS. I lived with them, worked with them, shared their joys and pain for month and year. And if in one small measure they've left the trail of their [illegible] on their unquestioned wisdom on my heart I am more grateful than I can say.

Forget the catting, [illegible]. She's bigger than her [illegible], I'll guarantee, and so are you, or neither of you would know how to love so tenderly. CONCENTRATE ON THE REAL THINGS AND YOU WILL GET THEM. BUT FIND OUT FIRST WHAT THE REAL THINGS ARE.

And as for this [illegible] paper [illegible] [illegible] I'm all for them.

When a Chinese family—especially one living in the provinces of Kiangsu and Chekiang—expects a child, the wife's parents and other relatives prepare to provide all the clothes the child will need for years and years. Unless they do this they fear that the husband's family will look down upon them, as indeed they would. So unless they are very poor the wife's family comes with every kind of costume baby may require.

A person who is intensely interested in the birth of the baby is one who may not even have spoken to the father in all his life. This individual is the village egg vendor. As soon as he learns that a baby is about to be born, the egg vendor hurries to the house and presents the pious wish that the newcomer may be an heir—not an heiress. This being graciously received he expresses the hope that he, as village egg vendor, may supply the eggs that will herald the child's entrance into the world. For three days after the birth of a child the family send eggs as presents to all their acquaintances.

Sometimes two thousand eggs or more are given away. These eggs are first cooked in boiling water and then are dipped into red dye which is mixed with vinegar and water. The presentation of red eggs is a token that the happy family hope they may have as many children as the eggs with which they announce the birth of this child.

The household is as busy as can be over the arrival of the baby. Those who aren't working from morning until night getting the eggs ready are preparing for the baby's first bath. Not one but two tubs are made ready. One is a large tub, one a small tub. The bigger tub is for the baby's body, the smaller tub is to bathe his head.

At this rite all the family gather. Into the water of both tubs dragon's eyes and peanuts are thrown. These represent wishes that baby may be successful in everything he undertakes and live very, very many years. When baby is borne into the room by attendants and is placed in the first tub, the doting relatives gathered about cast coins into the water for the servants. Indeed this is a happy time which is remembered by every one connected with the family.

Brown as a coffee berry, rugged, pistoled, spurred, wary, indefeasible, I saw my old friend Deputy Marshal Buck Caperton stumble, with jingling rowels, into a chair in the marshal's outer office.

And because the court house was almost deserted at that hour, and because Buck would sometimes relate to me things that were out of print, I followed him in and tricked him into talk through knowledge of a weakness he had. For cigarettes rolled with sweet corn husk were as honey to Buck's palate; and though he could finger the trigger of a forty-five with skill and suddenness, he never could learn to roll a cigarette.

It was through no fault of mine (for I rolled the cigarettes tight and smooth), but the upshot of some whim of his own, that instead of to an Odyssey of the chaparral I listened to—a dissertation upon matrimony! This from Buck Caperton! But I maintain that the cigarettes were impeccable, and crave absolution for myself.

"We just brought in Jim and Bud Granberry," said Buck. "Train robbing, you know. Held up the Aransas Pass last month. We caught 'em in the Twenty-Mile pear flat, south of the Nueces."

"Have much trouble corralling them?" I asked, for here was the meat that my hunger for epics craved.

"Some," said Buck, and then, during a little pause, his thoughts stampeded off the trail. "It's kind of queer about women," he went on; "and the place they're supposed to occupy in botany. If I was asked to classify them I'd say they was a human loco weed. Ever see a bronc that had been chewing loco weed? Ride him up to a puddle of water two feet wide, and he'll give a snort and fall back on you. It looks as big as a Mississippi river to him. Next trip he'd walk into a cañon a thousand feet deep thinking it was a prairie dog hole. Same way with a married man.

"I was thinking of Perry Rountree, that used to be my sidekicker before he committed matrimony. In them days me and Perry hated indisturbances of any kind. We roamed around considerable, stirring up the echoes and making 'em attend to business. Why, when me and Perry wanted to have some fun in a town it was a picnic for the census takers. They just counted the marshal's posse that it took to subdue us, and there was your population. But then there came along this Mariana Goodnight girl and looked at Perry sideways and he was all bridle-wise and saddle-broke before you could skin a yearling.

"I wasn't even asked to the wedding. I reckon the bride had my pedigree and the front elevation of my habits all mapped out, and she decided that Perry would trot better in double harness without any unconverted mustang like Buck Caperton whickering around on the matrimonial range. So it was six months before I saw Perry again.

"One day I was passing on the edge of town, and I see something like a man in a little yard by a little house with a sprinkling pot squirting water on a rose bush. Seemed to me I'd seen something like it before, and I stopped at the gate trying to figure out its brand. 'Twas not Perry Rountree, but 'twas the kind of a curdled jellyfish matrimony had made out of him.

"Homicide was what that Mariana had perpetrated. He was looking well enough, but he had on a white collar and shoes, and you could tell in a minute that he'd speak polite and pay taxes and stick his little finger out while drinking, just like a sheep man or a citizen. Great skyrockets! but I hated to see Perry all corrupted and Willie-ized like that.

"He came out to the gate and shook hands; and I says with scorn, and speaking like a paroquet with the pip: 'Beg pardon—Mr. Rountree, I believe. Seems to me I sagatiated in your society once, if I am not mistaken.'

"'Oh, go to the devil, Buck,' says Perry, polite, as I was afraid he'd be.

"'Well, then,' says I, 'you poor contaminated adjunct of a sprinkling pot and degraded household pet, what did you go and do it for? Look at you, all decent and unobjectionable, and only fit to sit on juries and mend the woodhouse door. You was a man once. I have hostilities for all such acts. Why don't you go in the house and count the tidies or set the clock, and not stand out here in the atmosphere? A jack rabbit might come along and bite you.'

"'Now, Buck,' says Perry, speaking mild, and some sorrowful, 'you don't understand. A married man has got to be different. He feels different from a tough old cloudburst like you. It's sinful to waste time pulling up towns just to look at their roots, and playing faro and looking upon red liquor, and such restless policies as them.'

"'There was a time,' I says, and I expect I sighed when I mentioned it, 'when a certain domesticated little Mary's lamb I could name was some instructed himself in the line of nefarious sprightliness. I never expected, Perry, to see you reduced down from a full-grown pestilence to such a frivolous fraction of a man. Why,' says I, 'you've got a necktie on; and you speak a senseless kind of indoor drivel that reminds me of a storekeeper or a lady. You look to me like you might tote an umbrella and wear suspenders, and go home of nights.'

"'The little woman,' says Perry, 'has made some improvements, I believe. You can't understand, Buck. I haven't been away from the house at night since we was married.'

"We talked on a while, me and Perry, and as sure as I live, that man interrupted me in the middle of my talk to tell me about six tomato plants he had growing in his garden. Shoved his agricultural degradation right up under my nose while I was telling him about the fun we had tarring and feathering that faro dealer at California Pete's layout! But by and by Perry shows a flicker of sense.

"'Buck,' says he, 'I'll have to admit that it is a little dull at times. Not that I'm not perfectly happy with the little woman, but a man seems to require some excitement now and then. Now, I'll tell you: Mariana's gone visiting this afternoon, and she won't be home till seven o'clock. That's the limit for both of us—7 o'clock. Neither of us ever stays out a minute after that time unless we are together. Now, I'm glad you came along, Buck,' says Perry, 'for I'm feeling just like having one more rip-roaring razoo with you for the sake of old times. What you say to us putting in the afternoon having fun—I'd like it fine,' says Perry.

"I slapped that old captive range rider half across his little garden.

"'Get your hat, you old dried-up alligator,' I shouts—'you ain't dead yet. You're part human, anyhow, if you did get all bogged up in matrimony. We'll take this town to pieces and see what makes it tick. We'll make all kinds of profligate demands upon the science of cork pulling. You'll grow horns yet, old muley cow,' says I, punching Perry in the ribs, 'if you trot around on the trail of vice with your Uncle Buck.'

"'I'll have to be home by seven, you know,' says Perry again.

"'Oh, yes,' says I, winking to myself, for I knew the kind of seven o'clocks Perry Rountree got back by after he once got to passing repartee with the bartenders.

"We goes down to the Gray Mule saloon—that old 'dobe building by the depot.

"'Give it a name,' says I, as soon as we got one hoof on the foot rest.

"'Sarsaparilla,' says Perry.

"You could have knocked me down with a lemon peeling.

"'Insult me as much as you want to,' I says to Perry, 'but don't startle the bartender. He may have heart disease. Come on, now; your tongue got twisted. The tall glasses,' I orders, 'and the bottle in the left hand corner of the ice chest.'

"'Sarsaparilla,' repeats Perry, and then his eyes get animated, and I see he's got some great scheme in his mind he wants to emit.

"'Buck,' he says, all interested, 'I'll tell you what! I want to make this a red letter day. I've been keeping close at home, and I want to turn myself loose. We'll have the highest old time you ever saw. We'll go in the back room here and play checkers till half past six.'

"I leaned against the bar, and I says to Gotch-eared Mike, who was on watch:

"'For God's sake don't mention this. You know what Perry used to be. He's had the fever, and the doctor says we must humor him.'

"'Give us the checkerboard and the men, Mike,' says Perry. 'Come on, Buck, I'm just wild to have some excitement.'

"I went in the back room with Perry. Before we closed the door, I says to Mike:

"'Don't ever let it straggle out from under your hat that you seen Buck Caperton fraternal with sarsaparilla or persona grata with a checkerboard, or I'll make a swallow-fork in your other ear.'

"I locked the door and me and Perry played checkers. To see that poor old humiliated piece of household bric-a-brac sitting there and sniggering out loud whenever he jumped a man, and all obnoxious with animation when he got into my king row, would have made a sheep dog sick with mortification. Him that was once satisfied only when he was pegging six boards at keno or giving the faro dealers nervous prostration—to see him pushing them checkers about like Sally Louisa at a school children's party—why, I was all smothered up with mortification.

"And I sits there playing the black men, all sweating for fear somebody I knew would find it out. And I thinks to myself about this marrying business, and how it seems to be the same kind of a game as that Mrs. Delilah played. She give her old man a hair cut, and everybody knows what a man's head looks like after a woman cuts his hair. And then when the Pharisees came around to guy him he was so shamed that he went to work and kicked the whole house down on top of the whole outfit. 'Them married men,' thinks I, 'lose all their spirit and instinct for riot and foolishness. They won't drink, they won't buck the tiger, they won't even fight. What do they want to go and stay married for?' I asks myself.

"But Perry seems to be having hilarity in considerable quantities.

"'Buck, old hoss,' says he, 'isn't this just the hell-roaringest time we ever had in our lives? I don't know when I've been stirred up so. You see, I've been sticking pretty close to home since I married, and I haven't been on a spree in a long time.'

"'Spree!' Yes, that's what he called it. Playing checkers in the back room of the Gray Mule! I suppose it did seem to him a little immoral and nearer to a prolonged debauch than standing over six tomato plants with a sprinkling pot.

"Every little bit Perry looks at his watch and says:

"'I got to be home, you know, Buck, at seven.'

"'All right,' I'd say. 'Romp along and move. This here excitement's killing me. If I don't reform some, and loosen up the strain of this checkered dissipation I won't have a nerve left.'

"It might have been half past six when commotions began to go on outside in the street. We heard a yelling and a six-shootering, and a lot of galloping and manoeuvres.

"'What's that?' I wonders.

"'Oh, some nonsense outside,' says Perry. 'It's your move. We just got time to play this game.'

"'I'll just take a peep through the window,' says I, 'and see. You can't expect a mere mortal to stand the excitement of having a king jumped and listen to an unidentified conflict going on at the same time.'

"The Gray Mule saloon was one of them old Spanish 'dobe buildings, and the back room only had two little windows a foot wide, with iron bars in 'em. I looked out one and I see the cause of the rucus.

"There was the Trimble gang—ten of 'em—the worst outfit of desperadoes and horse thieves in Texas, coming up the street shooting right and left. They was coming right straight for the Gray Mule. Then they got past the range of my sight, but we heard 'em ride up to the front door, and then they socked the place full of lead. We heard the big looking glass behind the bar knocked all to pieces and the bottles crashing. We could see Gotch-eared Mike in his apron running across the plaza like a coyote, with the bullets puffing up the dust all around him. Then the gang went to work in the saloon, drinking what they wanted and smashing what they didn't.

"Me and Perry both knew that gang, and they knew us. The year before Perry married him and me was in the same ranger company—and we fought that outfit down on the San Miguel, and brought back Ben Trimble and two others for murder.

"'We can't get out,' says I. 'We'll have to stay in here till they leave.'

"Perry looked at his watch.

"'Twenty-five to seven,' says he. 'We can finish that game. I got two men on you. It's your move, Buck. I got to be home at seven, you know.'

"We sat down and went on playing. The Trimble gang had a rough house for sure. They were getting good and drunk. They'd drink a while and holler a while, and then they'd shoot up a few bottles and glasses. Two or three times they came and tried to open our door. Then there was some more shooting outside, and I looked out the window again. Ham Gossett, the town marshal, had a posse in the houses and stores across the street, and was trying to bag a Trimble or two through the windows.

"I lost that game of checkers. I'm free in saying that I lost three kings that I might have saved if I had been corralled in a more peaceful pasture. But that drivelling married man sat there and cackled when he won a man like an unintelligent hen picking up a grain of corn.

"When the game was over Perry gets up and looks at his watch.

"'I've had a glorious time, Buck,' says he, 'but I'll have to be going now. It's a quarter to seven, and I got to be home by seven, you know.'

"I thought he was joking.

"'They'll clear out or be dead drunk in half an hour or an hour,' says I. 'You ain't that tired of being married that you want to commit any more sudden suicide, are you?' says I, giving him the laugh.

"'One time,' says Perry, 'I was half an hour late getting home. I met Mariana on the street looking for me. If you could have seen her, Buck—but you don't understand. She knows what a wild kind of a snoozer I've been, and she's afraid something will happen. I'll never be late getting home again. I'll say good-bye to you now, Buck.'

"I got between him and the door.

"'Married man,' says I, 'I know you was christened a fool the minute the preacher tangled you up, but don't you never sometimes think one little think on a human basis? There's ten of that gang in there, and they're pizen with whisky and desire for murder. They'll drink you up like a bottle of booze before you get half way to the door. Be intelligent now, and use at least wild hog sense. Sit down and wait till we have some chance to get out without being carried in baskets.'

"'I got to be home by seven, Buck,' repeats this henpecked thing of little wisdom, like an unthinking poll parrot. 'Mariana,' says he, 'll be looking out for me.' And he reaches down and pulls a leg out of the checker table. 'I'll go through this Trimble outfit,' says he, 'like a cottontail through a brush corral. I'm not pestered any more with a desire to engage in rucuses, but I got to be home by seven. You lock the door after me, Buck. And don't you forget—I won three out of them five games. I'd play longer, but Mariana—'

"'Hush up, you old locoed trail runner,' I interrupts. 'Did you ever notice your Uncle Buck locking doors against trouble? I'm not married,' says I, 'but I'm as big a d—d fool as any Mormon. One from four leaves three,' says I, and I gathers out another leg of the table. 'We'll go home at seven,' says I, 'whether it's the heavenly one or the other. May I see you home?' says I, 'you sarsaparilla drinking, checker-playing glutton for death and destruction.'

"We opened the door easy, and then stampeded for the front. Part of the gang was lined up at the bar, part of 'em was passing over the drinks, and two or three was peeping out the door and window taking shots at the marshal's crowd. The room was so full of smoke we got half way to the front door before they noticed us. Then I heard Berry Trimble's voice somewhere yell out:

"'How'd that Buck Caperton get in here?' and he skinned the side of my neck with a bullet. I reckon he felt bad over that miss, for Berry's the best shot south of the Southern Pacific railroad. But the smoke in the saloon was some too thick for good shooting.

"Me and Perry smashed over two of the gang with our table legs, which didn't miss like the guns did, and as we run out the door I grabbed a Winchester from a fellow who was watching the outside, and I turned and regulated the account of Mr. Berry.

"Me and Perry got out and around the corner all right. I never much expected to get out, but I wasn't going to be intimidated by that married man. According to Perry's idea, checkers was the event of the day, but if I am any judge of gentle recreations that little table leg parade through the Gray Mule saloon deserved the head lines in the bill of particulars.

"'Walk fast,' says Perry, 'it's two minutes to seven, and I got to be home by—'

"'Oh, shut up,' says I. 'I had an appointment as chief performer at an inquest at seven, and I'm not kicking about not keeping it.'

"I had to pass by Perry's little house. His Mariana was standing at the gate. We got there at five minutes past seven. She had on a blue wrapper, and her hair was pulled back smooth like little girls do when they want to look grown-folksy. She didn't see us till we got close, for she was gazing up the other way. Then she twisted around, and saw Perry, and [illegible] I heard her breathe long, just like a cow when you turn her calf in the lot, and she says: 'You're late, Perry.'

"'Five minutes,' says Perry, cheerful. 'Me and old Buck was having a game of checkers.'

"Perry introduces me to Mariana, and they ask me to come in. No, sir-ee. I'd had enough truck with married folks for that day. I says I'll be going along, and that I've spent a very pleasant afternoon with my old partner—'especially,' says I, just to jostle Perry, 'during that game when the table legs came all loose.' But I'd promised him not to let her know anything.

"I've been worrying over that business ever since it happened," continued Buck. "There's one thing about it that's got me all twisted up, and I can't figure it out."

"What was that?" I asked, as I rolled and handed Buck the last cigarette.

"Why, I'll tell you: When I saw the look that little woman give Perry when she turned round and saw him coming back to the ranch safe—why was it I got the idea all in a minute that that look of hers was worth more than the whole caboodle of us—sarsaparilla, checkers and all; and that the d—n fool in the game wasn't named Perry Rountree at all?"

SCREEN FACES OF HIS DEAD BUDDIES STARTLE SOLDIER

Moving Picture of War Scene Develops Dramatic Bit of Battle History

Ir[illegible] A. Lorimm [illegible] yesterday afternoon the steady click of a motion picture projector alone broke the tense silence. On the screen American soldiers were stumbling across shell torn ground in the face of a German cannonade. The audience sat tense and intent. Now and again a figure was seen to [illegible] the shattered earth.

[illegible] shifted [illegible] field [illegible] shell hole in which lay [illegible].

There was a stir in one side of the house. A low voice could be heard saying:

"Boy, that's me. Those are my buddies. That's at Montfaucon. It's us in there."

The picture clicked on. And then the lights went up and Harry Shephard of 12[illegible]3 Magnolia street, Oakland, sat the center of many inquiring and sympathetic glances. There were tears in his eyes.

SURVIVOR TELLS STORY

To a group of service men outside later he had a tale to tell, a tale as dramatic as any that have come out of the war, a tale that has been told before in Oakland but not with the new dramatic twist it took on yesterday.

"We were in the Argonne drive," he said. "I was sergeant of the first class with the Eighth Field Signal Corps of the Fourth Division, but I had been attached to the Thirty-ninth infantry. The drive was going ahead so fast that the signal systems couldn't keep up with it so we went in as infantrymen. It was on the 8th of September, I think. We took the town of Cuisy and went on across the plain of Montfaucon in the face of devilish machine gun fire. I had 42 men with me and our objective was a hill and a machine gun nest.

"Sergeant Charlie Robinson of the motion picture publicity section of the signal corps was with us. He climbed out of shell holes now and then and got back of us and took pictures.

CAMERA MAN KILLED

"Well, we got up the hill and cleaned out the machine gun nest and took twenty two prisoners. Then Robinson was hit by a bursting shell. It tore his chest out. We saved his camera and sent it back as was our duty. It wasn't scratched.

"Those pictures I saw this afternoon were in that camera then. Those were our men. I saw myself lying there in a shell hole and recognized it all. You can even see the hill we took just beyond the shell hole."

And that is all of Shepherd's story. He told how on the day following they advanced into ugly German fire again and how as he again lay in a hole where he and four others had dug in while his contingent awaited replacements because of heavy losses there came the scream of a German shell and an upheaval that buried him.

When they finally found him his head was split wide by a shell fragment. His four companions were dead.

SURVIVOR WEARS SCAR

The scar of his wound Shepherd wears today, a decoration no honor cross will ever equal.

The other men were Sergeant Clarence [illegible] Joseph, Sergeant Eudy, Paul [illegible] Clayton, private, and another private named Czchowski. They are all in that picture.

"It was pretty hard when I found I was looking at our own men," said Shepherd apologetically.

The pictures which are being shown by the American Legion were taken during the fighting done by the Ninety first division in the Argonne. They will be repeated this afternoon and evening.

Augmenting the war pictures, the navy recruiting inspector's office of the Western Division has donated two reels to the legion exhibition showing how the army got across and some lively action at sea. The reels are entitled "Destroyer" and "Transports in Action" and reveal actual fights with submarines and glimpses of the deck of the Leviathan, the greatest war troop ship when the doughboys went across.

You Know the Poem---Here's Man Who Wrote It

EDGAR A. GUEST, poet and lecturer who contributes The TRIBUNE'S "Just Folks" Department. One of his best known poems is also reproduced. It's an old acquaintance and you'll enjoy meeting it again. Edgar Guest is coming to Oakland to talk to TRIBUNE readers.

IT COULDN'T BE DONE

Somebody said that it couldn't be done
 But he with a chuckle replied
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one
 Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin
 On his face. If he worried he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
 That couldn't be done, and he did it.

Somebody scoffed: "Oh, you'll never do that;
 At least no one ever has done it";
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
 And the first thing we knew he'd begun it.
With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
 Without any doubting or quiddit,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
 That couldn't be done, and he did it.

There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done,
 There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you one by one,
 The dangers that wait to assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
 Just take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
 That "cannot be done," and you'll do it.

MEETING PLANNED FOR IRISH CAUSE

A meeting will be held by Alameda county sympathizers with the Sinn Fein in the Oakland Auditorium Wednesday evening to which mayors, judges and public officials of the cities of the Eastbay district have been invited.

The meeting will be presided over by William A. Lynch and the general committee for the meeting includes, according to announcement of those who are organizing it: Joseph J. Rosborough, John H. Chambers, W. H. Donohue, Robert M. Fitzgerald, Philip M. Carey, Leo J. McCarthy, John Tuohy, John F. Cox, William Hayes, John H. Tolin, R. H. Hammond, William Hamilton and others.

The principal speaker will be the Rev. Peter C. Yorke. Other speakers yet to be selected, according to the committee's announcement, will be a Protestant minister, a Jewish rabbi and a local superior court judge. The meeting is being arranged by the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, of which Rev. Yorke is California director.

S. S. PARADE PUT OVER ONE WEEK

There will be no Sunday school parade today. Next Sunday at 2:30 in the tabernacle there will be a mass meeting for children. If the day is fair the Sunday school scholars will meet at the downtown churches and march to the meeting. If raining the children will go directly to the tabernacle at Twenty-first and Broadway.

Evangelist John Brown will deliver a talk in which he will deal with problems of the children. Otis D. Ironmonger, associate evangelist and choir leader, promises a program of songs by the little folks. There will be other special features.

As there has been some confusion as to this children's meeting owing to mistaken announcements, John Brown asks that everybody interested make note of the hour and day, 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, January 29.

EDGAR A. GUEST, TRIBUNE POET, IS TO BE VISITOR

Writer of Heart Prose Will Interpret His Muse to Eastbay Folk

Edgar A. Guest, whose [illegible] and the [illegible] come to know through the columns of The OAKLAND TRIBUNE, is going to pay a visit here and read his poems and lecture on them.

That announcement is of extraordinary interest, even [illegible] above the [illegible] bound to [illegible] in life [illegible] the mantle of late Whitcomb Riley [illegible] American poet.

The author of the [illegible] heart [illegible] California for a brief time, and yesterday word was received from him that he would gladly accept an invitation which The OAKLAND TRIBUNE extended to him that he should pay this city and the Eastbay a visit.

Guest said that he would come to Oakland for five days, arriving on Sunday, February [illegible].

TRIBUNE'S DIRECTION

What places he will visit and where he will read his poems have not been decided but will be told later. The engagement will be under the direction of The TRIBUNE, however, and will be before several church and fraternal and civic meetings. They will too be free, as it is not a money making venture tour that the poet is making, but one by which he hopes to get into the intimate touch with his thousands of readers and by that to win friends.

Years ago The TRIBUNE began the publication of Edgar Guest's poems as a feature of its daily and Sunday editions.

About the Tribune "Just Folks" has become one of those shrines of daily inspiration turned to nightly in hundreds of homes and regarded with appreciation and affection among young and old.

LEARN HIS WORK

Until now, however, Eastbay people have not had the opportunity to know Guest the man and to learn how he views his own great work.

Edgar Guest in reality is just like his poems, unaffected and sincere, with a great love for humanity. He is a unique figure in letters, a man wholly unspoiled by success.

As a speaker and reader of his poems the poet is as natural, as kindly and as direct as the flow of his verse. He does not and cannot glow with fine oratory; he does not preach; there are no frills; he just talks. Perhaps he has a few stories to tell and then he is off into one of his poems before the listener is aware.

To those who have heard him his readings are always held as delightful as his poems and with the added personal touch. It will be this touch that he will bring to Oakland and the Eastbay.

SEVERAL INVITATIONS

In his present trip west the poet has refused a number of other and in several has accepted invitations similar to that which The TRIBUNE has sent him and which he has said he was glad to accept. California is a delight to him and his [illegible] to new plans of work, and it may be that he will have a few new poems with which to delight his hearers when he reaches here.

Guest was and is essentially a newspaper man, for all his great gift of poetry. He grew up in Detroit and it was as the conductor of a column in the Detroit Free Press that he grew. Unlike many another poet he is [illegible] in his own country for the [illegible] tion of abiding faith that grew up round him in his followers warmed him into the expanding flow of warm unfaltering that now is his.

It is expected that the poet will bring to Oakland members of his family who have been traveling with him and it is certain that he will be given a remarkable greeting.

TWO WOMEN ARE BADLY INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Motor Dashes Into a Lumber Wagon; Girl Also Is Victim

RICHMOND, Jan. [illegible].—Mrs. [illegible] Agostino of the American hotel and her sister, Mrs. S. Actis of Marin Drive and Richmond avenue, are at the Craven hospital suffering from serious injuries as a result of a collision of the automobile in which they were riding with a lumber wagon on Cutting boulevard near San Pablo avenue this afternoon. It is feared that Mrs. Actis, who expects soon to become a mother, is internally injured and there is a possibility that the hurt will prove fatal to her.

Edith Bertone, age 6, suffered two cuts over her right eye from flying glass in the collision.

John Larricea of the Columbo hotel, driver of the car, and C. P. Dooling of Twenty-second street near Florida avenue, who was driving the lumber wagon, escaped uninjured.

The automobile was badly wrecked and one of the horses hitched to the lumber wagon was injured.

DRIVER TOO BUSY

According to the information gained by the police, Larricea, who was driving the automobile, was wrapping a cloak about the Bertone girl who was in the seat beside him and did not see the load of lumber. The automobile crashed into the rear of the lumber wagon and projecting lumber crashed through the windshield over the head of the little girl. Had a grown person been in the seat fatal injury would probably have resulted.

Mrs. Agostino and Mrs. Actis were in the rear seat of the machine and were thrown violently against the front seat.

A call for an ambulance was sent in but before the ambulance arrived a passing motorist took the injured to the Abbott emergency hospital here where they were treated by Dr. St. John Healy and Dr. H. S. Abbott and later removed to the Craven hospital.

SUFFERS BROKEN RIB

Mrs. Agostino is suffering from a fractured rib, contusions of the chest and her tongue was cut through. It is not believed she is internally injured and the greatest danger is from pneumonia which may result from the injury to her chest.

Mrs. Actis is suffering from a sprained back and bruises and internal injuries are feared. Her condition is considered the most serious from the fact that she is expecting to become a mother.

Firemen Rescue Toy Balloons Lost by Woman

IT was only a puff of wind that did it, but it brought the hook and ladder engine of the central fire station, with Chief Elliott Whitehead directing the work.

The elderly woman who stands on the corner by the city hall and sells toy balloons was walking across the street with a new supply of balloons late yesterday when a threatening street car and a puff of the breeze sent the balloons skyward. They lodged against the trolley wires that cross one corner of the city plaza.

Then something occurred which caused everybody to stop and stand still, helpless. The woman stumbled and fell over the railing that surrounds the plaza, and for a moment she did not rise. Someone assisted her to her feet and then she stood, hands upstretched, crying. For she had spent her last penny for a new supply of balloons that now threatened to leap into the sky.

The rasping sound of the siren fire signal scattered the gathering crowd and the hook and ladder company went to the rescue. The balloons were captured and returned to the owner—also several extra dimes and nickels as good measure.

Mother Gives Child Poison by Mistake

BERKELEY, Jan. [illegible].—James Haberlin, three and one-half-year-old son of Mrs. Joseph Haberlin, 2141 San Pablo avenue, is in the emergency hospital here in a serious condition as a result of his mother giving him a teaspoon of poison this afternoon in a mistake for cough medicine. Hospital physicians declared that he would recover.

EASTER VESPERS FOR OUTDOORS BEING PLANNED

Jay B. Nash Asked to Take Charge of the Beautiful Annual Service.

Plans to make the second annual observance of the Easter sunset vespers a community affair, and hold it at a new point more advantageous than the site where it was conducted last year, were announced last night by Harold French, president of the Contra Costa Hills Club. French has proposed to Jay B. Nash, superintendent of the Oakland recreation department and a member of the East Bay Conservation Club, that he should take charge of the program in which all denominations are invited to participate this coming Easter. Co-operation has been asked of all religious denominations in a union community outdoor service and the recreation department has been requested to conduct a non sectarian program on Mount St. Margaret Mary.

A COMMUNITY AFFAIR

Plans are being formulated for conducting an orchestra of 100 pieces, a chorus of 1000 voices and the gathering of a congregation of 100,000 pilgrims on a height known at present as Mount Saint Margaret Mary, site of a monastery which has been designated by Louis Christian Mullgardt, creator of the Court of Abundance at the Panama Pacific International Exposition.

While the idea of holding the Easter sunset vespers was originated with the club last year it is planned to make it a community affair in which all organizations, religious as well as civic, will participate.

SEATTLE Jan 22—The shooting last night which resulted in the death of Police Detective O'Brien and the serious wounding of two other officers and a bystander by John Smith was discussed heatedly throughout the city today and indignation was at a high pitch An information charging murder in the first degree was prepared this morning by Deputy Prosecutor John D Carmody and was filed against Smith

The prosecuting attorney's office will do everything in its power to bring this case to a speedy trial [illegible] determination said Prosecuting Attorney Douglas this afternoon When asked to define his emphasis of speedy trial the prosecutor said

This office believes that speed is peculiarly essential in this case

Every policeman will draw his gun first in stopping suspects Chief W B Searing has ordered The order followed a conference with Mayor Caldwell The chief asked that all citizens co operate with officers and submit to questioning when stopped

Mayor Caldwell has announced that he will ask the city council for forty additional policemen Whether this is the direct result of the two shooting affrays which have occurred in the last few days—both resulting fatally to police officers—the mayor did not indicate It has been pointed out that in both these shootings the bandits were taken into custody and it is hinted that the great number of petty robberies which have been perpetrated during the past few weeks may have had some bearing on the mayor's announced request for additional police

BRITAIN DENIES PLANS TO SEIZE CONTROL OF AIR

Officials Admit However That Great Strides Are Being Made

By RUSSELL BROWNING
United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON Jan 22—Great strides are being made in the science of aeronautics in Great Britain it was learned today at the air ministry But officials denied that Britain is contemplating seizing control of the air as stated by General Mitchell of the American aviation service in an interview given the United Press this week

Britain has not the slightest intention or intention of entering the race for aerial supremacy an officer of the ministry declared Great strides are being made in the science of aeronautics but I am not aware of any official desire to concentrate on gaining control of the air

MAKE EXPERIMENTS

It was pointed out that financial estimates of the air ministry up to the end of 1923 do not call for an increase in expenditures in connection with the building of service squadrons Also the material which has been ordered is barely sufficient to keep the air force up to normal size

However European nations are known to be conducting important experiments with aircraft Their air ministries believe the next war will be fought largely above the clouds and that the air navies may render fleets and fortifications obsolete as means of national defense

BIG SHIPS SAID

Experiments are being conducted with huge planes capable of carrying large numbers of soldiers as well as enormous bombs with enough high explosives to sink a battleship or blow a small town to atoms in one blast

With the League of Nations in existence and much talk of disarmament in Europe and America these experiments are being conducted on a small scale and in many instances by private concerns with which the government has no direct connection They are being kept in the background If disarmament fails however and a new war looms Europe is likely to engage in an air navy building competition that will throw all previous armament races in the shade and fill the skies with fleets at maneuvers and battle practice

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home Made Mixture

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it with a home made mixture:

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desirable shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Advertisement.

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.—Advertisement.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 423G Marcellus avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—Advertisement.

DOUG. FAIRBANKS IN "THE MARK OF ZORRO"

Mr and Mrs Oakland

There have been many productions featuring and starring Doug Fairbanks but, in my opinion, never has there been a photoplay that has displayed as much masterful acting, humor action or novel situations as "The Mark of Zorro" which shows here starting next Sunday for seven days.

I recommend "The Mark of Zorro" as the best picture that has been made since "The Birth of a Nation" and I advise every man woman and child to see it.

ESPIONAGE OVER CABLES.

Newcomb Carlton, president of the West... ...nion Telegraph Company, recently made the ...sting disclosure before a Congressional ...ittee that all cable messages handled by ...fices of his company in Great Britain, are ... over to the British secret service for in- ...n. This occurs ten days after the messages ...een transmitted or delivered and the Brit- ...ernment retains them sufficiently long to ... their contents and to make copies of them. ...arlton said United States government mes ...were included in those turned over to the ... secret service.

...e is authority in British municipal law for ...roceeding, but the American people are ... shocked at the disclosure. That the ... messages from the American government to its diplomatic and consular officers in Europe, and from them to the government, should be demanded for inspection is violative of every consideration of courtesy and confidence by one friendly government for another. It is scandalous. It is questionable whether this government should maintain representatives in England if all communications with them must be inspected by the British government

Acquiescence in the practice also may be dangerous to the future safety of the United States. If the British government has been taking copies of the code messages exchanged between the United States and its agents, Great Britain now knows the secret diplomatic and consular codes. Translations of these messages are daily sent by the American embassy in London to the British foreign office and it has required an expert in codes only a few days to obtain practical knowledge of the code books used by the United States.

If this country has kept any secrets from the British government it is because the latter has not taken the time to discover them. All the necessary facilities are placed at Great Britain's disposal by the cable companies.

HASTE UNNECESSARY.

Former United State Senator and Secretary of State Elihu Root has given the soundest counsel yet uttered in connection with the discussion now going on in Congress, and in pacifist circles outside Congress, regarding the question of disarmament. In a letter to Chairman Butler of the House committee on naval affairs, Mr. Root wrote:

"The subject is especially difficult because of the disturbed condition of Europe, and it is difficult because too many nations have apprehension of danger against which they wish to guard. The new administration will learn soon what is the best way to deal with these difficulties."

It is the suggestion of this experienced and able statesman that the question of disarmament should wait until President Harding and his Secretary of State may have an opportunity to gain authentic information regarding European conditions and the disposition of European governments. Since disarmament in one form or another has been mentioned in political circles continually during the last one hundred years of the Republic, obviously no great harm can befall the idea if a decision by this government is postponed for two or three months.

When disarmament or restriction upon military and naval programs may safely be undertaken this government should not only be ready to acquiesce in an international program, but it should assume a leading part in accomplishing relief for the nations from a part, at least, of the great burden of military and naval preparedness.

But the present time is not one for hasty action. World order is too unsettled and national conflicts of opinion and design too severe to permit of unguarded action. It is therefore the better part of American wisdom and safety to await the inauguration of the new administration before any definite commitment of policy is undertaken. Undoubtedly Mr. Root's counsel will be heeded by Congress.

From the testimony of medical officers and the principals themselves before a naval court investigating the personal encounter between Lieutenants Hinton and Farrell at Mattice, after their escape from death in a wilderness in which their balloon had landed them, much consideration should be given the ragged nerves of the naval officers which followed their trying experiences. Farrell knocked Hinton down after he learned that the latter had written letters which reflected on his companion's courage. This was a grievous breach of service discipline and rules, but the offense is not all on one side. Hinton wrote intimate accounts of his experience to his wife and the latter, with regrettable indiscretion, made them public. The statement written by Hinton should not have been made by one officer concerning another, and there is apt to follow the investigation now going on a regulation forbidding naval officers from writing their wives concerning their official experience in advance of reporting them to their superior officers.

Two police judges of San Francisco have been ordered to appear before the State supreme court to answer charge in disbarment proceedings brought by the San Francisco Bar Association. Without expressing any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the two judges or the merits of the disbarment proceedings, it is seemly to entertain the hope that if they are guilty of the offenses charged against them the Supreme Court will deprive them of the privilege to practice the legal profession. Men whose moral turpitude unfit them as judges are unfit to belong to any recognized profession.

Secretary of the Treasury Houston yesterday confirmed the prediction of THE TRIBUNE of three days ago that the problem of adjusting the war debts between the United States and the European Allies will be passed on to President Harding. But it was not difficult to guess the intentions of the Wilson administration. On November 3 it adopted a policy of inaction.

It is reported that President Wilson will veto the Kahn bill seeking to reduce the regular army to 175,000 men. Unless it can be shown that a larger force is necessary, which does not now seem likely, Congress will override the veto.

NOTES and COMMENT

Senator Purkitt's bill to remove the possibility of probation for those convicted of highway robbery, kidnaping with automobiles and such crimes as gangster attacks on girls is entirely reasonable. Such discrimination is desirable if the entire probation law is not repealed or drastically amended—which latter would not do a violence to law and order.

Stories are quite numerous of vineyardists, who supposed they would be ruined when the eighteenth amendment carried, finding that they have come into an unprecedented prosperity instead. Generally they are getting five times as much for their grapes as they were able to realize in the prior time. Vineyardists will not probably be found in the opposition ranks if the plan to except wine from the prohibited list ever makes headway.

Senator Irwin, in moving a reconsideration of the vote favorable to a deficiency measure appropriating a million to make good unauthorized expenditures of eleven departments, wanted to know the use of a legislature to appropriate money if the department heads pay no attention to their limitations in this direction. Perhaps some of his colleagues will regard this as a foolish question, but if the Senator is able to worry those responsible for deficits he is likely to score a useful point.

The jailing of Juror Brown in San Francisco for talking about a case after the jury had disagreed and had been discharged may not be readily understood by everybody. There is a general understanding that jurors may not talk to outsiders pending a trial, but that they are free to utter themselves after the trial. The offense of this juror was the nature of his disclosure.

Kansas City has attempted to meet the crime wave, which seems to specialize there on bank robbery, by a standing reward of $500 for every bandit killed while in the act of robbing a bank. One result of this plan may be the lurking of armed hunters in the vicinity of banks, on the chance of potting robbers. It would be rather profitable game, and it might pay to stalk it persistently and patiently.

The Fresno Herald tells of the crime wave: "The Malaga garage on the State highway, three miles south of Fresno, was entered last night by burglars who ransacked the place, finally leaving with nine tires and the safe. The case was investigated by C. H. Houser, county finger expert."

President-elect Harding has extended the olive branch to the South, as far as anybody can extend it. If there is any such need as olive branches between the sections this effort ought to bear fruit, and anyhow, it evinces the good will of the next President of the United States.

The appearance of ostrich-skin shoes in Boston sounds more like a fad than an economic attempt. There is not such an overplus of ostriches that their skins are likely to compete with those of the calf. But "ostrich-skin shoes" has an impressive sound, and likely the idea will catch on for a time.

A despatch states that "tights are no bar to women on the streets of Ottawa." It is at once suggested that the climate there might be a bar to tights as exclusive apparel—at least to their being taken up as a fashion.

The bread line crowds close upon the heels of flush times. Considerably less than a year ago it was difficult to find and hire men to work. But news from Montreal and Detroit now is to the effect that comprehensive measures have been taken in these places to feed the hungry. There never before was such a sudden slump, at least in this country.

It is not reassuring to learn of so many officials being caught in the prohibition enforcement net. That a deputy sheriff of Alameda county should be run down by enforcement officials, and a charge laid against him of maintaining an illicit still, suggests that the great profits which the game promise overcome whatever moral stamina such officers possess

SPIRIT of the STATE PRESS.

We have all heard that cheating at college has been so bad that in some instances one student would actually take the examination for another. We all despise a cheat and that kind is so utterly contemptible that no one could possibly condone it. That is the sort of thing that Dr. Burrows is trying to combat and he should have every support in trying to end it.—Stockton Record.

Even newspaper men sometimes seem to get hungry for office. Note how quickly Chester Rowell snapped at the job President Wilson offered him on the Shipping Board, and then when he came to think about it that the job would only last about three months, with equal ardor he grabbed at Governor Stephens' offer on the Railroad Commission. — Calaveras Prospect.

Evidently San Francisco will have to join hands with Oakland and other surrounding towns to maintain a solid front against Los Angeles with her tremendous gain in legislators and congressmen as proposed under the new census readjustment. The taking in of many large towns by Los Angeles is having its effect on the representation in the State Legislature and Congress.—Benicia Herald.

In spite of the large tracts planted to potatoes in this vicinity and throughout the delta country, the lowly spud from Idaho finds its way to California and even into the homes of Rio Vistans. Several days ago a considerable shipment of Idaho potaties arrived here from San Francisco markets.—Rio Vista Banner.

ORGANIC EVOLUTION

The Inexorable Rule of Patience Imposed Upon the Biologist in Following His Working Plan to Discover the Secrets of Creation.

W. E. ALLEN,
Of the Scripps Institution of Biological Research.

A few years ago a rather prominent religious worker of my acquaintance with whom I had just been playing a game of hand ball, asked me if it were not true that the doctrine of evolution had been abandoned. He went on to say that he rarely heard it mentioned any more and that this fact seemed to indicate that it had entirely lost influence. I replied that on the contrary the theory was so generally accepted that no well informed person thought of denying it, that there was, however, a great deal of controversy amongst scientists as to the method of evolution. Just as one religionist thinks that baptism by immersion is essential to eternal salvation, while another thinks it may be dispensed with; just as one thinks that all access to Deity must be through an ordained priesthood, while another thinks he may directly approach the Throne of Grace, and just as one thinks that right living is necessary while another holds that even the meanest is saved by faith—so scientists differ in their views as to the details of operation of a process which they all regard, practically, as well established fact.

While every theologian has a fervent wish to save his soul from perdition, it is difficult to find one who does not theorize and speculate as to how this object is to be attained. In such theorizing he is showing a perfectly natural human tendency and also following a line of action which is necessary in seeking a successful solution for any complex problem or series of problems.

An architect develops and follows certain plans or theories in constructing a building for his client. In some cases he studies ancient ruins of buildings and works out certain theories as to how they were constructed by the men of those days. By such studies he not only widens his viewpoint but he often gets direct suggestion as to details of construction of some building which he has in mind. No one finds fault with him for that. Most of us think that such mental activity show valuable qualities in an architect.

Every teacher has more or less of a working plan or theory as to what ought to be done in a year of work and as to how it ought to be done. The most important part of this theory relates to the probable development of the minds of the pupils in connection with the work. It is derived from personal experience, from direct observation and from reports of the experience of others. We should not like to have a teacher for our children who did not have a working plan of some sort, the best obtainable by that teacher. If some one came along with a better working plan, we should hope that our teacher might use it.

We might multiply indefinitely examples of workers in various complex situations of life who find it not only convenient, but necessary to have a working plan. The scientist is no exception to the rule. The evolution theory is such a working plan which is in use by all sorts of scientists (and, to some extent by the whole population).

It has been the peculiar misfortune of biological scientists to incur the opprobrium of many church leaders and particularly of religious fanatics. This is evidently because the theory of evolution when sufficiently developed was invoked in aid of theorization as to man's origin and his relation to other natural objects.

It is historically well known that organic evolution has been more or less frequently mentioned as a possibility since a time some hundreds of years before Christ. But for many centuries men were too ignorant of the inter-relationships of natural phenomena to be able to state it as a definite theory or working plan or to use it if so stated. Even such able and brilliant scientists as Linnaens and Cuvier were not able to see clearly enough through the maze of amassed information to form a comprehensive theory. Hence the one adopted the churchman's notion of a special creation, and the other multiplied it into a number of special creations.

Darwin took the array of facts which had already been accumulated and painfully added to it a stupendous list of other facts all of which he classified according to their natural affiliations and he thus caught a vision of the theory of Natural Selection for which he is especially noted. Wallace reached the same results by the short cut of a lucky guess. Darwin was never fully satisfied with his statement of the theory of evolution because his own knowledge was so wide that he knew of many cases which it did not exactly fit. But on the other hand, he lacked vast stores of information which his own work led others to gather in, and so, like Linnaens and Cuvier, he fell short of the statement of a perfect working plan. Darwin's plan has not been discarded or discredited, but it has itself been subject to evolutionary development. It has been expanded and re-adjusted and is even now in process of further development. But, after all, it is merely a working plan by use of which the biologist tries to get an understanding of the laws of life and their operation. Even in its imperfect form it is working amazingly well, though not so well that scientists would refuse to change to another if it proved to be better. The discoveries of Mendel and De Vries have simply been incorporated in the great general theory of Evolution. The main dispute amongst biologists is concerning which part of the theory is most important. Most of them regard evolution as a law, the details of whose operations are still not clear and so require the use of lesser theories for their study and discussion.

The question of spontaneous generation is illustrative of this point. Scientists are not able to directly originate living substance nor even to observe that it originates in nature. Hence they must fall back on theories that it may have originated itself in the past and that it may possibly do so now. There is nothing about such theory to discredit the creative activities of God. To a scientist who sees constant operation of law in nature it seems reasonable to think of God as an orderly Being and of His originating life in an orderly way, i. e., by combinations of certain substances under certain favorable conditions. It is also reasonable to expect orderly development (evolution) after such origination.

Because there are still many things about life and living things which we are not able to fully understand, and because there are many applications of the law of evolution which we are still unable to make, it is an easy matter for any one to ask questions which a biologist cannot answer. He does not claim omniscience simply because he thinks he has traced orderly action over a large field of the operation of natural (God made) law. Two questions quite commonly raised can, however, be given partial answer.

First, people are often puzzled by degeneration or loss of a part of the body of an animal or plant, e. g., modern elephants and modern men have fewer teeth and in some respects poorer than in ancient times. The question is as to whether that is part of an evolutionary process. No scientist doubts that it is. Examples of that sort are innumerable. There is no case in which an animal or plant improves equally in every part. Some parts tend to be lost just as surely as others tend to improve. In many cases this reverse relationship is one of the most puzzling which the biologist has to meet but it is always clear that the loss is occurring accordingly to evolutionary law just as surely as is the gain.

Second, is there inheritance of acquired characters? This is the question over which there has been the most heated controversy among biologists. Definition of the term alone has provoked voluminous discussion. Hence it may be understood that one who mentions "acquired characters" is not speaking in words or phrases but books. Needless to say that few of us can pretend to follow it. Nevertheless, we can say this, that it now appears probable that a paper by M. F. Guyer and E. A. Smith of the University of Wisconsin which was published in the Journal of Experimental Zoology, August 20, 1920, is of epoch making importance. In this paper Professor Guyer and his assistant give tangible proof of the inheritance of an eye defect in rabbits which was artificially produced in the parents. This inheritance was traced through five or six generations. Since Professor Guyer has opened the way we may expect to have rapid accumulation of great volumes of such proof.

As a free people we cannot deny to science the use of productive plans and theories and the guidance of natural laws in the search for Eternal Truth. Nor can we divert from the flame of Truth if we wish to remain free. In fact Truth is the beacon light of our freedom. A god which cannot bear the light of truth is not a true god to think about. A religion which goes far afield to quench the torch of investigation which has shown us so many of the good things of life is a religion to arouse suspicion. If ultra religionists dislike the theory of Evolution let them go to Nature and produce a better theory, but let us remember that the theory which they discredit is the product of centuries of incredible toil through poverty, sickness, persecution, and death and that it is not to be lightly set aside at the whim or caprice of a relatively few of our people.

About YOUR HEALTH

How You May Reduce by Simple and Safe Means

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D., F. A. C. S.
Commissioner of Health, N. Y. City.

I do not think it is necessary for anyone, even with fat forebears, to get to be a corpulent sight.

If you love luxury and high living, if you ride when you should walk, if you sleep or loll around when you should exercise, if you insist on being waited on instead of waiting on yourself, your fatness is your own fault, and it serves you right.

A few days ago I had occasion to testify in a legal matter. Arriving a few minutes before the stated hour, and then having to wait for a tardy presiding officer, I passed the time watching the other persons in the room.

The stenographer was a fine looking young woman, properly plump, but to my critical eye possessing certain symptoms indicating approaching fatness. She was free to take this quarter of an hour or more in exercise and in filling her lungs with pure air. It was but a step to the outside sunlight, and the attendant would gladly have called her when she was actually needed.

I know exactly how she felt. She had just had her lunch, had been breathing the stale air of the room, and was sleepy. It was easier to lop down in her chair and take a siesta than it was to exert herself in needed exercise.

This young woman is an alert and brainy person. Should she happen to read these lines she will say:

"The doctor is right. I know I ought not to be so lazy, and I truly intend to take more exercise."

But the trouble is, she doesn't take the exercise.

Soon she will find herself padded with superfluous flesh. Her face will be round as a football, no corset will hide her proportions, walking will be an exertion, and it will be too late to mend.

There are two kinds of persons who need medical advice: The nervous, active, energetic individual, and the plump, self-contained, indolent, contented and ease-loving person.

The first variety should adopt the physical manners of the other, and the second group should seize upon the energy and activity of the first group. Reversal of habits would work wonders in increased health and physical beauty.

The office woman and the office man—every person engaged in a sedentary calling—should take every possible occasion to exercise

Stand erect, throw back your shoulders, draw in your stomach, raise yourself repeatedly on your toes. Get a punching bag or a pair of soft and well-stuffed boxing gloves. In either exercise do a lot of "foot work." Jump around, dodge, bend the body. In short, put every muscle into the game.

My advice to all plump persons past 21 is this.

Girls, hunt up that old skipping rope!

Boys, resurrect the hoop you used to roll!

Put them to work!

Now, for a word of warning

Don't overdo these sensible exercises. If your heart isn't just right they may be damaging. Break into the new exercise gradually. You will soon know by the effect whether the routine you have adopted is safe and beneficial.

Unless you develop honest sweat you haven't taken all the medicine. The longer it requires to develop the sweat—provided, of course, that you are really working and not loafing on the new job—the better your health and the stronger your body. When you are "fit" you will be surprised what an amount of exercise you can take without perspiring.

Proportion the amount of your food to the degree of physical work you perform. The food consumed by the indoor and sedentary worker should be much less during the working months than it is during the vacation period, when physical activity is much greater.

It is just as unreasonable to eat the same amount of food every day of the year, regardless of physical performance, as it would be to feed into a slow-running and little-used city automobile in a given time the same amount of gasoline supplied the same car in a twenty-four hour endurance race.

Yet, this is exactly what is done by many corpulent persons.

Every person who is too stout should study food values and regulate his intake to his actual needs.

"My boy," he had said, "personal appearance is the greatest asset to a man in business. Not only neatness but a well groomed air is necessary for that promotion. Your suit is shabby and your overcoat is out of date to begin with. You must be dressed up."

"Can't do it on [illegible]," said Brown. "I'm dead broke. I won't borrow."

To which Jones replied: "My salary is a great deal [illegible] than yours and yet I always buy my clothes on the installment plan. Why should I tie my money up when it isn't necessary? HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Advertisement

Music Fund Left by Washington Found Untouched

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 22.—Establishment of a national conservatory of music where exclusively American music will be taught and developed may result from the disclosure by a local musician that George Washington created a fund of $[illegible]0,000 for this purpose which during over a century of interest drawing now amounts to approximately $2,500,000.

Mr. Flournoy Rivers, teacher of music here, announced today that Senator Borah of Idaho had agreed to introduce a bill in the senate making the fund available.

Mr. Rivers, accompanied by Walter Damrosch and Eugene Ysaye, noted musicians, recently interviewed President-elect Harding, she said, who promised his aid in the efforts to promote a national conservatory of music. The main institution, according to Mr. Rivers, will be maintained at the national capital, with branches throughout the country.

OPIUM SMUGGLING IN CHINA GROWING

By CHAS. EDWARD HOGUE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, Jan. 22.—Opium smuggling is being carried on more extensively today than at any other time since traffic in the drug was forbidden by law, according to customs and police authorities. Seizures of large quantities of raw and prepared opium are being made almost daily. There are some arrests, but the "higher ups" appear to be well protected.

It is common knowledge that there is a "ring" directing the smuggling operations and there is a strong suspicion directed against several prominent foreigners as well as a number of Chinese who take a leading part in public affairs. But the authorities have been blocked at every turn.

SMUGGLING TRICKS

An example of the methods employed by the "ring" to bring raw opium into Shanghai from the poppy fields along the Yangtsze river was seen recently. It makes clear the difficulty that confronts the authorities in obtaining convictions of the smuggler even when large quantities of opium are seized and confiscated.

A wheelbarrow coolie was seen on Szechuen Road with a cargo consisting of two baskets of coal and what appeared to be four bundles of kindling—three foot boards evidently broken out of a packing case.

A Chinese policeman on the International Settlement force saw the load and suspected that the boards had been stolen from a foreign warehouse. He arrested the coolie and took him to the police station. It was seen that the boards were nailed together. When pried apart it was discovered that the planks had been hollowed out and within the cavities was concealed opium worth $4000.

COOLIE IS STOOL

The coolie was not an accessory. He had been hired to haul the load from a steamer to an address in the Settlement. His employer had trailed at a safe distance and when the arrest was made he disappeared, found a telephone booth and notified the consignee.

When the police called at the consignee's home he disclaimed knowledge of the opium and there was no evidence, except the coolie's word, on which he could be held.

This is a typical case. There are scores of similar ones each week. And the answer is easy.

The Tuchuns (military governors) of the inland provinces reap a vast profit through taxes from the poppy growing industry and in many instances have compelled farmers to uproot their food crops and supplant them with opium. And this with 40,000,000 people in the Northern Provinces starving.

HINDUS BOYCOTT FIRST ELECTION

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Returns from the first general election to be held in India under British rule, indicate that only from 10 to 20 per cent of the enfranchised 5,000,000 people in India are using their vote, according to a statement from the India information bureau here. At least 80 per cent refrained from voting, thereby indicating antagonism with the present Reform Scheme which has just come into operation. The lack of support of the government elections has been admitted to be due to the influence of the propaganda for the boycott movement.

France Alien Tax to Hit Americans

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The anti-alien campaign in France was carried to extreme lengths yesterday when Paris newspapers proposed a $20 head tax on all visitors to France, the tax to be assessed upon arrival. The papers propose an additional tax of $5 for every three months the visitor remains in France, another fee for entering or leaving Paris or changing residence.

The tax would be especially hard on the great number of Americans, relatives of soldiers buried in France, pilgrims to the war cemeteries.

Prince, Late for His Breakfast, Punished

LONDON, Jan. 22.—King Haakon of Norway, who arrived in England recently with Prince Olaf for a visit to Sandringham, is a stickler for punctuality.

While aboard the steamer Pollo, Prince Olaf appeared at the breakfast table ten minutes late. After the meal he was told by the king that he must stay in his room for an hour as punishment, says the Daily News correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. Opposing opening of trade with Russia, Senator Moses of New Hampshire said he hoped that Senator France would substantiate his charge before the Senate foreign relations committee. France has a resolution on resumption of trade with Russia.

Senator King, Utah, said Russian trade cannot be established with the recognition of the soviet dictatorship and charged that the Republican [illegible] Lenine and Trotsky.

WOMEN DISCARD PLANE FOR TRAIN TO WASHINGTON

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Nebraska's flying grandmas, Mrs. Draper Smith and Mrs. H. H. Wheeler, arrived in Chicago by train instead of by airplane today.

The women were no less enthusiastic about aviation because they were compelled to give up the airplane flight by which they were carrying Nebraska's electoral vote to Washington at Des Moines because of foggy weather.

"We were just as warm as toast," said Mrs. Smith. "I [illegible] to take off our overshoes and gloves—too [illegible]," added Mrs. Wheeler.

"Sorry we didn't have made the entire journey by air," Mrs. Smith said, "but we had to be in Washington by Sunday night. The college meets on Monday."

It was their first flight but the women were not nervous.

Frank Sanford says he doesn't know why girls close their eyes while being kissed in fact he doesn't know how they act during the osculatory process but [illegible] admits he is willing to learn

Chief Sleuth Brooker of the Chevrolet company doesn't know whether he should feel flattered or insulted When he moved into his office in the new building he discovered a tub bath on one side of his office and a shower on the other Now he has his dates all mixed up and thinks every day is Saturday

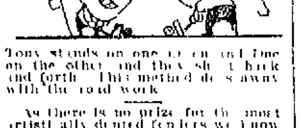
You'll notice the men don't close their eyes while doing their kissing Gotta look over the dame's shoulders to see if her hubby isn't coming

Can't keep the Moses family out of the limelight Miss Helen Moses is doing a lot of [illegible] over Hawaii way where she is winning swimming races with great regularity

It is still January and will be all month but a lot of mermaids are getting their swimming suits out of their vanity boxes in preparation for the opening of the season

The Western Golf Association is advocating a lot of new rules, but until they frame one eliminating the excessive pedestrianism some folks won't be interested

Tony Dutra and [illegible] Mostiman two of the best known golfers on Broadway have their own rules



Tony stands on one [illegible] and [illegible] on the other and they [illegible] back and forth This method does away with the road work

As there is no prize for the most artistically dented fenders we know on Chevys that will not [illegible] on display at the auto show

With [illegible] and Bill Herman on the [illegible] on Square Garden [illegible] the other night Mr Rickard [illegible] the two extremes [illegible] champion high [illegible] of the ring and the champion high liver

[illegible] Kelly [illegible] on the [illegible] and [illegible] won [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Remember the night Pat gave him the half pound eye and had to be pried off poor Kelly

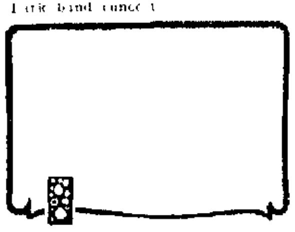
to break into his private safe and see if there was a fifty-thousand-dollar bond there

Herman says he saw the bond on Jockey's desk last month but thinks he gave it to Pete Nolan for Christmas

Walter Mails may be left handed but he is no cuckoo "But I've got more money today than Babe Ruth [illegible]" chirped Walter the other day just before he panned a St Mary's college kid for not hustling down to first base

Can you recognize your favorite fighter Identify this one and get a season ticket for the Lakeshore Park band concert

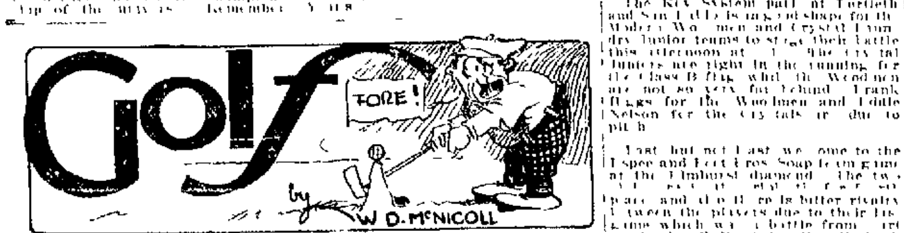


Wait till Looney Sing [illegible] comes back and finds he has got to wear orange license plates on his green automobile

Johnny Hayes local ball player sent a hot tip up from Tijuana the other day and the local runners took the bookies for about three grand Red Lynch was in on the killing [illegible]

Since Captain Bodie Wallman took charge of the Central station he has kept Chinatown in kindling Proprietors of hop joints and six-spot palaces wake up in the morning and use the remnants of their doors to start the fire with

Bet there are no Chinese lilies on the captain's desk on China's New Year



It would almost appear that the [illegible] had [illegible] into hasty actions by the W G A regarding the stymie rule A communication has been forwarded to the St Andrews [illegible] questioning the Royal and Ancient Club to [illegible] only the rule is [illegible] representatives [illegible] the [illegible] last year but to accept it with modifications which have [illegible] seriously tried out in competition here

The old stymie rule was not popular with a majority of players in the United States but one would be very [illegible] modified rule is an improvement [illegible] Our own experiences in tournament events showed [illegible] how many instances [illegible] fair but [illegible] question which [illegible] being [illegible] reasonable or [illegible]

It reads as follows Whenever two players reach the putting green the player who has played his ball last and is still away shall play his next stroke with his opponent's ball remaining where it lies presumably stymiing the player. In all other cases the player whose ball is farthest from the hole may demand that his opponent putt first as in medal play Compelling a player who is nearer the hole to [illegible] his putt is certainly [illegible] and would in most instances [illegible] It is also a decided help to the player further from the hole to see his opponent's putt played first any error he (the opponent) may make as regards strength or direction can be made a mental note of and avoided by the player further from the hole

Should the player nearer the hole hole his putt in the odd the opponent then knows he must go for the back of the cup whereas if the former rule his shorter putt the opponent can then play safe for a half [illegible] [illegible] is not entitled [illegible] he has [illegible] to the green

Oakland Hi Ball Tossers to Start Practice This Week

This week the Oakland high school baseball team will begin its initial practice at Bay View [illegible] thirty or thirty five fellows expecting to be out for the team

There are seven veterans of last year's team in school but they are not sure of their positions as there are many new fellows to give them a hard fight for their respective places

P S Shadwick a former college player or Sam Dougherty the new physical training teacher will be the choice for coach With one of the two mentioned coaches on the job Captain Lou [illegible] and Manager Sam Goldberg expect to put out a team that will give the other high schools a run Tech high Oakland's closest rival has only four veterans left and none of these fellows are any second Bernie Viveronses or Johnnie Gillespies While Fremont University and Vocational are going to be the dark horses of the league

Junior League Offers Fans a Fine Program

Little Fellows Will Be Out in Force On the Diamond Today.

The Class B clubs of The TRIBUNE League are way behind their schedule and can hardly afford to pass up any opportunity to play their games so President Fred Krumb has ordered all those clubs to report as scheduled today The schedule for the Class B league calls for eighteen games and the most played to date by any team is ten The Elmhurst Merchants whose manager favored the calling off of today's game with the Hayward Natives has twelve more games left on the schedule and it is well that they get in every date they can The Lee Bertillion Hatters and Allendale Merchants who are down in the second division of the Class B clubs in the standing are showing as much fight as any of the clubs in the league Their low standing is not causing them to lose interest at least that is indicated by them getting out to play two games at the Allendale diamond today the first game starting at 10 30 a m The Allendale Merchants won their last three games and as the Hatters broke into the won column for the first time in their last game the double bill should be worth while watching

Manager Paul Edstrom has hustled around to get the Melrose diamond in shape so his boys can entertain the Central Oakland Merchants this afternoon at 2 15 Melrose is leading the Class B race and cannot afford to remain idle as some one of those other clubs might do some gaining on them The Melrose bunch are going to face difficulty in trimming the Central Oakland Merchants if they succeed at all Fred Mitterwald will chuck for the leaders

The Elmhurst Merchants will leave their home district to play the Hayward Natives at Hayward diamond This is another game which was [illegible] postponed by the managers but it is up to Umpire Pierotti to call a postponement after the teams get there but there [illegible] chance of the game being postponed as the weather has been dandy the last couple of days Harry Malik will chuck for Elmhurst It is reported that Henry [illegible] has severed connections with the Hayward Natives because of his position at St Mary's but the truth is to be learned

The Key System park at Fortieth and San Pablo is in good shape for the Modern Woodmen and Crystal Laundry Junior teams to stage their battle this afternoon at 2 15 The Crystal Juniors are right in the running for the Class B flag while the Woodmen are not so very far behind Frank Haggs for the Woodmen and Eddie Nelson for the Crystals are due to pitch

Last but not least we come to the Espee and Peet Bros Soap team game at the Elmhurst diamond The two [illegible] peace and there is bitter rivalry between the players due to their last game which was a battle from start to finish Willie Schmell will chuck for the Espees with [illegible] for the Peets

CLASS C CONTESTS

The little kids in the Class C league are the ones who seldom make a [illegible] [illegible] diamonds and it is quite [illegible] the [illegible] of the eight teams in that league will be out to play their games [illegible] Like the Hatters and Allendale teams of the Class B the Fruitvale Outlaws and Yankee All Stars who are far down in the Class C race will hook in two games the first at Hawthorne playgrounds in East Oakland this morning at 10 30 and the second at Bay View [illegible] at 2 00

The C L Best Cruisers who have an iron clasp on the pennant will meet the Andresien All Stars at the San Leandro League park this [illegible] [illegible] and Murphy or McFarland for the Andresiens will be the pitchers

The Best Steel Casters will meet the Melrose Athletic club at the Thrasher park diamond in San Leandro this morning while the Grove Street Tigers and R W Tuft Hardware will meet at the Elmhurst diamond at Ninety first avenue at 10 30 The Grove Street Tigers are in first place and very anxious to land in second

COURSING MEET POSTPONED

On account of the heavy rains of last few days the meet of the Sacramento Valley Coursing Association which was to have been held today has been postponed one week Hares are very plentiful and cover good but fields are too wet

MARIN PLESTINA KEEPS WRESTLING PROMOTERS ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT

It's tough to have a pet bear to act as watch dog and be constantly worried lest the bear turn in and eat up the livestock he is supposed to protect

That is Frank Schuler's predicament—Schuler, the San Francisco "rassling" impresario de luxe

It is fairly obvious that Schuler's "rasslers" are from the orthodox Curley school of New York and everything they do is regular, including their adversaries and the spectators. They are a nicely-tended bunch of stock—the Curley performers—and their company is very carefully picked No one is allowed to associate with them under any circumstances much less get into the ring with one, unless he is properly certified to as Curley bonded

Just ravening outside the carefully fenced trust rasslers is one Marin Plestina He is a regular Curley wolf (wow—excuse the pun it did itself) but what is mean is that the little shepherd of the regular matmen has to stay awake nights to keep Marin from grabbing his stock

Marin recently got so threatening that something had to be done. First then the earth quaked and was in throes (and throws) and out of Europe and into the United States burst the man mountain Stanislaus Zbyszko Happy thought said Frank Stanislaus will be sworn into watch the fold and chase Marin over the hills and far away if ever he shows up around here

Stanislaus only weighs a modest 260 pounds he is only 40 years of age he has only been wrestling the last third of a century and best of all he has never to our knowledge been subjected to the mysterious process which Announcer Kamiteiling calls thrown

Marin butted in with a challenge to any of the Schuler Curley [illegible] and offered to toss them across the park

Then Schuler laughed him to scorn Ha ha—ho ho —said he let him get a reputation Who is he anyway? Let him meet Stanislaus Bibby-etc If he gets by Stan we will talk to him" And Frank went further and intimated that Marin is a big cheese and in other ways unpopular Then he ignored him as hard as he could

But Stanislaus has got to eat too Mr. Stan got into by the Austrian army early in the war he [illegible] and he overlooked the favorite Austrian reverse signal after a battle and the Rooshians pinned him He was in a Bolshevik jail for two or three years It had to be a big one to hold him but the Bolsheviki build big jails because everyone who disagrees with them on any point promptly makes the [illegible] over there

Now Stan is en route here and wants to get busy

Will he be allowed to meet your delicate Caddock or Nautilus Stecher or Laryngitis Lewis or any of the crowd who have been passing the heavyweight wrestling crown round among themselves every week or so Lewis has had it since early last week hasn't he

He can't meet the other one of the quintette of delicate champs because that is Wladek Zibby his own brother

Now Stan is human every ounce of him and [illegible] wrestler must eat though an average [illegible] can [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that way and how much it costs if he can't [illegible] Cupid throwing scares him Plestina he will likely get to that ring at the mouth as he looks over the Stecher Caddock Lewis [illegible] and no telling which one he will snatch by the neck and carry off

So Schuler is going to let him put on a little party with Jack Taylor the cowboy matman of Wyoming and [illegible]

Jack looked pretty good for awhile and developed as hard a scowl as any of them he is safe and sane and belongs

Gene Van Court who knows all about wrestlers (except why they are allowed to live) said Stan is one of the world's remarkable athletes His age and size [illegible] his perfect [illegible] without tricks his endurance and the fact he is so round he can't be flattened make a world's wonder of him Gene said that [illegible] the Zibbyes are graduates of the University of Warsaw [illegible] music lovers

Some day [illegible] Plestina will get so mad at being excluded from his [illegible] championship that he will sail into big Stan

They are many who think Plestina the best wrestler going outside the big [illegible] and maybe some of the gigantic [illegible] Plestina is [illegible] of the Farmer Burns school an absolute giant in strength fast as lightning and knowing every branch of his business

[illegible] Zibby he works barefoot in the ring

And when Big Stan and Marin entangle in a ring if ever they do, they will make more wrestling history than all the Lewises Stechers Caddocks and Wladeks put together with Taylor Draak Santell and Londos tossed in Some wise promoter will make that match and get rich

Rangers Meet Vampires at Alameda Park

Olympic Club Tackles Celtics at Recreation Park in San Francisco.

SOCCER GAMES SCHEDULED TODAY

Rangers vs Vampires at Washington park Alameda 2 30 p m. Referee, J Hill

Barbarians vs Burns at Eighth and Market streets San Francisco 2 30 p m Referee, J Wardlaw

Olympic Club vs Celtics at Recreation park, San Francisco, 1 00 p m Referee, E Dewhurst

Alameda Bethlehems vs Thistles at Recreation park San Francisco, 2 30 p m Referee E Dewhurst

Will an Eastbay team play a big part in deciding the champion soccer team of the California Soccer League again this season In the last few years Eastbay teams have either won the championship or helped materially to settle them and today we find the Olympic Club and Thistle soccer teams tied for first place in the race for the 1920-21 championship Those teams have been deadlocked for more than a month and many fans on this side of the bay are willing to wager that the tie will be broken today

While the Rangers and Vampires entertain at Washington Park in Alameda many Eastbay fans will make the trip across the bay to Recreation Park to witness the double bill in which the Olympics and Celtics will clash in the first game at 1 o'clock and the Alameda Bethlehems meet the Olympic Club at 2 30 o'clock The Olympics of course are figured to have a nice little party at the expense of the poor old Celtics who are down on the bottom of the league ladder The Thistles are the ones who should worry the most of the two leaders as the Alameda Bethlehems have been strengthened by the addition of four new men to the lineup since they met the Thistles before Cameron and McLean are big improvements as defenders and Hyatt and Spurgeon are two dandy forwards The Alamedans may not beat the Thistles but the latter will sure know they were in the game E Dewhurst will referee

The Vampires haven't much to fight for except to keep out of the basement while the Rangers cannot climb any better than third in the standing before the end of the season Still the fans who travel to Washington Park in Alameda will probably be rewarded by a good game J Hill will referee

At Eighth and Market streets in San Francisco the Barbarians and Burns will stage a game with J Wardlaw as referee The Moores and Potrero Iron Workers will take a rest today

Harvard Track Team Is Training Already

Jack Donovan the track and field coach and trainer at Harvard university has already started to reconstruct his team for the 1921 season He has issued a call for candidates and will probably enter some of his men in the indoor meets to be held in Boston and New York in the next month

FOURTEEN GAMES SCHEDULED IN TRIBUNE BALL LEAGUE TODAY

JACK DEMPSEY AND PARTY LEAVE FOR PORTLAND, WHERE CHAMPION BOXES TERRY KELLER

ONLY HEAVY RAIN CAN PREVENT BALL GAMES TAKING PLACE TODAY

Fourteen Combats Scheduled in The Tribune Midwinter League Series.

By EDDIE MURPHY

With the time limited in which to complete their full schedule of ball games, all clubs in the three different divisions of The OAKLAND TRIBUNE Midwinter League must report on the job today unless it rains before the time that the games are scheduled to be played. A couple of the Class-B managers were in favor of calling off their games yesterday morning, giving as an excuse that the Hayward and Elmhurst diamonds were too sloppy, but President Fred L. Krumb has ordered that no games are to be postponed. It is up to the umpire to make the decision when the teams arrive on the scene. Friday and all day yesterday brought lots of sunshine and every diamond should be in playing condition by today, said the president. So unless there is a heavy rain this morning fans will have fourteen ball games to take their pick from today.

Going by the original schedule, the Class C race for The TRIBUNE bunting would come to an end with the games being played in that division this morning, but wet weather on several Sundays caused postponements, and President Krumb has announced that all the postponed games will be played off.

A meeting of the Class C managers will be held at The TRIBUNE building tomorrow night at 7:15 sharp when a schedule for the playing of the postponed games will be arranged. The Best Steel Casters filed a protest on the game which they lost to the C. L. Best Cruisers last Sunday and that will be decided tomorrow night. Manager Fred Waldstein of the Grove Street Tigers will have a verbal protest to make about the game which his boys had with thhe Andresien All Stars last Sunday. the Andreselen All Stars last Sunday. Andresien quit in the fourth inning without permission of the umpire. So it is important that all managers of Class C clubs attend the meeting.

Millers Meet Leaders At Alameda Diamond.

Three games only will be played in the Class A division today, and no double-headers as some fans expected. The Class A race should originally end next Saturday, but an extension of the season to the last Sunday in February was made so that postponed games could be played. The Halton-Didiers who are leading the Class A race will tangle with the California Cotton Millers at Lincoln Park in Alameda. The Alameda Bethlehems and Coast Tire and Rubber will tangle at the Pacific Coast League Park, and the Crystal Laundry will make the trip to San Leandro to play the C. L. Best Tractors. Sounds like a pretty nifty schedule of games for the Class A fans to watch.

The Millers have but five more games to play before their schedule will be completed, and the Halton-Didiers have seven, so with the Millers but slightly more than a game behind the league leaders, they can do themselves a world of good by winning today's game at Lincoln Park. However, it is going to take a lot of good playing to pull those Alamedans from the top now, as they have two fine chuckers in Lane Shultis and Cale Hollis, and the entire team is working like a big machine. Still it is possible to say about the same of Frank Cotton's Millers, and that is why we figure this race for the bunting to be such an even looking one. "Dutch" Rock will do the chucking for the Millers, while John Carroll will umpire.

Other Class "A" Games Look Very Attractive.

Johnny Gillespie against Young Bill Steengrafe on the mound for the Alameda Bethlehems sounds like the makings for a pretty good pitching battle for the fans who visit at the Coast League Park. Steengrafe has pitched the last three games for the Beths and although he won only one of them, he certainly made a lot of boys take a slump in their hitting. The kid came very close to sending the Crystal Laundry team for a tumble down the ladder last Sunday. As for Johnny Gillespie he needs no boosting, as he is as good a young right-hander as there is to be found in the bushes. It is no fault of Johnny's that the tire boys are not higher in the standing. W. E. (Columbus) Day, business manager of the Beths has them all fighting to get out of the basement before the end of the season.

With six more games to play and being separated from the leaders by two and a half games, the C. L. Best Tractors can still be counted as very much in the Class A pennant fight and maybe they will display so this afternoon when they tangle with the Crystal Laundry club at the San Leandro park. Emerson McNally, the Washers' pitcher, after a good rest will take the hill for them while it is very likely that Heinie Lay will do the honors for the Tractors. Manager Bill Wagner has not reported if Gene Caldera has recovered or not from the illness he suffered early in the week. Like the Millers, the Crystals are slightly more than a game behind the leaders and will profit a great deal by a win this afternoon.

Army Fighters Determined to Beat British

Uncle Sam's Men Feel Keenly Humiliation at Their Defeat.

By LAWRENCE PERRY.
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright 1921 by Oakland Tribune)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—So far as the United States army is concerned, British amateur boxers are not likely to enjoy themselves as much at the next international amateur boxing tournament as they did at the recent contests held in the ballroom of the Hotel Commodore. Uncle Sam's army men feel the humiliation of the New York debacle keenly and it may be announced that plans are under way whose design is to present for British consideration at the proposed return tourney in London next year a group of soldiers representing the various weight divisions of far greater ability than those who sought to uphold our prestige in this city last week. In this forthcoming campaign of intensive training in all that pertains to high class boxing, the war department will be directly interested.

In the meantime, there isn't an army post or cantonment or fort from Plattsburgh to the Presidio, from Sandy Hook to Seattle where the Hotel Commodore bouts are not being discussed in a mood that approaches downright rancor.

SOLDIERS ARE ROUSED

Down at Camp Dix, at Wrightstown, New Jersey, where the First division is stationed, there isn't a soldier who wouldn't join in a volunteer movement to descend upon England with no arms but fists and attempt to clean up every Tommy who showed himself on the streets, and, primarily there are twenty-two men who have established pugilistic supremacy among the thousands of soldiers stationed at this great cantonment ready and willing to devote every minute of their spare time to perfecting themselves pugilistically along whatever intensive lines the war department may adopt. Right now there are men at Camp Dix who impress the critical visitor as having ability far greater than any army representative who boxed against the British at the Hotel Commodore.

All of which brings us to this fact: The best army opinion obtainable has it that the army was not represented as well as it might have been at Monday's tournament. In other words, it is stated that army champions did not meet the British.

The last army championship boxing bouts of which athletic officers at various posts and camps have record took place at St. Louis last July. The lightweight championship at that time was won by Corporal Toomey, now stationed at Camp Dix, who at the Commodore put up the best and hardest bout of the evening against Jimmy Brown, of the navy.

MORE CARE URGED

Private Snyder won the light-heavyweight championship at St. Louis and Corporal Langford won the heavyweight title. Just how Private Jack Courtright was selected over these established champions to meet Captain Ernest V. Chandler, of the British army and how Private Ben Davis, the Choctaw Indian, was selected to tackle Hugh Brown, the British army light-heavyweight, is not understood. There is the feeling that soldiers who have no right to titles should not be permitted to pose as possessors thereof, certainly not in international bouts where the winning or losing of contests involves significant prestige.

From Lieutenant S. B. Wilson, athletic officer at the infantry school, Camp Benning, Georgia, I have word that the army can develop highclass boxing talent in a comprehensive system of amateur army tournaments in which honor and prestige coming to outstanding soldier talent will be sufficient to keep them in the amateur ranks. At the present time, writes Lieutenant Wilson, boxers in the army who developed marked ability, turn professional as soon as their enlistments expire, if not before, there being no incentive for them to retain amateur standing.

When plans now being considered have been perfected we shall no doubt find that a remedy for this condition has been devised.

SEARCH FOR MATERIAL

At Camp Dix Sergeant Wisniewsky, the athletic officer, has devoted a great deal of attention to the development of boxing and the First Division and other outfits stationed there has been pretty thoroughly combed for boxing material. The result is a squad of twenty-two men, representing various classes. These men work under a group of six instructors, all of whom have a sound knowledge of boxing.

Toomey, the middle-weight champion of the army, is instructor of the lightweight division and Private Lopez is instructor of the middleweights. Lopez, by the way, looks to be a bearcat. He is a Mexican and in some ways reminds one of Carpentier. He is lightning fast and can hit like a triphammer. The athletic officers, who considers Lopez the best ever, does not know why the swarthy middleweight was not summoned to New York to fight for the honor of the khaki.

Private Russell, the heavyweight instructor, looks good, too. The twenty-two men seem to have been capably handled at Camp Dix. They [illegible] given over to military duties is taken up with road work and boxing. The men are thus in excellent condition and it would seem that their training and development has been of a sort which would make them prominent factors in any series of elimination contests which the war department athletic authorities, looking toward a return engagement with the British army men fighters, may devise.

New York Boxing Club Loses License

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The Pioneer Sporting Club was suspended [illegible] by the State Boxing Commission late today, as the result of a questionable decision rendered last night in the bout between Packey O'Gatty of New York and Roy Moore of St. Paul.

Edward Pollock, who refereed; O'Gatty and the latter's manager, James Taxford also were suspended. In addition, the commission set aside Pollock's decision in disqualifying Moore in the third round for an alleged foul, and called the bout no contest. Examination by a boxing commission physician failed to show that O'Gatty had been struck low.

FLICKINGER ELECTED.

VALLEJO, Jan. 22.—Andy Flickinger, one of the best known bluerock breaking artists in the state, has been elected president of the Vallejo Gun club.

Jack Dempsey and His Pal

Jack insists his little playmate is a real dog, although most folks call him a wolf. He is really half wolf and half police dog and is as gentle as a collie puppy. The champion thinks the world of his little friend and hated to leave him yesterday afternoon when he left for Portland.

DEMPSEY AND KEARNS OFF FOR PORTLAND

Jack Dempsey and Manager Jack Kearns pulled out for Portland last night. The champion is scheduled to box an exhibition bout with Terry Keller next week. After that contest Kearns will grab the first rattler bound for New York and Dempsey will probably come back to Oakland. Kearns is anxious to get the bond matter straightened out and see that everything is hunky-dory for the Carpentier match. Also Jack is going to have a talk with Promoter Tex Rickard about the Willard fight, which is scheduled for Madison Square Garden March 17. It is Kearns' belief that the Willard match cannot draw enough money at a fifteen dollar maximum charge and he will suggest that the bout be postponed until summer, when it can be staged somewhere in the open air. Of course if Rickard is willing to take a chance and guarantee the champion his "bit" he can stage the fight at the Garden as originally scheduled, but Kearns does not believe Rickard will be willing to go ahead under the circumstances.

Dempsey will remain in the West until he hears from his manager. If the Willard fight is postponed Jack will go to Los Angeles and pose for the movies, but if Rickard wants to get busy on March 17 Jack will join Kearns in New York and start training for the fight.

Regarding the squabble over the forfeits for the big fight, Kearns inclines to the belief that somebody is trying to get out from under. He says the bond found in his office in New York was a duplicate and that the original bond was placed on deposit last November.

Football Pays Big Dividends To Colleges

Gridiron Sport Finances the Other Branches of Athletics.

By WALTER CAMP
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright, 1921 by Oakland Tribune)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Athletics as a constructive element in university expansion has again been exemplified in a gift of $50,000 by the University of Pittsburgh Athletic Association toward the proposed erection of a new recreation building to be known as "Alumni Hall." This gift is supplementary to $50,000 already given to the university by the athletic branch.

Such contributions from athletics to the educational end of a seat of learning is a startling sign of the times, inasmuch as it affords a sharp departure from the financing of stadiums and the maintenance of purely athletic activities. The amount involved in these two gifts is much more than the total endowment fund of many an educational institution in times before organized athletics came to their present significant estate. It represents practically the football profits of two years at Pittsburgh.

Football has become throughout the country the main support of all the athletic interests in the majority of colleges and universities. Without the football gate, the various teams, nines, crews, et cetera, could not be financed.

EXPENSE IS GREAT

The expense column of an university athletic department is so large that few care to publish it in detail, and if football should suddenly cease the undergraduates and alumni of any of our large universities would stand aghast at the request to furnish an amount of money necessary to carry on the other sports.

Baseball at times is self-supporting; perhaps a little more, but aside from this there are few self-supporting organizations in the athletic line and there are several, like crew and track athletics, which run deep into the deficit, which must be made up through football receipts.

And these expenditures are growing steadily. At the time of the war a great amount of sentiment was expressed in faculty and athletic committees, to the effect that this was the time to start on a new era of economical administration in athletics and many were the declarations made against training tables, engagement of seasonal coaches, expensive traveling and the like. But none of these reforms materialized when college sports rose again to normal—or, as we might say, abnormal. Of course, the university which is situated in or near a large town has an enormous advantage in the matter of gate receipts.

BIG TEAMS' ADVANTAGE

Harvard, just across the bridge from Boston, came down on Boston for a very considerable attendance on account of the great popularity of football, even at the minor games. Yale is so situated that her advantage of New Haven's population makes her gate rather better than Princeton's, although Princeton is slightly nearer New York, from which city both draw heavily.

Pennsylvania, being located right in Philadelphia, has practically as great possibilities of gate as has Harvard. Pittsburgh has a similar position. Chicago is well known as the "mecca of the middlewest conference teams"; Brown has a great advantage in drawing from Providence. Institutions like Dartmouth, Cornell, Colgate and, in a measure, Syracuse, find a game in a large metropolis well worth while from this standpoint.

PARTISANSHIP HELPS

Intersectional athletics, particularly intersectional football, has come to help out because there is much more partisanship about this than with the ordinary minor game, and hence we shall see more and more of such contests in the future, provided the authorities permit it. The only case of track games wherein a good profit is made is the Pennsylvania relay carnival. It comes at a time of year when interest is becoming ripe in track athletics and last year, on account of the international flavor given by participation of British athletics, the relay affair made a profit of nearly $25,000.

And this is about the only event in track athletics where profits can be counted on. Of course, rowing is an expensive sport and never has any possibilities of gate receipts worth the name. The boat race receipts at New London and other places are very small, and the whole deficit has to be faced by the athletic association drawing on the football funds.

FINANCED BY FOOTBALL

So long as things move on as they are now, and football continues popular, the big colleges and those located near the large cities will be able to finance their athletics. What a great crash would come at any time if football failed to provide in this way for the sustenance of the other non-paying athletic branches, may thus be "imagined"?

Finally, it now is an accomplished fact that football is, as indicated in [illegible] for the support of other sports, but for the educational buildings of the university. Truly this sport is beginning to seem the financial "God-in-the-car" to the educational institutions.

French Girl's Record Said to Be Phoney

Victor Breyer, sports editor of the L'Echo des Sports of Paris, has come out with a flat contradiction of the recent statement of Suzanne Wurtz, the French girl swimming champion, who will visit this country. He also states "as to the rumor of Miss Wurtz having swum the 100 meters within one second of the women's Olympic record, there is not a particle of truth in the statement." To which we say, where do these rumors come

TRIBUNE BASKETBALL TEAMS PLAYING FAST CONTESTS IN LEAGUE

Fremont Owls and Livermore Remain Champions in the Unlimited Division.

By BUD MORIARTY

Two big nicks were put in the schedule of The OAKLAND TRIBUNE Eastbay Basketball League last Friday night when the Berkeley Y. M. C. A. 145-pound quintet ran rough-shod over the trying members of the California Deaf and Blind School at the latter's court for a 77-to-6 score, and the clever Titan Club 130-pound basketeers won from the self-same Deaf and Blind School men by a 53-to-10 tally. In both of the contests, the school men were showing the spectators a keen brand of the old "fightem" spirit, but their playing was marred by lack of clever signal plays and fast passing that characterized the invading winners.

O'Reilly and Leeper, forward and center respectively of the Berkeley "Y" shooters, simply could not miss that old cage. The dashing forward rang the bell fourteen times, while Leeper, the center with the appropriate name, chalked up twelve baskets during the evening. Mathews, guard for the Deaf and Blind School, held down his man under the adverse conditions of having to buck up against expert machine plays of the rivals. Laue and De Beaumont kept the school forwards from even hitting the backboard at times. Their sterling work was the big reason why a small total of two baskets was registered opposite the "Y."

After 53 markers had been rung up by the Titans, they declared it a day, for the aggressive spirit of the Fouthill defense will wear down any team of flash forwards if given the time. One thing about these Deaf and Blind School boys is the fact that they are always in that old fray, regardless of the length of the score against them. Such a morale is the kind the league officials have desired from the first. Beck refereed both games.

The Athens 145-pound basketball aggregation beat the fast Plymouth Center Athletic Club by a 48 to 18 score. Well-oiled plays were responsible for this victory, the first contest that these teams played in the league competition. Plymouth Center has the advantage of a live club backing up all of their athletic contests, so it is morally certain that the "Rocks" will make a better showing in their future starts.

St. Joseph Athletic Club holds the first win of the league in the 120-pound class, as they beat the Mazda basket organization by a 32 to 26 finale in their tilt at the Armory. The contest between the Lincoln Arrows and the Berkeley Y. M. C. A. team in the 120-pound section was cancelled because the Titan court has been withdrawn from the list of available playing floors after club action.

In a hot game at Titan Club the Pathenian Club shooters came out on the long end of a 31-24 score against the clever Berkeley "Y" boys of the 130-pound class. Since the start of the 130-pound schedule much good basketball has been turned in. The players of this weight seem to have the proper amount of speed and aggressiveness to keep the floor heated at all times. This sort of A1 basket tossing was in evidence at the Titan Club 130-Pathenian Club 130 game.

In one of the most exciting and closely contested games seen at the armory this season, the St. Joseph's Athletic club in The TRIBUNE league 120-pound quintet defeated the Mazdas, a team composed of Chinese, by a score of 32 to 26. Outplayed in the first half by the Orientals, the St. Joseph's took the floor in the second half with building determination. From whistle to whistle the Athletics put up one of the most daring exhibitions of a losing team coming from behind seen in many a moon. The Athletics tied the score on three quick successive goals. Criss-cross passing was the main downfall of the Mazdas. With but five minutes to play and the score 26-all, the club boys kept the ball away from the Mazda goal most of the period. Long shots by "Chunky" Mullen and Yore, with 45 seconds to play, put the game on ice. The all round playing of Mullen and Bill Yore featured, while the snappy passing of the Mazdas and the feat of converting twelve free throws out of a possible fifteen by Moon was the feature for the losers. The lineups:

Mazdas—Gee, Moon, forwards; Lee, center; Pat, Joe, Xrina, John, guards.
St. Joseph's A. C.—Mullen, Yore, forwards; McCormick, center; Noble, Allen, Rouiller, Amedee, guards.
Goals—By McGee 2, by Lee 5, by Mullen 4, by Yore 8, by McCormick 1. Free throws—By Moon 12, by Yore 1, by Mullen 3, by McCormick 2. Referee—Davis.

St. Mary's Tossers Defeat Newman Seals by a 10-to-6 Score

St. Mary's Independents made it two wins in as many starts when they defeated the Newman Seals at the college diamond yesterday afternoon by a 10 to 6 score. Hadley pitched the first five innings for the Independents and allowed but one hit, after which he gave way to Lefty Nugent. The Saints had a good lead when Hadley left the box. "Frenchie" Laffargue was hammered from the box by the Saints in the fourth inning and replaced by Suhrl.

This afternoon at 2:30, on the college diamond, St. Mary's Independents will meet the Indoor Yacht Club team. The score:

COAST LEAGUE MANAGERS DEPENDING ON MAJOR LEAGUES FOR PITCHERS

A majority of the Pacific Coast league team managers are depending upon the majors for pitchers to round out their 1921 hurling staffs.

Bill Rodgers, the Sacramento pilot, is about the only manager who is not waiting upon some of the big league teams to deliver pitchers.

Four Coast league clubs have pitchers and other players coming from the Detroit Tigers. Portland is depending upon Chicago to deliver a high-class hurler and Seattle is awaiting the delivery of a pitcher. Vernon has a couple of twirlers coming from the New York Americans.

Provided reports from Los Angeles are correct, Bill Essick, manager of the Vernon Tigers, will have to rebuild his entire staff. "Willie" Mitchell, Byron Houck, Art Fromme and "Wheezer" Dell have announced their retirement from the game. If this is true, Essick faces a rough and rocky road as far as his 1921 pitching staff is concerned.

Rodgers is not exempted from worry, however, as it is reported that two of his stars, Niehaus and Faeth, will quit professional ball for the California independents this season; but it is likely that these two men will be in the field when practice opens in about six weeks.

Thus far only eight pitchers have been secured by the Coasters from other leagues. The managers who are counting upon the majors have a pretty fair idea of the men they will get, but the waivers are betwixt delivery. There is a scarcity of good pitchers this season, according to word received from major league managers.

The pitching rosters of the various clubs, not including the youngsters signed for trials, is as follows:

PITCHING ROSTERS

Portland—Rudy Kallio, Sam Ross, Harold Polson, Herman Pillette and one from Chicago Nationals and one from Detroit.

Seattle — Harry Gardner, Geary Demaree, Francis, Schorr, Siebold, Dailey, Elmer Jacobs, Monroe Schwartz and one from Cincinnati.

Sacramento—Prough, Pittery, Penner, Jones, Faeth and Niehaus.

Oakland—Alten, Boehling, Kremer, Krause, Arlett and two from Detroit.

San Francisco—Scott, Love, McQuaid, Lewis, Flaherty, Jordan, Crumpler and one from Detroit.

Salt Lake—Stroud, Thurston, Leverenz and Reiger.

Los Angeles — Keating, Aldridge, Brown, Hughes, Crandall, Lyons and one from Detroit.

Vernon — Mitchell, Dell, Fromme, Shellenbach, Smallwood, Houck.

The averages of some new-comers already secured by the Coast clubs follow:

Two New Directors for San Jose Club

SAN JOSE, Jan. 22.—With the election of D. M. Denegri and A. Pichetti as two new directors the San Jose Mission League ball club was today reorganized for the 1921 ball season. Robert Larocca and A. W. O'Connor are the other two directors, both having served last year, and a fifth director will be selected to fill out the new board. The new directors are planning to have Sodality Park remodeled. There will be a grass diamond and new bleacher seats.

Wrestling Featured by Northern Colleges

Wrestling is to be one of the big sports of the Pacific Northwest Conference this year, and it is possible that the college teams in the Pacific Coast Conference may also get together to decide the mat champions of the coast. The Oregon Aggies' mat men have already started training under the direction of Coach Rathbun, and a first class team is already in sight. Lowell B. Palmer of Jordan Valley will captain the "Aggie" mat men. He was undefeated in his class last season. Other men working out who made a good showing last season are Alonzo W. [illegible] of Salem, Ore.; "Slim" Glersop of Marshfield, Merrell C. Jasper of Caldwell, Ida.; Sam W. Armstrong of Gardiner, and Glen H. McAdam of Silverton. The largest squad that has ever reported for wrestling is now working out under Coach Rathbun.

Going to a race meet without being able to put a stake on a horse would be as exciting to the average horseman as kissing an old maiden aunt.

General Bank Situation In U. S. Reported Strong; Trade on Upward Stride

By STURT P. WEST
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright 1921 by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—While the highly irregular course of the markets this week might seem to suggest greater uncertainty over the outlook, there has really been no change in the underlying sentiment of the financial community.

The note of cheerfulness, of returning confidence, which was sounded with the new year and deepened as security prices rose in the first two weeks of January has not been diminished. Leading financiers and business men are looking forward just as much as before to trade conditions getting back to normal, with the course of 1921. The general banking position as shown by the reserve ratio of the twelve regional banks is considerably stronger than it was at any time last year and has in fact regained all the ground lost since the middle of 1919.

It is not to be expected that money rates will go much lower yet awhile. The six and a quarter per cent quotation for time funds represents the maximum reduction likely to occur until commercial liquidation has gone still further and commercial discount rates have come down.

CALL N. Y. LOANS

It was significant that when Wall Street lowered its bid for call money to 5 per cent, banks out of town which had been large lenders in the New York market began to draw back their funds. They were willing to take 7 per cent on the readily controvertible security offered by stock exchange borrowers as compared with putting more money at 8 per cent into mercantile loans in their own localities. But when the Wall Street rate fell to 6 per cent the discrepancy became too great and the interior banks called in their New York loans in order to use their money at home.

The essential thing, however, is that the credit strain in the serious stages which it assumed during 1920 has definitely passed. Bank reserves, as compared with liabilities, are steadily mounting, whereas a year ago they were just as steadily going down hill. When the reserve ratio gets somewhat higher and with the reduction in bank currency and bank loans has been carried far enough to bring these items back to a level that may be regarded as conservative, then we may expect to see the Federal Reserve Board lower its scale of discounts and this will be the signal for a resumption of the decline in interest rates generally.

ISSUES REACH LIMIT

Until this happens, it is probable that many of the old line investment issues which have been on the upgrade since last June have about reached their limit. The demand will more likely shift to bonds of somewhat inferior rank which still offer an attractively high return, and to bonds brought out at high rates during the last year which are selling in the market at prices where the yield is anywhere from 6½ to 8½ per cent.

The chief objection to this latter class of securities is that most of them have only ten years to run and, besides, have a provision whereby they will be gradually called in at even shorter periods. Naturally the long-range investor has preferred mortgage issues of distant maturity. These have now had such an advance that their yield has ceased to make the extraordinary appeal it once did and the investment buying movement has turned to the shorter maturities because the return on them is yet abnormally high.

STOCK MARKET

The stock market is moving strictly according to specifications. The violent rebound from the panic conditions of December carried prices up too fast. Investment buyers, active while stocks were on the bargain counter, were entirely unwilling to follow up a rise which covered 10 to 15 points in little more than a fortnight.

These extreme high prices were paid by bear speculators who had overstayed their market and when this short covering was over a recession was quite inevitable. Nobody expects any serious decline from the present level of prices. There is too much confidence in the future and it is too much easier to obtain money for Wall Street purposes than it was for a downward movement to go very far. It is simply necessary for stocks to go back enough to re-attract investment buying and a good deal has been accomplished toward this end within the last few days.

It must be remembered that for the first time in more than a year speculative points and syndicates are able to get funds for 30 and 60-day periods and are able to borrow at rates that look low in comparison with the yield of speculative stocks which these funds can be used to carry. This is a great incentive to the resumption of speculative activity in a moderate way in the shares of companies which have gone through the worst of their business slump and have marked off their inventory losses.

TRADE RECOVERING

The week's developments in the business world have been conflicting. On the one hand boot and shoe factories have resumed operations at full scale in consequence of new orders received. On the other hand the steel companies have been cutting prices in an effort to obtain new business.

It is interesting to note one of the predictions of trouble in the retail trade after the first of year has come true and that all the talk about forced liquidation and failures which was indulged in so freely a month ago can now be identified as bearish propaganda.

The business situation at large is developing entirely as expected. In most lines the readjustment having been completed, the decline in prices has stopped and in some cases new buying has come in in quantity. In a few other lines the readjustment is still proceeding; it may not be over for another few months. The normal thing for the markets to do under such circumstances is to assume a waiting attitude which means a term of comparative dullness and narrowing price fluctuations.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE UP

The most important incident of the week has been the continued recovery in the foreign exchanges. Sterling has now regained all its loss since midsummer. French exchange has had a rebound within the last few days more vigorous than any it has been through since the early part of last year.

This rise in France is especially significant as an indication of high opinion regarding the outcome of France's financial problems. It must be taken as a sign of confidence that whether through the change in the French ministry or through pressure from other countries, the German reparations question is to be dealt with in the only sensible way, namely, that a proper perception that helping the central empires back on their feet is for the best interests, is, in fact, essential to the welfare of the business situation in general.

Latin-Americans Would Represent American Firms and Their Products

Trade lists and information from all over the world are amassed into the weekly bulletin of the San Francisco branch office of the Department of Commerce.

The bulletin tells of expansion and improvement of the service and of many other matters interesting to shippers. It follows in part.

34,295, Madeira—Commission company wants agencies for various lines including rice, flour, pneumatic tires, etc. Correspond in Portuguese.

34,296, Australia—Merchant desires catalogs and prices of tractors and trucks especially for log hauling through forests and for road transport, also tackle for handling logs.

34,324, India—Importing firm desires to reach manufacturers and exporters for the purchase of hardware, cutlery, machinery, electrical goods, cotton mill, railway and press stores, glassware, kitchen and household goods, metals and metal products, auto accessories, food products, clothing, boots and shoes and various other items.

34,325, France—Merchant seeks agency for the sale of boots and shoes and food products.

34,327, India—Wholesale merchant firm wants to be placed in touch with manufacturer of magneto telephones, with the view to obtaining the agency for such a line.

AUTO ACCESSORIES.

34,328, Argentina — Commercial agent seeks representation of firms for the sale of general lines of hardware, auto accessories and paper of all kinds.

For the purpose of providing American firms with reliable information concerning prospective buyers or agents all over the world, the bureau about a year ago established the Commercial Intelligence Service, whose function it is to compile and maintain an active World Trade directory of foreign business firms. This will not be a printed directory, but a card index which can be revised and added to as occasion arises. The data is being collected through commercial attache and trade commissioners, and with the full co-operation of the consular service. This service is now in full operation in most of the Latin-American, some European and Far Eastern countries, and others will be covered as fast as the work can be utilized in the preparation of trade lists, covering a given section of a country or an entire country and relating to a given commodity.

RELATIVE IMPORTANCE.

An effort is being made to indicate importance of the different merchants, not on the basis of existing credit, but to show the largest firms, the next largest and the smaller, etc., taking into consideration the geographical position, class of goods and nature of the business, information highly desirable for American manufacturers and exporters entering new fields, so that profitable markets may not be tied up for a series of years in the hands of inexperienced or possibly unreliable firms. Symbols show also the nature of the business, whether wholesale, retail, commission agent, etc., information essential that American firms may avoid the possibility of quoting rock bottom prices to small retailers or agents. Important also in direct advertising. Another feature is the statement of the nationality of the firms listed, important because the exclusive agencies might fall into the hands of foreign competitors, who take the agencies simply to kill them. Still another feature indicates whether the firm specializes in one commodity, and if not, what other commodity it handles.

This is not credit information—it is sales information. It is not the province of the government to give credit ratings, but it does desire to maintain information concerning individual foreign firms described above and makes it available in the form of mailing lists.

The 1921 edition of the Exporters' Encyclopedia, in enlarged and improved form, is just off the press and a copy can now be consulted at 307 Customs House.

MONTHLY CABLE SERVICE.

In line with the bureau's policy of improving its daily publication, "Commerce Reports," there has been inaugurated a new monthly cable service from the commercial attaches and trade commissioners located in the principal commercial centers of the world. It is planned to condense the most recent current happenings into a brief cabled report, to be released immediately on receipt, fuller details to follow through the mails. In the line of inquiry so there are cabled reports from the [illegible] Australia, China, Japan, India, Mexico and five of the principal South American republics.

Two news items of importance to the Pacific coast are a telegram from the American consul-general at London to the effect that restrictions on the import of apples are to be removed, effective March 31, 1921; that the Japanese government salt monopoly is likely to be abolished, permitting the entry of American salt into Japan, where the demand has increased beyond the capacity of the local sources of supply to meet.

REPEATED WARNINGS.

In spite of repeated warnings in issues of Commerce Reports, exporters to India still to ignore the provisions for marking country of origin as described in the Merchandise Marks Act of British India. This warning is again repeated in the issue of January 11, which cites cases where fines have been imposed for neglect of this act.

A copy of the act can be consulted at 307 Custom House.

Ireland offers rags for export. A list of Dublin rag merchants is available. (File BE-3001.)

Consul Pontius at Mukden, Manchuria, states that a large portion of the 18,000,000 inhabitants use cigarettes, and there is an opportunity for the sale of moderate-priced machines for their manufacture. (FE-1348 and FE-15028.)

A list of cotton spinning companies and factories in Japan has been prepared, and is numbered FE-11028.

Australia has prohibited the importation of calcium carbide except under special license.

Among other reports in this number are "Dutch East Indian Trade in Earthenware and Porcelain," by Trade Commissioner Fowler; "The Plumbago Situation in Ceylon"; "Hungary as a Market" (a publication entitled Austrian-Hungarian Trade, 1919-1913," can be had at 307 Custom House); "Lumber Markets in Latin-America" (Latin-American Circular No. 77), being the first of a series dealing with this subject later circulars to deal in more detail with individual countries; "Motor Vehicles and Tires in New Zealand," and "The Foreign Trade of Peru," covering 1918 and 1919.

CORN MEAL TRADE.

Among the reports contained in Commerce Reports of January 13, there is one on "Foreign Markets for Scientific Appartus and Laboratory Supplies"; another on "The Market in Guatemala for Bathroom and Kitchen Equipment"; also one on "The Flour and Corn Meal Trade of the Dutch East Indies.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., maintains a branch office in San Francisco for the purpose of securing a closer contact with business houses interested in the development of foreign trade.

The daily publication of the bureau, "Commerce Reports," contains commercial information gathered in all parts of the world, its contributors including over 490 American consular officials, commercial attaches, trade commissioners and others. The subject matter is official and authentic. The foreign trade opportunities listed therein are available to American firms registered on the bureau's "Exporters' Index."

Frankness Is Urged of All Advertisers

Advertising engaged in by public utilities in behalf of higher rates was discussed at length at a recent meeting of the Indiana Public Utility Association. P. H. Gadsden, president of the American Railway Association was chief speaker.

"Frankness must go hand in hand with advertising else advertising fails," he said. "Therefore, be prepared when you begin presenting your story to the public, to tell the whole truth about your business to everyone. As the only customer of the public utilities, the public is entitled to know all about their business and any public utility which cannot stand the searchlight of honest public inquiry cannot hope to obtain help through favorable public sentiment. Put your house in such order that you will fear the questions of no man.

"Advertise by every possible channel, and hit the line hard. Tell your story in electric railway car cards, in the display advertising columns of the daily newspapers, through your employees—tell it everywhere that there is blank space which you can fill."

Bottom Hit in Business Crisis; Star of Reviving Prosperity Grows Bright

By HARDEN COLFAX
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—American industry has touched bottom in our economic crisis. By March 1 activity in several leading lines will have increased; April 1 will find unemployment decidedly shrunken from its present proportions; on Independence Day every man who really wants a job should be at work. So says the crystal to business, looking with anxious eyes to the future. A symposium of views, representing the conservative thought of no less than 25,000 big and little and other firms, and, expressed through their national organizations, leaves room for no other conclusion. These conclusions give employment to about 6,000,000 workers.

Coming back to normal is going to be slow, during the next few weeks. This movement, however, is expected to gain impetus gradually. The low mark of industrial readjustment has been reached so recently—within the past ten days or two weeks—and business is so close to the situation that it is difficult to obtain a true perspective. A decidedly spotty situation exists today, but it is clearing. Some industries are stirring rapidly, others more slowly, and still others seem becalmed. For the test, the present hour seems to be the calm before the wind's revival.

SITUATION ANALYZED

Here's what an analysis of the situation shows:

The financial situation, according to reports to the Federal Reserve board, is stronger today than it has been at any time within a year. The immense volume of liquidation has reached the turn. It came during the present week. From now on, unless every indication fails, credit will be freer and loans expanded in a healthy ratio.

It was bound to come, according to the board's calculations. It generally comes about the latter part of January. In normal times it means little, but in this year of economy it means much. It is the difference between continued hard times and a revival of industry.

The railroad situation seems stagnant. Two weeks ago there were 258,000 idle cars on the roads. At this time of the year there is generally a car shortage. A week ago the freight of the country required only 706,000 cars to move it. In October the record week's loadings was upwards of one million cars. That's how the situation had gone in little more than two months.

But today the outlook is better. There is a rumble of coming business. Already an increase has come in the demand for cars of one type—box cars for grain loading—and indications of a pick-up in other lines are at hand. The car service division of the American Railway association would not be greatly surprised to find its cars all busy, or nearly all busy, within the next three or four months.

BUSINESS TO IMPROVE

"I feel conservatively optimistic concerning the future," said Daniel Willard, chairman of the advisory board of the Association of Railway Executives. "I find myself accepting the general view that business will begin to get better shortly."

The railroads employ approximately two million men in normal times. They have on their rolls now perhaps one million seven hundred and fifty thousand. When business gets better with them it spells prosperity for many thousands.

The shipping situation likewise is in, what appears to be, a dead calm. But the proportions of idleness in shipping circles have greatly magnified. There are less than 250 steel ships of the shipping board tied up today. Here and there are indications of a revival.

In the iron and steel industries, where wages have been cut and other cuts, effective soon, have been announced, buying has been better during the past week in the east. The movement has not yet reached the west, but probably will soon. It is a small movement, to be sure, but it indicates plainly that the bottom has been reached.

BUILDING REVENUES

Incidentally, the star of reviving prosperity always rises in the east. Conversely, it sets there first. In November, when the east was in the slough, Denver and the far west were doing business as usual. Today Denver and the west are in darkness and the light of dawn is in the east.

There are unmistakable signs of an early revival in building construction. To be sure the movement is not on the inflated scale of boom days, but it is looking up. The demand for cement in 1921, according to one big company, "will tax the capacity of the mills." Already there is increased demand for roofing materials. Dealers in builders' hardware are expecting a better business during the next few months than in the last. Lumber prices at present are below cost and demand is reviving. Production is at 35 per cent of normal. But, say the lumber men through their official journal, the outlook is this:

"Building will resume in the spring and carry through the summer on a full normal basis."

MEN GOING TO WORK

Men are going back to work in the automotive industries at Detroit and Akron. The industry has had a wonderful tonic in its New York show. It employs 300,000 men, and produced in 1920 more than two million cars and trucks, valued wholesale at more than $2,100,000,000. Orders came in a healthy fashion at the New York show, and the American Automobile association reports that more persons are traveling by auto to Florida this year than ever before.

Before long, some of the closed auto plants probably will open again, on parts at first. Some of the more optimistic have even prophesied that there will be a shortage of cars by midsummer.

The leather industry is showing signs of improvement. The textile industry already is better than it was a month ago. Five more mills resumed operations last week. Production of cotton goods, silks and hosiery, long stagnant, has started again and is gaining momentum. And on top of it all the volume of exports in December was larger than it was in December a year ago, and is still swollen many times above the normal pre-war figure.

Nobody expects a revival of the inflated business of war-time days. But almost every leader of industry is looking with confidence toward the next few months.

The Story of Peter Perkins

"Getting Ahead" is a remarkable fact-founded book, fascinatingly interesting. Tells how Peter Perkins accumulated $10,811.82 in ten years by systematically investing $25 monthly in high grade listed securities. He didn't gamble, took no long chances, but he invested on a wise plan. "Getting Ahead" shows you how to do the same. Send today for free copy.

POWER COMPANY GIVEN PERMIT TO CARRY ON WORK

Huge Electric Project Is Now Insured in Feather River Canyon.

Two improvements were authorized yesterday by the state railroad commission in development of California hydro-electric sites.

The first, of a general wide plan of development, was permission for heavy expenditures on the Caribou hydro-electric development in the Feather river canyon, granted the Great Western Power company. The state body announced it has authorized the power company to use $363,927 from funds created by the sale of bonds to meet construction costs on the Caribou projects.

As a second and greater act the commission issued its certificate for the enormous hydro-electric development planned by the Southern California Edison company, in Fresno county. The development, which is expected to take six years to complete and to represent a total investment of $48,000,000, includes installation of reservoirs, conduits, power plants and necessary machinery on the San Joaquin river and its tributary, Big Creek, in Fresno county.

"The completion of the work," says the commission's bulletin, "will add to the hydro-electric generating system of the Edison company a capacity of 316,000 kilowatts and an annual output of 1,500,000,000 kilowatt hours."

Continuing, it says:

"It appears that the demands for electricity in the territory now supplied by applicant are constantly increasing and must be met largely by the construction of new hydro-electric plants. The program herein contemplated will provide for the growth of applicants business for an extended period in the future. The funds to be used in the construction of the facilities for the development of power herein proposed will be obtained from the sale of applicant's stocks and bonds."

Principal items of construction in the plan are:

Florence lake reservoir, 43,000 acre feet capacity, at the headwaters of San Joaquin river.

Tunnel, eleven miles, connecting Florence and Huntington lakes.

Conduit, Huntington to Shaver lake.

Shaver lake reservoir, 138,000 acre feet, on Stevenson creek.

Conduit, Shaver lake reservoir to a generating station, No. 2-A.

Generating station, 2-A, on Big creek.

Third generating unit in present power house No. 1, on Big creek.

Enlargement of hydro-electric generating station No. 8.

"No Lumber Tariff" Slogan of Dealers

CHICAGO, Jan 22.—"No tariff on lumber." This was the slogan advanced for lumber dealers of the country today by Frank P. Hixson at the meeting of building material manufacturers in session here. Hixson is president of the Crookston Lumber Company, Bemidji, Minn.; president of the Shevlin-Hixson company of Bend, Ore., and a member of the Federal Reserve Board for the ninth district.

Hixson declared that any import duty on Canadian lumber is not essential. He asserted the American lumber dealer needs no protection and that a tariff on lumber would be detrimental to the best interests of the consuming public.

Normal Movement of Freight Predicted

SEATTLE, Jan. 22.—Speedy business readjustment and normal movement of freight by rail throughout the country was predicted by President Charles Donnelly of the Northern Pacific railroad, who is here today inspecting the company's system in the Pacific northwest. Donnelly declared the return to normal will find the railroads well equipped to take care of the traffic.

Donnelly is accompanied by Vice-president J. G. Woodworth. They will visit British Columbia tomorrow and go to Portland early next week.

South Dakota Corn Belt Bank Closed

MITCHELL, S. D., Jan. 22.—The Corn Belt National Bank of Scotland, S. D., was closed today by a federal bank examiner. Deposits of the bank approximate $200,000. Its capital stock is $25,000. The recent failure of Peter Magnusen, a cattle broker, for more than $1,000,000 is believed to have been one of the contributing causes for the failure of the bank, which held notes signed by Magnusen.

Two Submarines in Dock at Mare Island

VALLEJO, Jan. 22.—The submarines F-2 and F-3 of the Pacific fleet have been placed in dock at Mare Island for an extensive overhaul. When the work is finished the submersibles will return to San Pedro.

RAINY WEATHER SLOWED DOWN BERKELEY TRADE

Slight Falling Off in the Bank Clearings Attributed to Inclemency.

While the bank clearings for the week ending Thursday, January 20, were less than the previous week, they were according to the Weekly Business Summary of the First National Bank of Berkeley 4 per cent greater than the corresponding week a year ago. The slight falling off in bank clearings is blamed on weather conditions, the past week having witnessed the heaviest storms of the season. Inclement weather, the Summary believes, caused a slowing down in retail trade which was reflected in the bank clearings. The clearings for the week totaled $3,141,135.62, which was $126,493.91 greater than the corresponding week in 1920.

Local building during the week was also slowed down by weather conditions. Permits for the week totaled $17,115, of which $12,500 was for new building and $4945 represents miscellaneous construction.

A gradual response to cutting of prices is being experienced in local retail trade, according to the Summary, which expresses confidence in the resumption of normal buying within the year. Re-establishment of public confidence, the Summary holds, is certain to result as the people come to realize that the new prices are here to stay, and to keep permanent these prices, the public must not curtail purchases too long.

The Summary reports a renewed activity in realty purchases. The sale of home sites has been resumed since the first of the year, and many new homes will be started as soon as weather conditions will permit.

U. S. CAPITALISTS SEEK MINE LANDS IN UPPER SILESIA

Terrorism Fails to Frighten Men Who Would Invest in Disputed Tracts.

PLESS, Upper Silesia, Jan. 22.—Despite the terrorism and uncertainty in the plebiscite which will determine German or Polish control of Upper Silesia, American capitalists are investigating the possibilities of investing in the rich coal and smelting properties in this region, it was learned today.

From the former director of the estate of the Prince of Pless, it was ascertained that Americans represented by Major Sweet of the American mission in Vienna—the exact interests are not known—is looking over the coal mines here. He offered one mine with the privilege of developing two new ones, for ten years at a price of 75,000,000 marks (less than $1,500,000 at the present rate of exchange). At the expiration of that period the Americans would be required to return the mines to the administration of Pless. Negotiations are still pending.

The head of the mining and smelting verein here told the United Press that others were conducting investigations and that he had been advised that American interests probably would be active in seeking purchases after the inauguration of President Harding. Heretofore there has been only German and a very little Belgian capital in the whole district. French investors are reported to contemplate making investments if the plebiscite gives the territory to Poland.

COTTON MARKET

Special to THE TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—There were further reactions in the cotton market at the opening today, with March selling off to 14.40c and May to 14.60c, or about 22 points net lower on the general list. There was continued local Liverpool and southern selling, encouraged by less favorable reports from the stock market and the failure of foreign trade advices to show any improvement. March liquidation had an unsettled effect on the general list. Closing prices were a few points up from the lowest on covering, but showed net declines of 25 to 48 points.

The column of heights gives the elevation of each tide above or below the plane of Coast Survey Chart Soundings. The numbers are always additive to the chart depths, unless preceded by the minus sign or dash (—), when the numbers are subtractive from depths given on the chart.

Note—In the above tabulation of tides, the daily tides are given in the order of their occurrence commencing with the early morning tide in the left hand column and the succeeding tides as they occur. On some days but three tides occur, the fourth occurring the following morning.

NO TRACE FOUND OF LOST BRITISH SUBMARINE K-5

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Mystery continued tonight to surround the loss of the submarine K-5, which was sunk in the English Channel, Thursday.

The disaster occurred during submarine maneuvers about 100 miles off Land's End. The K-5 was in charge of Lieutenant-Commander John A. Gaines.

The Admiralty announcement stated the submarine had been lost with all on board. Vessels of her class usually carry six officers and fifty men.

The K-5 had a displacement of about 2000 tons.

The K-5 was maneuvering with four other submarines. They submerged simultaneously and the K-5 failed to come up. A destroyer escort and the other submarines searched for trace of the K-5 for several hours without success.

Cost of Living Drops 11 Pct. Since Peak

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The cost of living decreased 11.4 per cent between July, 1920, when the peak of the rise since 1914 was reached, and January, 1921, according to a statement today by the National Industrial Conference Board. The decrease between December, 1920 and January, 1921, was 4.8 per cent. Despite the reduction the average prices on January 1 were still 81.2 per cent above the pre-war level.

The decrease in January was brought about largely by the decline in food prices, which averaged 8 per cent during the month. The price of clothing dropped 8.7 per cent within the month. There was no change in the average rents.

Probe Ordered Into Ship Board Charges

BY UNITED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The United States Shipping Board today formally decided on an investigation of the contract between the International Mercantile Marine and the British government, which it has been charged is inimical to American shipping interests.

The decision was reached at a secret meeting of the board after Senator Jones, Washington, told the board that the International agreed to take no action which might be injurious to British shipping interests were laid before the committee members. The first hearing in the investigation will be held next Thursday at which P. A. S. Franklin, head of the International Mercantile Marine, will be a witness.

TAX REDUCTIONS IMPOSSIBLE, SAY HOUSE LEADERS

Deficit Hangs Over Treasury and Appropriations Increase.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Drastic tax reductions will be impossible during the first year of the incoming administration, leading members of the House believed today.

The reason is that, with a big deficit hanging over the treasury, appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1 thus far reported from the House appropriations committee show an increase over those of the present year.

The total appropriations, permanent and annual, for the next year cannot be cut to less than $4,000,000,000, Republican Leader Mondell and Representative Good, Iowa, chairman of the appropriations committee, agreed. Even should there be some unexpected economy to take expenditures below this, hope for taxation reduction is slight because the present business depression probably will decrease tax receipts.

Thus far seven bills have been reported from the appropriations committee. Compared with the similar appropriations for the present year, they show a net increase of $13,500,000. Mondell and Good, however, are confident that the total appropriations will show a decrease, but admit it will be only "a few hundred million."

Stocks in Chicago Irregular at Close

Special to THE TRIBUNE

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Chicago stocks closed a dull half-day session, with quotations fractionally irregular. The active stocks, with a few exception, were lower, while the less active shares were mostly higher. Union Carbide and Carbon was a feature, leading in point of activity on brisk trading at the close, finishing the day with an advance of one-half.

Swift International showed strength, selling one-quarter higher, while the other packer and leather shares were unchanged to one-half lower. The motors were dull and fractionally lower and the mail orders, retailers and wholesalers were mixed. Sears sold down one-half and Montgomery was up a half. Stewart Warner was strong, closing three-eighths higher. The bonds were quiet. Commonwealth Edison fives sold three-quarters higher and South Side Elevated four and one-halfs were one-quarter lower.

Fat Cattle Prices Tumble in Chicago

BY UNITED PRESS.
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Fat cattle prices here tumbled to the lowest level since 1916 today. Quotations ranged from $7 to $10.75.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Special to THE TRIBUNE

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Action of the grain markets today was the reverse of Friday, the lowest prices being made early in the day and the highest toward the close. News in the main was mixed with considerable of a constructive character. While trading was only fair and largely in the way of evening up for the week, net gains were 2½@2¾c on wheat; ⅝c on corn; ½c on oats; ¾@1½c on rye and 1½c on barley.

[illegible] pressure from sellers all week but despite the liberal export business in wheat and corn and the light outside speculative buying losses on wheat for the week were only 5½c to 6⅝c, while corn is off 2½c to 2¾c; oats, 1¾c to 1[illegible]c; rye, 3 to 3¾c, and barley, 5¼c lower.

The feature in corn was the report of lighter farmers' sales and of off country roads, which restrict deliveries in the interior. There has been heavy liquidation and active [illegible] movement which lifted prices more than one cent from the low point.

Oats had better support, advancing nearly one cent and closing at the top. Shorts were the best buyers, while selling pressure was lighter.

OIL FIELDS OF ARCTIC TO SEE SPRING RUSH

Thousands Plan for Journey North, When Ice Jams in Rivers Break

By Universal Service

CALGARY Alberta, Jan --—Busy little stern-wheel steamers of the Far North will carry a new kind of business—for them—when the ice jams break in the rivers and lakes that water the Arctic Circle

This summer new reaches of the unmapped Arctic rivers will be charted as thousands of hardened prospectors begin the new mad scramble that is scheduled for Canada's boundless oil fields

Into the Mackenzie district of the Yukon, whose rivers carried on their frozen faces thousands upon thousands who went to toil for gold twenty odd years ago will go the hordes of brave men seeking their fortunes in oil in the new El Dorado at Fort Norman

Starting from Calgary and Edmonton, the big railroad cities of Alberta the oil prospectors will take a choice of two routes to the North

RUSH FOR CLAIMS

To Fort McMurray on the Athabaska river will go the bulk of the hurrying travelers eager to beat their brother prospectors to the first chance to stake a claim At Fort McMurray when the ice goes out they will find a fleet of hardy little steamers, all overhauled and hulls repaired and reinforced with second-growth timbers to enable them to churn their flat bottoms through the rapid rivers and reefy lakes that make all Arctic travel hazardous

Up to Lake Athabasca and across the dizzy swirls of its fearful windswept waters into Slave river go the brave travelers

In years before the men aboard these boats have mostly been gold seekers fur traders missionaries and west police force the Canadian Mounted Police

OIL FEVER ON

But this year the old fever is on and men are working with a frenzy seldom before seen to get all available steamers ready to carry northward the oil prospectors who have been booking passage for a year or more

Many foxy old timers are said to be planning to travel by the Peace river route in an attempt to be the first into the new oil country

The Peace river route is a trifle longer but less hazardous The prospectors will go by train to Peace River Landing or Smoky Town and then go up Peace river by steamer to Fort Chipewyan portaging once on the way thus avoiding the tedious and dangerous crossing of Lake Athabasca from Athabasca river to Slave river The time thus saved and the possible accidents avoided may take the Peace river delegation into Great Slave Lake ahead of those who use the other route From Great Slave Lake all will go down into the Mackenzie river to reach their promised land while yet the sun of the short summer shines

STEAMERS REPAIRED

During the summer these little steamers take the bacon beans flour and other commodities necessary to life in the wilderness returning laden to the gunwales with bales of raw furs worth a king's ransom When the snow flies and the rivers commence to freeze the stern wheelers are hauled on the bank out of reach of the grinding ice floes while the carpenter and the engineer overhaul them thoroughly in preparation for the traffic of the short open season and be very sure that this winter the overhauling is a thorough one for when they again take the water they will be crowded to capacity by the oil seekers

Seldom does the tourist patronize the steamers headed for the Arctic but the finding of oil at Fort Norman has altered the complexion of traffic in the Northland and next summer the little steamers will carry a class of passengers that none of the old time traders in their wildest flights of fancy would have thought possible

FOREIGN FILM INVASION OF AMERICA STIRS BIG PRODUCERS

Helene Chadwick.

Success of 'Passion' Dispels Notion U. S. Has No Rival

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Sol Lesser, vice president of the recently formed West Coast Theaters company, returned this week from Chicago, where he attended the executive meeting of Associated First National Pictures franchise holders, held last week. According to Lesser, the biggest topic under consideration at the Chicago meeting, where those present represented over 5000 motion picture theaters throughout the country, was the much advertised foreign film competition. In discussing the combined opinion of the assembled theater men convened at the Chicago meeting, Lesser said:

"The success of the big foreign production, 'Passion,' in New York proves that the American public want good pictures, no matter where they come from. The proof that American producers have already recognized this fact is contained in the information that many leading film producers are trying to sign up as many foreign stars as they can. An example of this was the recent announcement by a big New York producing organization that they had signed a long term contract with Pola Negri, who plays the leading role in 'Passion'."

There seems to be a decided opinion among theater men throughout the country that the American market should be open to all foreign films. Lesser states that while it is not to be expected that all foreign products will be in a class with "Passion," the first production to be imported since the war, it is nevertheless recognized that a large percentage of foreign films will be worthy of the attention of American theatergoers.

It is the opinion of leading exhibitors, according to Lesser, that the present curtailment in production by leading film producers is partly due to the much feared foreign competition. "While the motion picture theater owners look eagerly forward to the foreign films," says Lesser, "which, with their minimum production costs will likely prove a gold mine; American producers are assuming a policy of watchful waiting until they will have an opportunity to accurately judge the manner in which film importations will be received generally. The popular American idea that foreign productions, so long suspended during the war, would be behind the American standard in point of technique and photographic excellence, is wiped out by the unstinted praise which has been bestowed upon 'Passion'."

It is Lesser's opinion that most of the leading producers are now giving foreign production methods an intense study and that they will not resume normal activities until the strength of the foreign invasion can be gauged.

Lesser will immediately attack the many details connected with the opening of the New Ambassador Theater that have been awaiting his return from the East. After a conference between the Gore Brothers, Lesser and S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the unique playhouse, the opening date will be definitely decided on.

Bee Monson.

Star material—"Extra Girls."

Helene Chadwick, charming Goldwyn star, has acquired the reputation in cinema studios of being a deep thinker—in the interests of her art. Miss Chadwick came into prominence as a leading lady in Rupert Hughes' "Cup of Fury."

Bee Monson, at the right, is known as "the honey girl" in Los Angeles comedy circles. She is leading woman for Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton.

Motion pictures can, and many times are, made without stars, but you can't make a successful picture without "extras." It is estimated that thirty thousand men, women, boys, girls and babies in Los Angeles earn their livelihood doing "atmosphere" at the great studios. Most extra girls will remain in that capacity all the while they are in pictures, but those who really have looks and ability usually get an opportunity for the next step toward stardom—a "bit part." This bunch of girls was picked at random from a Mildred Harris Chaplin set at the Louis B. Mayer studio, Los Angeles. It is a safe bet there are future stars in this bunch.

Morosco to Film All Stage Plays Under Original Titles

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Oliver Morosco continues to make his celluloid colleagues in the heart of filmland "sit up and take notice." His latest announcement conveys the information that he will label screen adaptations of his famous stage plays with their original titles, beginning with "The Half Breed" and right on down through the list of twenty or more scripts he now has under way in the scenario department.

It is Mr. Morosco's belief that while more attractive titles may be found for some of the stage successes, a change brings about a definite loss in the advertising value that the play already has gained. "Of course," says the manager, "the screen and the stage produce their effects differently, get their stories over in different 'language'; but, after all, since the world began only thirty-six dramatic situations have been developed and, I believe, there are only thirty-six human emotions. A picture will show in twenty feet of film what it may require the third of an act to build up in dialogue. But we appeal to the same human emotions with the picture that we do with the spoken lines and accompanying business. The methods may vary, but the goal is just the same. In the elaboration and dramatic pyramiding of our stage plays we are going to follow the original story."

Charlotte Greenwood, of "Linger Longer Letty" fame, is to be an Oliver Morosco film star. She will come to Los Angeles soon to begin her picture work under the banner of the Morosco Productions, Inc. Her first picture will be a version of "Linger Longer Letty," for which Anna Nichols, author of the stage success, will write the continuity.

Morosco has also announced that he has commissioned Miss Nichols to organize and establish in "Moroscoville," as his Greenwich Village here is to be named, a complete school of allied dramatic arts. The course will include dramatic art, playwriting, scenario writing, music, dancing costume designing, scenery designing and expression. There will also be a branch devoted to the technical side of the stage productions as well as the writing and art sections.

He chose as his director Emile Chautard, who has directed such stars as Elsie Ferguson, Clara Kimball Young, Pauline Frederick, Alice Brady, Lina Cavalieri, Holbrook Blinn, Robert Warwick and a score of others. He picked for his cast Tyrone Power, Norman Trevor, Earle Foxe, Henry Stephenson, William Roselle, Ernest Lambart, Mlle. Dazie and Paula Shay.

Ziegfeld Active in Films

That W. K. Ziegfeld intends to produce motion pictures on the same gorgeous scale that his brother, "Flo. Jr.," is producing extravaganzas and musical plays, is seen in the preparations at the Peerless Studios in Fort Lee. He chose as his star, Florence Reed, whose work in "The Mirage" is creating a sensation on Broadway, and who will be long remembered for her portrayals in "The Wanderer," "Chu Chin Chow," "Roads of Destiny," "The Yellow Ticket," "The Typhoon" and other plays.

Hope for Copy Readers

Every copy reader is a potential sub-title writer; every reporter a potential scenario scribe. Such is the cheering news for hard-worked newspaper men given out by Robert Hopkins, the highest salaried title writer in the Hollywood film colony, who is now working for Special Pictures corporation.

"Title writing is merely a question of headline preparation," says Hopkins, "and every headline writer has the makings of a good title writer. There are any number of former copy readers now making big money in pictures.

"As for scenario writers, many of them have graduated from the ranks of reporters, for it is the newspaper reporter who comes to know life and how to paint that picture of life with his typewriter so that it can be reproduced on the screen."

New Beauty in Films

Jacqueline Logan, one of the brightest lights in Flo Ziegfeld's constellation of stage beauties, has succumbed to the lue of the films. She is now playing the leading feminine role in Allan Dwan's production, "The Perfect Crime."

Director Recovers

Erle Kenton, director of many of the Mack Sennett big comedy hits, has fully recovered from the effects of his recent illness and has resumed work at the studio in Los Angeles. Few fans know of Kenton, but he is one of Sennett's directorial mainstays; in fact, he may be designated as Sennett's ace, for he directed "Married Life," "Down on the Farm," "Love, Honor and Behave," and "Small Town Idol."

Viola Back to Farm

Viola Dana has gone back to the farm. For the next month she will spend all her time at the picturesque old Magnolia farm near Whittier, Cal.—the Quaker city of the West—working on "Home Stuff," her newest Metro starring picture, written especially for her by Frank Dazey and Agnes Johnston.

Ruth Baldwin, Writer, to Live on Desert

Ruth Ann Baldwin, whose prolific typewriter has turned out the screen versions of several of Metro's special productions, is about to abandon her studio for the lure of a desert ranch.

For a period of three months, the author-scenarioist says, she will spend all of her time on her newly acquired mile-long ranch at Palm Springs, California.

While practically all of her leisure will be devoted to the task of coaxing dates, figs and other desert verudre from the arid soil, it is possible that she will find time to write a series of short stories as well.

"Just now, I am superintending the erection of a home on my ranch—a task that is far more interesting than the making of any picture set," said Miss Baldwin.

Although six months have been consumed in work on "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the picture's cutting has just been completed. It may not be released for two months.

Alas, Poor Yorick!

A grinning, yellow skull adorns the tobacco case in the smoke shop at Universal City, Cal., patronized by Harry Carey, Frank Mayo, Hoot Gibson and other film favorites. On one or two occasions the death's head has prompted Frank Mayo to repeat a certain well known line from "Hamlet." The skull also greatly interested one of Carey's cowboys.

"Whose bean is that?" finally inquired the rough rider of the man who conducts the tobacco shop.

"It belongs to a guy called Yorick," was the reply. "Mr. Mayo says he knew him well."

It's a Sad World

Here's one person who isn't in favor of the lowering of the high cost of living. He is a motion picture actor, doing "bits" for the Buster Keaton Comedy company.

Recently, when one of the Los Angeles railroad companies announced a reduction in the price of its fare, which was from six to five cents, this actor complained bitterly. Buster, hearing this, became deeply interested and inquired as to his reason.

"Well," was the laconic reply, "I always walk to work and instead of saving six cents I save only five now."

Athletic and Quick Girls Keaton Choice

A quick witted, quick acting, athletic girl is the kind of feminine creature who is most likely to make good in motion picture comedies, according to Buster Keaton, Metro star.

"In comedies, the script does not outline every gesture and move as in drama," he says. "The success of a picture [illegible] depends largely on the ingenuity and quick wit of the principals. Little directing can be done and the girl with a sense of humor is the one who will succeed in the art of making theater-goers forget their troubles."

Report has it that a legal battle may occur over the filming of the character "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." Frank Borzage, who made "Humoresque," the most successful 1920 picture, is making a film of the stage version of Wallingford for Cosmopolitan and Vitagraph is filming a Wallingford story by George Randolph Chester, original author of the character.

Hollywood Agog Over Visit Of Connie and Hubby Soon

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Constance Talmadge is contemplating a visit to Los Angeles. Such is the word received from New York. It will be in the nature of a honeymoon trip, for her recently acquired husband, Jim Rennie, is also dated for the transcontinental trip. The adorable Connie may make one picture while here. This Joseph Schenck, her boss and brother-in-law, has agreed to and it is possible that Kenneth Harlan will play opposite to the star. All the soubrettes and near-soubrettes in Hollywood are really "agog" over the news and will give Connie a rapturous greeting upon her appearance in their midst. It was in "Intolerance," and as the Mountain Girl that Connie made her first screen hit, and as the picture was produced in Hollywood, that charming annexed suburb of Los Angeles, is claiming Connie as its favorite screen daughter.

A Honey Bee Is Bee

A bee is naturally associated with honey, and honey is properly allied with sweet. So when a young woman possessing a disposition with sweetness and good nature predominating entertains soldiers in a state whose emblem is the beehive, and it is learned that the young woman's first name is "Bee," it is inevitable that the soldiers whom she is entertaining should dub her the "honey girl."

The "honey girl" who did war work at Fort Douglas, Utah, in 1918, is the same Miss Bee Monson who, by sheer good nature and hard work, has climbed to such a prominent place in the motion picture world. She is now the leading girl [illegible] with the Hamilton-White Mermaids Comedies at the Astra Studios, Glendale, Cal.

Salon of the Cinema

A virtual Salon of the Cinema established by the National Board of Review is hailed as an important step in the artistic recognition of motion pictures in America.

Heretofore passing on films only from the moral basis, the [illegible] on criticism to select the most significant film achievements for a list of exceptional photoplays. Only four so far have been named.

The honor of heading the list has been given Reginald Barker's production, "Godless Men," by Ben Ames Williams. This is said by the reviewers to bring "that peculiar exaltation which the true tragic masters have always been able to extract out of the very heart of pain."

The other exceptional photoplays named are "Passion" and "The Devil's Garden" (Associated First National) and "The Sin that Was His" (Select). "Godless Men" (Goldwyn release) is the only one of the four made in the west.

To be considered for the roll of honor two-thirds of the reviewing group must agree that a picture has "outstanding dramatic, artistic, pictorial and instructive entertainment quality."

Bessie Love's Portrait

Harrison Fisher has done a portrait of Bessie Love, and this has been hung up next to the God-Bless-Our-Home sign in Bessie's new villa in Laurel Canyon, Cal. This little actress had ambitions to become a portrait painter before D. W. Griffith discovered her for the screen, but most of us are glad that she left the glories of the brush to Fisher and gave us the blithesome personality that is Bessie's.

New Dancer on Screen

One of the cleverest of Ruth St. Denis' pupils is quickly rising to motion picture fame through a combination of dancing ability and striking shadowstage personality. This little danseuse is Ruth Mattmore. At present she is interpreting the role of "Rossin," a modern Egyptian dancing girl who is the slave of a Balkan prince, in "There Was a King in Egypt," Benjamin B. Hampston's lavish all-star photoplay of the Norma Lorimer novel.

Tells About the Pygmies

Members of the National Geographic Society at Washington had the privilege of seeing for the first time on any screen the first motion pictures ever taken of the pygmy tribe of the African Congo, when Dr. Leonard John Vandenbergh, missionary and explorer, who headed the Paramount-Vandenbergh expedition into Central Africa, addressed the society at the invitation of its officers, an honor accorded him because of the wealth of accurate scientific data brought from the continent of which so little is known.

"Kidding" Comedies

"Movie Mad," a two reel Christie comedy which will be released through Educational Exchanges, is said to be the first comedy ever made that is really based on "kidding" film comedies. It is based on the admiration of a visiting young woman in Los Angeles for a comedian and the desperate means to which her sweetheart resorts to cure her infatuation. The picture opens with aeroplane views of the film colony showing various studios. The picture marks the return of Dorothy Devore to two reel comedies.

Directors Have Free Hand Over Scenarios

Originality of the sort that makes picture plays that are different is placed at a premium at Metro's studios through a system under which directors are given full credit for the entire production on which they are employed

No director handling a megaphone at the company's studios in Hollywood finds the way barred to the use of his own personality in the screening of the stories placed in his hands

Each Metro film released is known by the name of the director who was in charge of its picturization as his own production Bayard Veiller chief of production at the company's west coast studios works with the directors of each production throughout the making of the picture but without hampering the director in the expression of his own ideas

The director can make or mar a production said Veiller It was not intended that he simply should take a script and carry out the thoughts of the scenarioist Many touches that would find no place in the written story may be added in the making of a camera version of the story It is in the handling of these details that a director proves his worth

Metro's west coast directorial staff now includes Philip E Rosen Dallas Fitzgerald Ray Smallwood Rex Ingram and Wesley Ruggles The special productions on which they now are engaged are What's the Matter With Marriage? Philip Rosen Sorrentina Dallas Fitzgerald Aphrodite Ray Smallwood The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse Rex Ingram and Mother Love Wesley Ruggles

Public Wants to Cry Says Director Lloyd

Frank Lloyd whose intensely interesting human interest film Madame X took the nation by storm knows just what the public wants. It must be admitted that he does for his version of this dramatic piece surely hit the bull's eye of public approval His explanation is simple but it is quite true

Every person in this world is just plain human being We all like to be amused loved and a laughing So do we like to have our heartstrings touched and any time that a play poem book or film does that the soul gets stimulated something that it can get in no other way We put ourselves in the place of the person pictured and the result is that we ourselves LIVE that part laugh with it suffer with it even cry with it and so we get the stimulation which brightens the personality This very thing is what the public wants—even as you and I want it

I never really thought that the people were so absorbed in pictures continues this moulder of screen drama until Madame X came out I was fairly swamped with letters of congratulation and even requests for my photograph—like a regular star! I value the public's approval above everything else always

In a sense Gladys Walton is Mary Pickford's alter ego She has just filmed The Millionaire Kid which Mary let her have because she was over supplied with story material

Children Get Rare Treat In London Play

By Roswell Dague.

LONDON Jan. 22—Christmas may come in London but once a year but when it does it certainly plays havoc with this city's theaters! High-brow problem dramas and the wittiest comedies of the century alike slip away into the provinces, while Cinderella" and 'Aladdin" and Babes in the Wood not to mention "Alice in Wonderland" come into their own. Matinees, and still more matinees, crowd one upon another, until, if a person tries to be a consistent theater goer he throws up his hands and—goes to the Circus!

For during the Christmas holidays, the children come into their own Little shavers in long trousers and Eton jackets, at home from their public schools, and small young ladies with fluffy skirts bare legs and miniature socks stream side by side into the theaters to see familiar fairy tales acted on the stage And a delightful sight it is too to watch one of these matinee audiences Who would not be an actor if, by so doing he could give so many youngsters a joyous time?

I never realized before how singularly lacking the American stage is in plays for children. We have nothing in our theater exclusively for them And why not? Surely there is nothing which can stimulate their growing imaginations more than a stage spectacle which they can understand and enjoy

In London on the other hand, the holiday season is apparently a time largely given over to furnishing them with entertainment. At the present writing there are on view here no less than ten pantomimes plays primarily designed for the tots. In addition to the four already mentioned, there is Peter Pan "Teddy Tail" Where the Rainbow Ends" Jack and the Beanstalk Dick Whittington and The Shepherdess without a Heart The titles speak for themselves

The Man from Home and I chose to see The Shepherdess Without a Heart It has been revived year since its first performance in 1913—and we now know why for a more delightful little fairy play it would be hard to find We enjoyed it immensely—and we were not the only grown ups who did either

I must admit that we two middle aged individuals felt rather self conscious when we bought our tickets at one of the big Bond Street agencies And as we approached the theater in the bright sunlight before the matinee, we tried to look as though we were just going in to see the manager on a matter of business But once inside we found we needn't have bothered we were not by any manner of means the only old fellows there We were not even the only men folks unaccompanied by children Apparently Peter Pan isn't the only boy in England who wouldn't grow up

As for the play itself what more does a person need to say than that it was a fairy story? Who would if he could pull it to pieces and analyze it? Certainly the youngsters in the audience didn't and neither did we We just enjoyed it

Back of us were two tots who couldn't have been much more than five or six years old When Father Stork and Mother Stork tried to teach their fledglings to fly the shrieks of delight from these kiddies were enough to make even such a confirmed bachelor as I want to hug them And when the Cuckoo who had found a heart for the Shepherdess who had lost hers was killed by King Stork and these youngsters mourned over it, one felt almost as sad as they did

The Second Mrs Tanqueray" is a masterpiece of its kind, and Ibsen's Hedda Gabler" is a marvelous character study But in these days when very little in life is hidden from our bodies to our social diseases I wonder if the theatrical manager who presents a fairy tale for the growing generation isn't doing more for the future than the educator who teaches children that Santa Claus doesn't exist?

Certainly I know I enjoyed The Shepherdess Without a Heart I came away feeling that the world wasn't as rotten a place as our divorce courts and our society novels and our public prints sometimes make us feel it is

MACK SENNETT PLANS FOOTLIGHT CONQUEST IN N. Y. REVUE

Victor Herbert to Write Sennett Score

Al H Wood has wired from Chicago to Mack Sennett, en route to Los Angeles that he will arrive in the South in a few days after a brief sojourn in the Windy City Accompanying him are Otto Harbach writer of many New York musical comedy successes, and Victor Herbert, the best known composer that America has produced

This trio are going to Los Angeles to consult with Sennett regarding the Mack Sennet Revue which is to be a Broadway sensation the book by Mack Sennett in collaboration with Harbach the score by Victor Herbert and the production the joint work of Sennett, Wood and Arthur Hammerstein

The combination of this quintet of producing genius in the theatrical world it is expected will develop a show that should startle even blase Gotham As a piece of Southern California exploitation the production promises to be matchless The scenes of the story will be laid in and around Los Angeles with the famous Mack Sennett Studio as active center

Mack Sennett denies any intention of disrupting his local organization of its feminine beauty by sending Mack Sennett girls to Broadway but admits that the nucleus of the chorus will be of Southern California beauties who meet the standards of beauty and form established by the Mack Sennett girl and that probably among the leaders of the beauty contingent of the Broadway show there will be prominently presented a few of those girls that have helped to carry abroad the fame of the California girl in general and the Mack Sennett beauty in particular

"Can-Can" Is Featured

Only that the Goldwyn studios, which produced Gertrude Atherton's first original screen play "Noblesse Oblige" are situated close to the Mexican border and the little town of Tia Juana the photo-drama might have lacked a particular bit of characteristic local color namely the can can of early California days Dancers of the "shimmy" the Maxixe tango one step etc there were in plenty but not one of the numbers of girls tried out for the "Noblese Oblige" dance hall scene were familiar with the old can-can of pioneer days. It was only after a long and patient search in and about Tia Juana which still retains some of the early day atmosphere — the period about which Noblesse Oblige is woven—that dancers of the genuine can can were found While as extreme in its movements as the modern shimmy the can-can is a different form of dance entirely and while it would probably shock the modern public it is probably true that the shimmy would have horrified the pioneers

Reel-Real Faces

Charlie Murray

Whatever may be the status of the incipient civil war in Ireland, the public has it from Mr John J Geraghty of Galway that Ireland at least retains her well known sense of humor

Geraghty writes to Charlie Murray a letter of such interest that when it came the Sennett comedian stopped a rehearsal of a scene in Heartbalm asserting that since the play was one of sentiment a letter of sentiment would help to establish a congenial mood

Lower Abbeygate Street
Galway Ireland

Dear Mr Murray Of all the comedies in which I have seen you play there is none which made me laugh more than All On Account of a Hat an old Biograph film Your boxing in this is a scream I think it was shown here a dozen times in all but you can never see a good thing too often I would like to have your photograph and would ever feel grateful to you if you would send me one autographed this one to be as you really are and not in make up

Your comedies are more than welcome here just now because as I am sure you know the state of the ould country is distressful and your pictures help to make us enjoy ourselves, even though it be for but a brief hour

"Always yours very sincerely,
"JOHN J GERAGHTY"

Sleuth Story Writers in Difficult Role

The fact that in a future picture for Paramount Roscoe Fatty Arbuckle will have the role of an amateur sleuth brings to mind the prevalence of the idea on the part of numerous persons that they are qualified to emulate the notorious Sherlock and his numerous prototypes Of course the hefty Arbuckle in such a role is certain to partake of the burlesque to some extent despite that he is perfectly capable of making it a serious role if need be But it is a comedy and therefore he will be a funny detective

One assumes that it is the popularity of such books as the Sherlock Holmes stories and similar pieces of fiction that has incited so many people to attempt the fine art of ratiocination —or is it the other way round and because of this general belief of the individual that he is clever enough to solve any problem that the detective story has become so popular?

Edgar Allan Poe started it perhaps with Mons Dupin Yet Voltaire if we are not mistaken developed the science of deduction in one of his stories many years before Conan Doyle improved or at least made this type of fiction more popular in tone He has had a host of imitators of course like every successful writer Personally Sir Arthur hated to write these stories it is said but the public would not be denied and he had to bring Sherlock back to life after killing him off

Gilbert K Chesterton Arthur Morrison a host of others have written admirable tales of crime detection and this form of story has proved acceptable on the screen as well

But the police will tell you that for every crime there are many amateur sleuths who believe they have solved the enigma and either because of this fondness for exhibiting their powers of deduction or else stimulated by offered rewards write or call to tell just how it all happened It is generally assumed that the percentage of accurate solutions is decidedly small As a rule the police whose intelligence has been so greatly minimized by many detective story writers have been fairly successful Their straight forward methods have not always been as spectacular as the lover of fiction might wish—but they have gained their point and captured the criminal times without number and are entitled to credit therefor

Anyway the screen public will doubtless delight to see the talented Mr Arbuckle with magnifying glass and mysterious air romping through a comedy The picture and Walter Woods wrote it James is to be The Dollar a-Year Man Cruze is director

SEEING THINGS at NIGHT

By Heywood Broun

(Dramatic Critic of the New York Tribune, Reviewer for Collier's Weekly and Theatrical Correspondent for The OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

A great lover and a lightweight champion were presented to New Yorkers as the heroes in the plays of the week Grant Mitchell who scored so large a success in The Tailor Made Man is not likely to do quite as well with The Champion but the piece has sound elements of popularity This play by A E Thomas and Thomas Louden takes advantage of the love which playgoers have for a sudden change in circumstance by which the under dog is hoisted from the bottom of the heap to the topmost peak Certainly this particular shift in circumstances is handled with all the speed which anybody could possibly require in The Champion

First we are introduced into an exceedingly straitlaced English home which is dominated by the head of the house one John Burroughs a tyrant and a bully to all his family To this home there returns Willie Burroughs who ran away at the age of sixteen and has remained away in America for fifteen years The elder Burroughs takes up the quarrel at the point where it was interrupted fifteen years before and gives Willie scant welcome He is particularly curious to know what his son has been about during all these years in America and it must be admitted that the answers of Willie on this point are a little evasive Soon we understand the reason for this when the local innkeeper publicly recognizes little Willie Burroughs as none other than Gunbolt Williams the retired and undefeated lightweight champion of the world

Scandal Ruins Chances for Parliament

Willie's popularity at home immediately sinks to its lowest ebb His brother proclaims that the scandal has ruined his chances for Parliament Burroughs the elder laments bitterly that the nabobs of the neighborhood who have been none too friendly will now be even more offish than usual Brother David doesn't know what the bishop will think of it all The upshot of their reproaches is that Willie is ordered to quit the house at once and never again to show his face in Knotley At this precise moment the butler enters to announce that a delegation consisting of the Earl the Baron and the Marquis has come to call John Burroughs surmises that they have arrived to demand that peaceful little Knotley be immediately rid of the presence of a pugilist He asks for mercy from the honorable gentlemen and cannot understand their unaccustomed amiability Later he learns the reason for no sooner has Willie entered the room than the Earl and the Marquis and the Baron set up a deafening cheer and fight with each other for the privilege of being first to shake hands with the champion Then the mayor and a delegation enter to present Gunbolt Williams with the freedom of the town Somebody notices that Willie is carrying a suitcase and he admits that he is on his way home and that while he is waiting he intends to stop at the inn This plan is immediately brushed aside The Earl offers him the manse the Baron suggests that he stay at the manor but the Marquis wins out by carrying him off for a week end at the castle

The Earl trails along just behind carrying Willie's suitcase

Of course all this is pretty preposterous stuff but it is done with gusto and broadly and it suffices to provide an amusing act To be sure, as in every play which is built around an idea for a single situation the rest is rather perfunctory Willie having been established at an instant as the greatest man in the community a last act is hardly required to let the audience know that the beautiful Lady Elizabeth will relent and marry him It might even be possible to guess that the wicked trustee was cheating her out of the profits of her silver mine and that she was not nearly as poor as she had thought herself

Another defect of the play is that it is not quite possible to give any very convincing display of the champion's skill in his particular line of endeavor Everybody knows that if the hero of a play is the greatest swordsman in France he must at some point or other in the drama hold four men of arms at bay If the heroine is a diva she must sing An orator must speak out of a French window upstage to an angry mob of supers The champion does no more than duck the wild swing of one villainous character who towers over him by some two or three feet and then steps outside with him to finish the brawl in that limbo where no interesting thing ought to happen—off stage Probably Grant Mitchell is not quite up to the requirements of a few fast rounds but in other respects he fits the part perfectly and gives an exceedingly agreeable performance

Translation Improves French Play for U. S.

Transplanting Jean seems rather more novel in its plan although it is faithful enough to the formula of the French theater Caillavet and de Flers are good workmen but distinctly uninspired yet their work has an agreeable sparkle of smart sophistication In translation the play undoubtedly appears a little better than it really is since the theme is fresher to American audiences The hero is one of those boulevardiers of early middle age whose proudest boast is "I have lived" At the opening of the play he is discovered just on the crest of a reform wave He decides to go down into the country and bring back to Paris his natural son whom he has not seen for twenty years The meeting of the man and the youth in the second act provides some delightful comedy and some other phases not so gay For instance there is just a touch of true tenderness in the scene in which the father seeks to establish the traditional relation between father and son with the strange and awkward youth who has been separated from him ever since babyhood The young man makes a clumsy gesture and breaks a piece of bric a brac but his father immediately offers consolation by telling him that he ought to have been rampaging about the house at least twenty years ago smashing things to his heart's desire

True to tradition the young man loves a young woman and wants to marry and equally true to formula the father disapproves of the match and seeks to break it off In a manner a little more familiar in Continental drama than America, the father only succeeds in falling desperately in love with the girl on his own account and when the son discovers that he himself never was really in love at all everything is plain sailing to a happy ending Arthur Byron plays the great lover with much skill and humor although he does not quite suggest the type while Margaret Lawrence is a charming heroine.

Comedy Sister of Tragedy Asserts Harris

A writer can be either happy or sad

Laughs and tears are both valuable in making the world better—it's just a question of picking your medium

Elmer Harris one of the best-known playwrights in the world, graduate of the University of California says this He is well qualified to talk as he has written both types of drama He is the author of Shaw "Trial Marriage" and "The Offenders" in a serious vein and is the co-author of So Long Letty, Canary Cottage and Pretty Mrs Smith famous musical comedies For the screen he has adapted some of the biggest of recent comedy successes including It Pays to Advertise What Happened to Jones Why Smith Left Home and Six Best Cellars for Paramount Miss Hobbs and Ducks and Drakes for Realart The latter is from one of his own plays

Says Harris Comedy is a matter of point of view There is hardly any situation in life which cannot be turned to tragedy or comedy depending on the view point of the author Take the eternal triangle You can think of a dozen dramas in which the wife or husband or friend pays the price of indiscretion with his life

Likewise you can recall a dozen farces or comedies in which the same situation results only in laughter In both cases the writer may be trying to point a moral In the one case he does so through tears in the other through laughter The result of each and the result of all drama whether serious or comic is to bring the characters through a conflict of their various wills back to the normal back to the conception of action and of truth most sympathetic to your audience

Kissing Wife on Sunday Next: Goldwyn

In commenting on the campaign of the Lord's Day Alliance to prohibit the showing of motion pictures on Sunday, Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation suggested that it might also be wise to revive the old "blue laws" still on the statute books in some states, which prohibit a man from kissing his wife on the Sabbath

"We have already gone far enough in taking away the people's constitutional rights," said Goldwyn "There is a decided tendency to deprive them of still more and, unless we exert ourselves, we will wake up some morning to find the Statue of Liberty being carted away by a bunch of fanatical reformers"

"Tell the critics of motion pictures" continued Goldwyn, "that I have watched the picture theaters take thousands of men out of the saloons keep millions of young boys and girls off the streets, bring travelogues to myriads of mentally starved and bored people in small towns and out of the way places, and I know that they have reduced and not increased crime

"Did you ever see vice triumph in a moving picture? You never did and for every sensational picture put out by the studios there are hundreds of sweet, simple stories showing good, clean home scenes and depicting the rise of worthy young men by virtue of hard work, honest service and clean living That is not bad for the youth of the land

Opponents of motion pictures accuse us of exaggeration, of playing up the morbid of increasing juvenile crime Very well I wish to ask them what they would say if any moving picture company in the world should just once reproduce what they read in the headlines of their daily papers, not once, but every day?

Of course, they charge the papers with playing up crime, as they charge us with the same thing But the papers are printing actual occurrences, the acts of living men and women, far more sensational infinitely more cruel, vastly lower in moral tone than anything ever yet produced on any screen"

SEARCH FOR CREATIVE TALENT NATION-WIDE

Photoplay Corporation Offers Free Test of Natural Ability for Screen Writing to All Who Write for Novel Questionnaire

The educational department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation in co-operation with leading film producers, is conducting a nation-wide search for creative talent.

With motion picture producers facing the most serious shortage of acceptable screen stories in the history of the industry, it is imperative that new writers of creative impulse be found and trained in the new art of photoplay authorship.

After two years of disappointing experimentation with the adaptation of novels, short stories and stage plays, producers have awakened to a realization that the public is tiring of "warmed over" literary material and they now believe that stories written especially for the screen by writers possessed of a knowledge of photoplay technique is the only practical solution of the problem.

The producers further believe that many apt men and women could be induced to take up the study of photoplay writing if they could be given some advance assurance that they really possess the natural qualifications for eventual success.

Therefore, a novel test of the two essentials—creative imagination and dramatic insight—has been devised in the form of a questionnaire similar to the tests employed by the U. S. Army during the late war.

This questionnaire was prepared especially for this purpose by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, former instructor in short story writing, at Northwestern University, and Mr H H Van Loan, one of America's leading photoplaywrights. The test is designed to bring out indications of natural ability, if the applicant possesses it, thus enabling the Palmer institution to admit for training only those whose possibilities of success are promising

The adoption of the vocational selection plan by the Palmer Corporation is one of the most forward steps ever taken by an educational institution, being the first correspondence school, so far as is known, to restrict enrollment only to those who first evidence their fitness for the work.

Inasmuch as fine writing and literary "style" cannot be transferred to the screen, the Palmer questionnaire does not involve a test of literary skill or ability. It is simply a test of creative imagination and dramatic perception

This test will prove interesting and fascinating for those who wish to probe their mental qualities A copy of the questionnaire will be mailed to anyone who wishes to make the test, and, in turn, a report of each applicant's fitness will be given free of cost or obligation of any kind

There is perhaps no more important discovery one could make than to establish the presence of creative talent, which is one of the greatest possessions of the human mind

The questionnaire will be sent free for a limited time to all who fill out and mail the coupon below

He appears thus, natural qualification, to have one man to put through investigation as that upon launched. He was not a "reformer"—he was a steel high-up official of a com- loying over 4000 men. understanding of this funda- importance of the daily job leo to an understanding of of union, of which Williams in his outline of the union o secure not only shorter nd better wages, but also in to find work for its members and then to protect them against unjust firing. And in that question of working conditions Williams has some interesting paragraphs on the "gang boss" who to all intents and purposes is the final arbiter of destinies among the "gang," and upon whose favor and approval all lean in their struggle to hold their places.

With these two fundamental impressions of his experiences, the author lines up the impression of tiredness—fatigue to the point of exhaustion, and with "its unheavenly twin, temper."

"Tiredness seems to cause earlier temper with hardly greater regularity than temper, with its inner friction, causes earlier tiredness." And whether tiredness or temper are caused by bad condition of working or living, they constitute an explosive that is almost as dangerous and "destructive as the 'T. N. T.' of warfare in its effects on the firing line of our daily lives and along the larger front of our national safety and development."

Tiredness and temper, the author found, combine to make fertile ground whereon fall the seeds of the agitator's words. "Democracy is not safe in any country where there are hundreds of thousands of tired—chronically tired—men or, for that matter, women.

The ignorance of the worker (of all classes) of the plans and purposes, aims and ideals, the character of his employer, and his company, is another impression which was indelibly engraved on the writer's mind.

According to the author's findings, "the challenge of the whole range of our modern life comes to be deposited on the doorstep not so much of the owners of industry as of its managers."

"Better jobs and steadier jobs, less tiring jobs, jobs whose human service is better understood. Jobs with a better chance to enjoy the satisfactions of their doing without these being lessened by a grasping foreman representing an unknown employer; this is what the worker wants more than he wants to sit in the chair of the manager or clip the coupons of the owner." And that is the task to which American industrial executives must turn their best attention and most earnest and devoted efforts if we are to avert the consequences of answering improperly the question of "what's on the worker's mind."

The two elements which are likely to prove sovereign for these trying times, according to the author, are a cool head and a warm heart. Those are the two elements with which the entire approach of Whiting Williams to his service in the ranks of the day laborer is characterised. They are the elements which give to his entire record of that service the ring of sincerity and truth, the mark which prove his writings not the records of a sentimentalist or a social democrat; the economist, concerned with the academic problem of the search, nor the proletariat enthusiast, all of which have an "ex parte" sound.

The result has been an honest expression of a great need of change in the relations between employer and employed, a terse, dramatic recital of the conversations of the men with whom he worked. There has been no attempt to fit the conversations to the readers, they are repeated in the exact words in which they issued from the lips of the various types of men questioned.

"What's On the Worker's Mind" is unquestionably one of the most valuable, if not the most valuable, contribution to the existing understanding or lack of understanding of the present relations between the various persons commonly grouped, in these industrial times, as Labor, Management, Capital, and the Public—the investors of brawn, brains, and bullion, and the "bourgeoisie."

A conscientious reading of its pages, (and even a casual reading, awakens serious thought and reflection as nothing else in this field has done so successfully) ought to make a decided step forward in industry.

"Buddies," a Glance from the War Poets at Aftermath

With the American expeditionary forces in France were a number of poets and near-poets, whose talents were brought out through "The Stars and Stripes," the official newspaper of the A. E. F. The verse was later printed in book form and sold throughout Europe, and later in America, under the title "Yanks."

A scattering of the same writers, the best of them, have, since returning home, written more verse, with an after-the-war slant to it, which is now out in book form.

The verse, some of it, is reminiscent of days that were, while some of it deals with present day problems of the ex-service men.

MISS LOEB'S VIEW

Sophie Irene Loeb, author of "Everyman's Child," which the Century Co. recently published, sums up her welfare work thus: "My great desire in life has been to do my bit of public service with special reference to poor people in making common commodities obtainable to them with less hardship and getting at the underlying causes of distress and destitution."

"The Next Corner," New Novel by Kate Jordan

An interesting bit of light fiction is the latest novel of Kate Jordan, which is entitled "The Next Corner," the fourth novel by this new fictionist.

The story is of Elsie Maury, a young American who is kept in luxury in Paris for three years, while her husband, a mining engineer, is absent, devoted to his profession in the hills of Burmah. She takes her place in the worldly pleasure-mad crowd and falls madly in love with the Marquis de Burgos, a young Spaniard, whose one vacation is the pursuit of his many love affairs.

She goes on a farewell visit to the marquis, thinking she will be one of a house party. Arriving she finds herself alone in his company. Her love for the marquis seems so real that she decided to renounce her husband and stay with the Spaniard forever.

This false love flame quickly dies out and she stands aghast at the ruin of the frail house of love she tried to build. How she wins her way back into society and saves herself from the ruin and disgrace about to be heaped upon her forms the main plot of this absorbing novel.

Chinese

Wisdom of the Ancient Sages Intimated by Well-Selected Extracts of Brian Brown.

Because writers of the histories of philosophies published in the west make not one mention of the Chinese sages whose teachings and writings existed before Rome was founded, or Socrates and Plato had appeared in Greece, there has come out of the east a westerner who is determined that present-day students and readers shall have at least a chance to know the outstanding teachings of China's great minds.

In a book entitled "The Wisdom of the Chinese," Brian Brown has gathered together some of the wise sayings of Confucius, his chief disciple, Mencius; of that older teacher, Lao Tzu, who was 57 when Confucius was in his early thirties, and of his great follower, Chuang Tzu, along with others. More than that, he has added a generous sprinkling of Chinese maxims and adages, of poems which express the beauty and the soul of the Chinese conceptions of the great things of life, and he has presented them without comment for the satisfaction of hoped-for readers.

The book is one that will command attention. It is full of truths and admonitions which have become an innate part of each of us, albeit we have them in their western expressions and their Occidental settings. There is the strongest impulse upon reading the teachings of those men who lived when Babylon was a young city and when the western world was unknown in great measure, to balance each gem with the more modern expression, to offset truth as it was declared to men of centuries gone with that same truth as it stands today.

There is an interesting foreword to the volume written by Ly Hoi Sang, author of "A Collection of Pearls." In that is outlined for the reader the particular place occupied by each of the sages of the special "school" of philosophy he represented.

Confucius and his most distinguished follower, Mencius, were reformers in the true sense of the word. Their whole aim, according to Ly Hoi Sang, was to "construct" personal character, and they demand that the moral and spiritual nature should be substituted for the might of the strong." Confucius was a practical man, a teacher of ethics who thought by self-conscious direction one could arrive at proper action.

Lao Tzu, on the other hand, was a mystic, a believer in his "do nothing" theory, the supposed meaning of which is "get in harmony with the great Spirit of things and you will be unconsciously impelled to right action, in other words, do nothing with self will."

The Chinese philosophers differ in their style of presentation from the lengthy and consciously "constructed" expositions of the later sages. Their method is the short, direct, maxim-style of teaching, a style which is much of a relief after reading certain other philosophical discourses.

Quotation from such a volume as "The Wisdom of the Chinese" appeals strongly, but choice of selections makes one realize the breadth of appeal of all of the sayings.

"The Wisdom of the Chinese" is a volume that ought to find a genuine welcome in the ranks of those books one likes best to have at hand.

("The Wisdom of the Chinese," edited by Brian Brown; New York, Brentano's.)

WHITING IN CAMOUFLAGE

John D. Whiting, the illustrator, whose book "Practical Illustration" the Harpers has just brought out, served in the Camouflage department of the Navy during the war. One of Mr. Whiting's assignments was to find out just what lines and colors did in reducing the visibility of ships. The results of his experiments, conducted at sea and on the coast, formed the basis of many of the weird but efficacious designs which camouflaged our transports. William Andrew Mackay, the mural painter, with whom Mr. Whiting worked for the Navy, says that Whiting's book is written in the same thorough manner in which the author tackled his war work.

The Bride of Mission San Jose

DR. JOHN AUGUSTIN CULL, author of "The Bride of Mission San Jose," a romance of early California days.

That period in California's history between the years 1842 and 1846 possesses a lure for novelists which is well-nigh irresistible. It called for that picturesque and charming work of Gertrude Atherton's which we know as "The Splendid Idle Forties," and it has been the mainspring for other writings of equal skill and charm.

The first writer to turn back the pages of our history to the days when California passed from Mexican hands to those of the United States is John Augustin Cull, who appears as the author of a novel, "The Bride of Mission San Jose."

The story is of course, primarily a tale of the Spanish missions,—of the days of grand balls and festivals on regal scale. It is the story of senoritas, "with hair flowing over their shoulders, and clad in silken skirt and train, with bodice, also silken, close-fitting and high-necked," and of mantilla draped senoras or duenas always near their charges.

The men of those days, Spanish cavalier types for the great part, were no less picturesque or attractive than their women. And "The Bride of Mission San Jose" recounts faithfully the happenings of an era whose atmosphere was pervaded by all of the splendor and grace of that period.

There is, however, more to the novel than the pleasing bit of a love story which is woven through it—there is an interesting (and, one wonders, how historically correct) story of the attempts made to influence the citizens of the Californias to declare for British domination, rather than to take the hand held out to them by their neighbor, the United States. The intrigue, the planning, the drawing room diplomacy which called for the services of a former English army captain, a beautiful widow of a Spanish army general—and a fugitive Irishman from the ranks who took the part of the United States) are depicted in engrossing fashion.

The account of the advent of the British admiral with his fleet into the waters of Monterey bay, where he was met with a salute from the decrepit fort there, brings a smile to the reader and adds zest to the unfolding of the further attempt to take the capital of the Californias for the British queen.

"The Bride of Mission San Jose" is full of thrills. There are half a dozen affairs going on throughout the entire story which might have made a main theme in themselves. On the whole however they are linked together into a very readable romance, which is of note, because of the pictures it reproduces of that historic time in our State history, and of the life of the men and women who became the first "American" Californians.

Simon J. Brown, of St. Louis, Mo., deserves a line to himself in any mention of Mr. Cull's book. He is a character who adds to the worth of any story and who aids much in keeping something doing all the time.

Dr. Cull, the author, is a student of California history and a resident of Oakland.

("The Bride of Mission San Jose," by John Augustine Cull. New York; Abingdon Press.)

The Theater, The Drama, The Girls

Of Mencken's making of books there is no end. Come now the fifth of the Smart Set critic on theatrical subjects, and interest in them does not wane, despite their number. The reason for Mencken's grip is not far to seek. To say he is prejudiced is quite beside the mark, for he evidently knows what he is talking about. To accuse him of coining a phrase for the pleasant sound it makes does not daunt him a bit, for he usually puts into the phrase enough meat for the ordinary man's half dozen sentences. Here, in essence, is his excuse for being: He possesses clearness of vision, vigor of ideas and breadth of horizon.

He does not possess patience. Not yet have we forgiven him his myopic essay against Thorstein Veblen or a few other errors of similar character which he has made when he has gone beyond his depth. But, having defined his depth as the American stage and all that pertains thereto, we venture to say that therein he flounders never.

This much, too, is certain, that his dramatic criticism has never failed to stir the American public. He is the thorn in the side of the dilettanti, the aesthete and the visionary with as much surety as Friedrich Nietsche was the thorn in the side of their Germanic counterparts. He can tickle a sore spot with shameless impudence, smash shams with demoniacal gusto and discover good work with a like ungrudging pleasure. Finally, with the New York Times, let us exclaim that he probable knows more about dramatic literature than any one now writing regularly on this subject.

His initial confession of faith in the present work is a catalogue of tastes that represents him again as thoroughly cosmopolitan. He likes Shakespeare and Ziegfeld; very well. He mentions with praise the dan*cing* of Ann Pennington and the playwriting of Gerhard Hauptmann in the same breath; so be it. But imagine the colossal nerve of the man, to say that Cohan is a more expert playwright than Euripides or Calderon and that Lope de Vega is one of the worst that ever lived! Imagine the colossal nerve of him thus brazenly to state what everyone knows to be true and everyone nervously denies. The introductory essay is of a character, and the rest of the book too, for that matter.

The scope of the book is wide. There are more than a hundred essays ranging in length from a sentence or two or a trite quotation to two dozen or more pages apiece. Some of the titles are indicative of how far he fares. For instance: The actor in criticism, on an actress' charm, journalistic dramatic criticism, the dog as an actor, the art theater, the Broadway of yesterday, the star system and poor plays and the actors' strike.

Whether one seeks to profit by authoritative critical views or to pass an interesting three or four hours, the book serves his purpose well. Mencken positively is never dull; sometimes he is important.

("The Theater, the Drama, the Girls," by George Jean Nathan: New York; Alfred A. Knopf. $2.50.)

"Jenny Essenden," Moving Love Tale by Anthony Pride

Moonlight in an old English garden. . . . A lake bordered by trees and vines . . . . The subdued strains of Offenbach's "Barcarolle" coming from a nearby ballroom. . . . A woman, young, unusually beautiful and wealthy in her own name, pleading with a man she has known but a comparatively short time, to marry her.

The man, bewildered and almost unbelieving, swept into an acceptance of her proposal.

This is the situation created by Anthony Pryde in the first chapter of his latest contribution to current fiction, "Jenny Essenden, A Romance of the Other Woman." The reader scarcely has time to obtain a fleeting introduction to Mark Stuart, war veteran, scientist, politician, and his brother, Lawrence, and Miss Mazie Archdale, beautiful and independently wealthy, before he discovers Sturt and Mazie as the principals in a rather unusual love scene in a garden and the chapter closes with Sturt, still rather bewildered, plighted to Mazie.

The author has selected as his theme a conflict between two women of strong, but diverse, natures competing for the love of a man, and both using their natural weapons, their wits, with merciless skill and effectiveness.

The characters and the story respectively are convincing and well told and the author at times shows an unusual degree of skill in his analysis of human nature as embodied in the principal figures in the novel.

Mark Sturt is a convincing example of the outwardly reserved but innately warm-blooded man of action; Mazie is amply portrayed as a woman of romantic impulse, and in Jenny, herself, we are given a portrait of a "light woman" who is in no sense a lay figure. And the book incorporates a generous and appreciable measure of action and incident.

It will be eagerly welcomed by those who enjoyed the author's "Marqueray's Duel."

BIBLE FOR THE YOUNG

A discussion which crops up every now and again is once more active. Its perennial subject is the need for a Bible which is free from the trappings of peculiar binding, verse numbering, marginal references and the like, which is [illegible] logically arranged and purged of those passages which are "unduly arresting" and "like to prove stumbling blocks" to the immature reader. The Christian Century of Chicago had an interesting article on the subject which was reproduced at some length in the Literary Digest recently, and now the Century Co. is confident that its abridged and expurgated "Bible for Young People" is exactly what is indicated and in pleasant confirmation has received a letter from an interested correspondent who declares: "It looks to me as if your 'Bible for Young People' was what they had in mind."

"The Cow Country," Bower's Latest Tale of the West

Full of the lure of the sunset land of romance, B. M. Bower's stories of the West have met with great success, because one finds in them not only the splendid sweep of the plains and mountain ranges, the glory of the sunset, the rugged strength and resourcefulness of the men and women who ride and shoot, but also a gay and rollicking humor as typical of the West as all the other characteristics which lovers of western novels like to find.

Bower's latest book is "Cow-Country," a full length novel, longer than any of his other books.

Life for Bud Birnie began with a great herd of cattle plodding north over the vast plains. He was brought up in the saddle, on a ranch in southern Wyoming, and learned all there was to know about riding and roping. Then he left home to make his own way and rode north to Idaho, taking with him three of his father's best horses, Suntish, Smoky and Stopper.

Winning money on his horses when they represented his entire business capital, he wondered what was wrong with Burroback Valley that three people of widely different viewpoints should caution him, and couch their admonitions in such general terms that he could not feel the force of their warning. Then things began to happen and he found out how much was wrong. So you may read of the crookedness of the people of Little Lost Ranch, the night ride through Catrock Canyon, the fight at the bank of the crater, and the search for Marion Morris. The novel will cause you to shudder occasionally and laugh often.

Secrets of Crewe House, Headquarters of British War Propaganda, Published in Book by Sir Campbell Stuart.

Some recognized author has made use already of the "now we can tell" idea as it touches the secrets of the great war. With that for his book's title that author has written much that had to remain secret during the days of the gigantic struggle, but which loses none of its interest because it happens to be a few years tardy.

Such a theory has been adopted by Sir Campbell Stuart, K. B. E., who served during the years of the war as deputy director of the department of propaganda in enemy countries and deputy chairman of the advisory committee which was named by Lord Northcliffe, director of propaganda in enemy countries. The advisory committee, which cooperated enthusiastically in the campaign of education and enlightenment in foreign fields, included well-known men of affairs, each of whom had won distinction in some sphere of public service which rendered his work invaluable.

Headquarters of the department were established at Crewe House, the town mansion of the Marquis of Crewe, who had, with characteristic public spirit, placed it at the disposal of the government for war purposes. In a volume entitled "Secrets of Crewe House," Sir Campbell Stuart sets forth a remarkable story of British propaganda in enemy countries during 1918, a story which records historic activities whose successful culmination have become matters of world history.

With all of the possible obstacles to publicity removed by the peace negotiations, Sir Campbell has set about to let the world know just what the task of the department of propaganda in enemy countries was and just what strenuous methods had to be adopted to make that work successful.

The book is one more to add to the long list of war records, but it differs from the vast majority in that its subject matter covers a new field, a new division of the war effort which was put forth with such gratifying results. Numerous maps and illustrations add to the interest of the narrative.

F. TENNYSON JESSE.

"The Happy Bride," recently published by Doran, is F. Tennyson Jesse's first book of exquisitely lovely poems. Everyone knows that she is the grand-niece of Alfred Lord Tennyson, but they would hardly guess that this fragilely beautiful young woman was correspondent for a London paper during the war, and the last woman to leave the town during the siege of Brussels, and that she is an enthusiastic fisherman and sailor. "The Milky Way," "Beggars on Horseback," "Secret Bread" are the tiles of Miss Jesse's novels which have appeared in this country. "The Sword of Deborah" was an account of the work done by the women of England during the war.

CARL VAN VECHTEN

"Whenever the subject comes up, and it may be said, speaking with moderation, that it comes up forty times a day, some one invariably declares, 'No, I don't like cats, I like dogs.' The cognate dichotomous remark, which is equally popular, prevalent, and banal, is 'No, I don't like Dickens, I like Thackeray.' As James Branch Cabell has conveniently pointed out for all time, 'to the philosophical mind it would seem equally sensible to decline to participate in a game of billiards on the ground that one was fond of herring.'" Carl Van Vechten in "The Tiger in the House" (Knopf).

"Seen and Unseen"

Yone Noguchi's Book of Verse, Written Twenty Years Ago, in the Shades and Shadows of The Hights and Near Home of His Friend, Joaquin Miller.

Certain Imagists, writers of free verse and others may hold it as proof that these methods of recent favor are natural because a young Japanese twenty years ago expressed his loneliness in the shattered line and in the disconnected manner of the "newer school." Those who have had the fortune to have known Yone Noguchi in the days when he was sleeping on a blanket in the canyon back of Joaquin Miller's Hights will not call him the freak poet or one who has sought to win a favor with a new set of mechanics.

Noguchi was a lonely Japanese, deliberately lonely for the good it would do his soul. Struggling with his emotions and with the English language, he put the thoughts that came to him in the shadowed alleys of the forest into a verse form, poetic for its imagery and metaphor and rather astounding in its choice of words. If a poet could be given, of a sudden, the English language that he might write with no restrictions imposed by tradition and usage the result might well be like this obtained by the Japanese. The reader finds himself wondering and approving at comparisons and fancies expressed in words that are familiar but seldom have been so employed. Perhaps Noguchi has the advantage of a knowledge of the Oriental wealth of metaphor and has translated, unconsciously, many of the extravagances and conceits of his countrymen into the English he has thought best suited.

Joaquin Miller and Noguchi were friends and they sought words and thoughts together. It was Gelett Burgess who introduced the poet to the country and Porter Garnett who gave him of his earliest encouragement. After twenty years the poems "Seen and Unseen" have been published by these two friends and Burgess has written an introduction. The book is put out in an artistic form and to a limited circulation.

There will be readers who will see in this volume the soul of a real poet. If they know a little of the man and the life he led here they will understand better the spirit of the verse. Joaquin Miller's canyon, its shadows and its dreams, a lonely man bursting, despite the handicaps that distinguish him, into noble song and an appeal for understanding and even for affection are here:

"Alone!
Though the heaven above break down; though the earth spreads around—apart, alone, not even my own shadow in the world of darkness: with only my withered soul housed in the tear-rusted body.
As a motherless wind in the breathless vale, as a funeral bell stealing down into the unvisible world
  by a dream-muffled path.
Alone with my own loneliness, with my own reverie."

This is but a part of one of the verses and can hint only at the power of expressing mood and the manner of this man who has looked upon our words as new ones and put them to a strange and beautiful use.—A. R. S.

"Sea Fighters," a Story With Lots of Action

Quite as fascinating as the vividly illuminated illustration of a camouflaged battleship on the paper slip about this book is the collection of short stories which have just come from the pen of Warren H. Miller. It is a series of prose sea chanteys, each one of them a thrill with the excitement of war time afloat.

Miller knows his field through dint of hard experience there. He has spent his time before the mast as well as on the deck of an American fighting boat. Besides, he has been careful about his observations. It will take a practiced sea-going man to catch him up on the accuracy of his details, with which the stories are replete.

What do you mean when you speak of a live sea yarn? Have you not in the back of your head an echo of a thing Rudyard Kipling said here and there? Is there not a memory of the happy boyhood days when Oliver Optic ruled one's literary horizon, or when Dana cooked a broth which the toughest appetite could crave?

Who does not remember the cave the "fellows" dug in the levy where those exciting tales might find safe depository? Or was the cave excavated instead in the side of a haystack? Or was it a place behind the stairway of a city apartment house? It hardly matters. It served the purpose. It was pictured with grave gay ghosts and with horned and forked-tailed ghosts and with all sorts of devilish insignia from jolly Rogers to fighting masts.

Miller's book gives the reader a chance for re-entry upon those but dimly remembered joys. Its tales are loud with the sound of the sea and friendly with all sorts of ships and informed about navy men backwards and forwards.

Action is their first quality; navy loyalty their second. How a red-haired reserve boy did not fit into navy tradition is a tale of the fleet that will rouse many a laugh. "The Hands of the Captain" is a stirring description of a storm battling with a converted yacht. Boys ought to like "Pease of the Navy," the best perhaps with breathless moments of unsuspected heroism, though the substance—if not the manner—of its conclusion is very patent from the start of the narration.

But the tang of the sea is in every one of the tales. You smell brine the moment you open the covers.

GENERAL SHERMAN AND THE WAR CORRESPONDENTS.

In "Villiers: His Five Decades of Adventure," which the Harpers recently published, Frederic Villiers tells of a speech made by General W. T. Sherman at a dinner at Delmonico's in honor of Henry M. Stanley, the explorer. He says: "When he rose to respond to the toast for the army, he laughingly referred to the newspaper reporters with his troops in Georgia, for the room was full of the fraternity taking notes. 'They were a great trouble to me on the march, and I had much difficulty in keeping my plans from appearing prematurely in the papers. I am afraid I must have seemed a bit bearish to the 'intrepid correspondents' and I remember that I threatened to have at least one of those zealous gentlemen shot. But,' continued the general, still with a sweet smile on his face, 'if I were campaigning with war correspondents of the present day I would have them all hanged.'"

"THE OTHER WOMAN

Another book to find its way to the screen is Norah Davis' "The Other Woman" which the Century Co. published not long ago. This dramatic narrative of a man's struggle with an alternate personality and the crisis this struggle brings about in his married life will be shown shortly to film fans.

"From a Quiet Garden," by Mrs. May Preston Slosson

Just as we supposed the day of quiet poetry had passed comes a volume from May Preston Slosson to restore our vision. Dr. Slosson—a doctor of philosophy writing poetry is almost as startling as a professor of economics writing nonsense novels—is a reactionary of the reactionaries when it comes to poetic problems. A glance at her diatribe against Edgar Lee Masters is sufficient proof.

But the book will be chiefly relished for its poems of nature and family love, a something harkening from Wadsworth and with his deep stirring of the emotions through sheer sincerity and gentle beauty. The writer makes a definite point of distinguishing between the emotionally true and the false, between beauty and gaudy show, between the quiet worth of enduring love and erotomania.

This is the first time at which Mrs. Slosson's poems, appearing in various periodicals through many years, have been brought together in book form. Some of them, such as "Little Brother," "Choice" and "The Little Hand," have been widely reprinted in the American and English press. "Trove," another of the poems, has come to be the favorite recitation of a prominent American actor and has even been transliterated into Braille for the blind.

Mrs. Slosson received her doctor's degree from Cornell at a time when she was but twenty-one years old for an essay on "Different Theories of Beauty," and her aesthetic training which enabled her to write the essay has helped her as well to follow her poetical trend unerringly. Her husband is Dr. Edwin E. Slosson, associate editor of The Independent, and her son is Dr. Preston Slosson, The Independent's literary editor.

"The Garden," the poem which introduces the book, is a beautiful little pastel of rare and dainty symbolism. "Platte Canyon" has the pure air of the high mountain and something of the wide view from its summit.

"A TRIP TO MARS."

There are any number of scientific facts and much of legitimate speculation in Marcianus J. Rossi's fanciful story of "A Trip to Mars." The air journey to the planet has always tempted the romancer but this time it has tempted the scientist. Rossi mixes his truths with his conjectures, builds machines for the trip, and accounts for any number of interesting things. Pictures ingeniously contrived aid in bearing out the assumed authenticity of the tale.

STILL POPULAR.

The public appetite for "White Shadows in the South Seas," Frederick O'Brien's unique record of a year's stay in the Marquesas Islands, continues unabated. Recently the Century Company sent this book to press for the tenth time, and it now looks as if it would become a perennial best-seller. Speaking of best-sellers, "Slippy McGee," Marie Conway Oemler's popular story of a reformed burglar, has just gone into an eleventh edition and is running a stiff race with its younger brother, "The Purple Heights."

Women's Service to Women Is Inspiration of League Club

By SUZETTE

"YOU'LL lunch with me tomorrow," asked Miss Piedmontese of Miss San Francisco as the two stood on the deck of the ferryboat drinking in the glory of the sunset after the rain.

"Love to. But it's my day at the N. L. W. S. and—but why can't you lunch with me at the League?"

"I'd like to, if it's interesting. But what is it and where?"

"At 333 Kearny street. But you shall answer your first question for yourself. You'll come? But not before 1, because we workers serve between 12 and 1."

"Serve whom?"

"Wait and see."

On the swinging doors of the Clunie building is the emblem of the National League for Woman's Service that grew to be a personal possession of the town during the war.

When other war activities yielded up their work when the need of it ceased—or seemed to cease—the N. L. W. S. took stock and asked of its mentors if there was so much that the league found to do during the war, why could it not be of service in times of peace? And so it came to pass that the Dream of Service came true.

And thus it is that the league is serving the busy women of San Francisco by providing a club for them, with a lunch room where both leisure and business women may and do meet—a lunch room at the top o' the town that lifts the spirit out of the turmoil of the street with flowers and smiles and gay yellow curtains that glow in the [illegible] and fellowship and happiness reflecting the spirit of the women who are the inspiration of the club.

And each day a half dozen members—all leisure women—are behind the counters in apron and cap serving their fellows with a spirit that was born during the years of travail and that will not die. Happy? You should see them. And everybody goes, and on shopping days, the personnel at the luncheon tables suggests one of the smart clubs. And [illegible] tables are the earnest, [illegible] young women of the commercial world discussing their problems and pleasures.

Under the aegis of Mrs William Palmer Lucas, president, and Miss Anna Doyle, the recently appointed executive secretary, the N. L. W. S. epitomizes the New Spirit of Women's Service to Women.

Drop in some day and share the thrill that Miss Piedmontese got out of the comradeship typified by the growing club.

British Consul And Family To Leave Soon For Scotland

A. Carnegie Ross and Mrs Ross with their three children will leave in a month or thereabouts for the old country, Mrs Ross to remain abroad indefinitely with the young members of the family.

The Rosses will go to their old home in the north of Scotland, where their family ties hold them to the land of heather and gorse, upon the beauty of which the British Consul waxes eloquent. "Nothing so lovely in all the world as the hills that flame in the spring with a glory of color around my old home."

"Not lovelier than California?"

"Nothing is lovelier than California."

"Are you coming back to the Golden Gate?"

"I shall be back in a few months," said the genial D. C. with a smile. "I like California."

The Rosses were formerly Berkeleyans [illegible] following of adherents in the college town where both the consul and his charming wife established themselves several years ago.

They are leaving for Europe, however, as residents of San Francisco.

The Rosses were luncheon hosts at the St. Francis on Tuesday, when they entertained Dr and Mrs Cavendish Moxon of Los Altos, formerly of Oxford, and John Henry White, a preliminary to the lecture on Psycho Analysis at the University Fine Arts Society.

General F. M. Blatchford and his bride, returning to Camp Lewis from San Diego, where they spent the honeymoon, are visitors in San Francisco over the week end.

Tomorrow they will be the guests of honor at a reception at which Mr and Mrs Cabaniss will be hosts.

General Blatchford was, before his transfer to Camp Lewis, the commanding officer at the Presidio when he was much in demand at both post and town affairs. His marriage to Miss Eleanor Hall at Grace Cathedral on the 5th, was a quietly arranged affair, the southern tour following the service. General Blatchford is in command of the Washington post that while not so interesting as the Presidio for residence has many compensations.

Two Thousand Blankets Shipped By Mistake!

We ordered WHITE Blankets, and the factory sent us gray and plaid block checks! Two thousand of them! And we already were heavily overstocked on these very same blankets.

We wired the factory asking them what they would do about the mistake, since it would disappoint our customers and lose many white blanket sales for us They wired us that they would accept our claim for half the entire cost of the two thousand gray and plaid block check blankets if we would keep them, and would of course ship the white ones as soon as possible. So—

We Marked These Blankets to Sell for LESS Than HALF See Them in the Window—Judge the Values for Yourself

It will pay you to buy these Blankets for the future. No matter what the market does to the prices of Blankets, it is very unlikely that blankets, of this high quality will ever again be priced as low as these Here they are—warm, fluffy, fresh from their wrapping, in delicate grays and various colors—the full double size.

YOUNG AUTHOR

Last summer Orro Childs with his mother Mrs Orro Childs of Los Angeles and his little sister were guests in Piedmont of the [illegible] Redman

Now Orro Childs is just fifteen and still in short trousers [illegible] beginning—and didn't figure in the social annals of the family if he could help it Sometimes however he found it difficult to escape the importunities of his young cousin Miss Frances Redman when she had a few close friends in to tea and succumbed

Little she thought—and still friends—that the young visitor was recording his impressions of them and their vagaries for a book

But that what happened

That the lad was writing was no secret to the family That he had been devoted to his typewriter in his den for three or four years was a matter of family knowledge but his books—typed and bound with taste and precision were concerned with mythical persons and things

And it was not until the holidays arrived and the families exchanged gifts, that the story came out about My Vacation in Piedmont—all typed and bound in good style

That the young author is a keen observer of our conventions and conventionalities goes without saying—likewise that not much escaped the eyes of the lad whose perceptions are of a kind that promise well for his future

Beauty Talks by LUCREZIA BORI

LUCREZIA BORI

The light that lies in woman's eyes is closely rivaled by a sweet low voice Unfortunately many women forget this If they are mothers they frequently call to their children in strident tones They seem to think the louder they speak the faster they will be obeyed Others waste a great deal of their nervous energy in loud talking yet by speaking gently they could accomplish a great deal more

One reason for the harsh tones so often heard in this country is that training in the correct use of the nose in speaking is overlooked Your nose apart from its use [illegible] moist [illegible] of the air you breathe controls the sounding boards of your voice

These sounding boards are connected very closely with your nasal cavities Therefore if you would have a voice that delights all who listen to it [illegible] that you keep your nasal cavities hygienically clear

Despite the care that you naturally exercise in keeping your body thoroughly cleansed the dust of the city or of country roads will get into the passages of your nose Unless you know how to cleanse them thoroughly it will remain Then with these passages filled with dust your scent detectors will not be able to warn you of the presence of foul air

The care of your nose is imperative if you would train your voice in a way that its beauty will be recognized whenever you speak Breathing exercises are excellent aids after cleanliness of your nasal passages is attained Look to this matter the first thing in the morning after you take your cold plunge You will find that cold water makes a splendid and invigorating nasal douche

Now having performed these ablutions you should slip on a piece of loose underwear stand before an open window or better still if you are so situated that it is quite practicable go outdoors Breathe very slowly through your nostrils Remember when doing this to keep your mouth shut Fill your lungs with fresh air It need not necessarily be cold Hold your breath for twenty seconds then slowly let it pass through your nose

Perform this exercise eight or ten times At night before you retire repeat the process The value of this exercise lies in the physical tone it gives to your sounding boards It immediately starts a fresh supply of oxygen to the nerve and blood cells surrounding them Thus your words should be clearly reproduced

Be careful also if you would cultivate a pleasingly toned voice to avoid loud strained tones When you wish to speak to any one go to where the person you would address Then speak quite slowly and distinctly Remember that the tone and the sweetness of your voice are marks of character

If you have heard or seen something that brings a scowl to your face do not attempt to speak until you have ceased to frown Each mean or jealous thought affects the tiny muscles of your face This causes your nostrils partially to close and your voice may sound like a cracked bell

The debutantes and younger married sets alike have shared in the week's gaities, each day bringing forth some interesting affair Miss Bonita Hunt whose wedding to William O Lang takes place on the 29th of the month was made the honoree for a tea Tuesday afternoon by her future mother in law Mrs A J Lang of San Francisco when one hundred and fifty guests were entertained from both sides of the bay The Hunt Lang wedding will take place at the W H Hunt home in Alameda.

On the same day Mrs Donald Boyd opened her new home in Piedmont to a number of the younger matrons and girls for bridge

At the Hotel Oakland Tuesday Mrs George Wallney entertained at luncheon in honor of Mrs Frederick Page Cutting who will sail from New York about April 10 for Europe Mrs Cutting will tour England France and Scotland

New Gossip for Neighbors

The two neighbors met on the steps as neighbors oftimes do "Why is it, Mrs Black that your three young sons always look so nice even when they're playing while I never seem to be able to keep my one boy well [illegible] through his clothes and I never have enough ready cash to buy him another suit

The mother of the three boys smiled proudly "Yes my boys do look nice and I'm always glad to help another mother by telling her what I have found I get their clothes at Cherry's and I pay for them in easy installments Their suits are good looking and strong and the prices remarkably low in spite of the easy payment plan. And best of all there are two pairs of pants with each suit so that they each keep one pair for school and one pair to play in Their dad gets all his clothes at their men's store 529 13th street where the boys department is also Over at the women's store 515 13th street they have a big assortment of women's apparel too I can't begin to tell you how much farther the family budget goes since we buy our clothes in this manner—Advertisement.

Ye Olden Oakland Days

OAKLAND'S FIRST PUBLIC SCHOOL

Oakland in Early Days (No 10) by Chas G Reed

(Contributed by Oakland Pioneers No 26)

When the Carpentier school was finished and turned over to the city July 1853 there was a grand celebration and parade of pupils and citizens who gathered at the foot of Broadway The pupils led followed by citizens in carriages on horseback and on foot The band consisted of Alfred W Burrell who played a drum which was the only music for the march [illegible] Maloon carried a banner of white muslin on which was the motto Our Duty to Our Country First Last and Always At either end of the banner was a cord and tassel and these were held by Franklin s two younger brothers Seth and Henry The procession marched up Broadway to Fourth street and out Fourth to Clay Upon arriving at the school house exercises were held and speeches were made by Sam J Clarke Albert W Burrell Judge Jas Lentell and Judge Geo H Fogg all of whom have long since passed away

Our Duty to Our Country First Last

Before private schools were established or were well under way the public schoolhouse became so crowded that some of the older pupils were taken to a building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Tenth street and Franklin Warner was employed to teach them while Miss Hannah Jayne taught in the new schoolhouse The teachers succeeding her were Franklin Warner Ralph Morse Henry Goble and Henry Hillebrand About 1860 upon completion of the second schoolhouse on the west end of the block where the Oakland high school now stands the Carpentier schoolhouse was abandoned and sold to the First Methodist church It was moved to the west side of Washington street between Fifth and Sixth and was used as a church under the pastorate of Rev Chas [illegible] for several years and was then moved to the east side of West street just south of Seventh and used for years as a church by the colored Methodists It is still standing there but it is so changed by alterations and additions that it would not be recognized as the same building and is used as a rooming and boarding house for colored people

A number of our well known citizens attended this school among them being Dr Sarah I Shuey and her sisters Mary and Margaret David S Hirshberg W S Baxter Jos. P and Mary Dievez Chas. G and Geo W Reed Lowell J Hardy Monroe Hummeltenberg Nancy Moore Mary McKay Lottie Hoag Mary and Lucy Keys (mother of Surveyor General Kingsbury) Seth B and Henry Maloon John Williams Dr Ben P Wall John and Dennis King John and Henry Willy Lizzie and Orrel Williams Alfred W Henry H. and Ellen Burrell Monroe Barnes Chas D Lufkin Henry Graffleman and Sir Henry Heyman

Making the Best of One's Personal Charm

Bearing children and doing housework may take a toll of youth and beauty but a wife should realize that a little while each day devoted to the cultivation of her physical appearance will be rewarded in her increased loveliness and charm and by compliments from her husband and children when the little ones are old enough to observe and to make comparisons with other women

Youth is not necessary to beauty There is a very definite beauty attached to each age of woman if she makes the most of herself physical and keeps her complexion fresh her hair shampooed and attractively arranged her nails manicured and her figure trim and tidy

Even plumpness may not be unattractive if it is part of the wholesomeness of a sweet face that has [illegible] and unselfishness written all over it [illegible] however [illegible] and when ever health permits it should be guarded against by exercise and diet

The wearing of rubber gloves to do dishwashing and other housework that is often the hands will keep them [illegible] equal parts of glycerine and lemon juice thoroughly into them

Wear a pair of old [illegible] glove to sweep [illegible] and keep the dust from becoming [illegible] twice or three times a week by holding them over [illegible] full of hot water [illegible] Apply a [illegible] every night and massage your face and neck each night for a few minutes

It is possible try to spare the time

It is difficult for some women who have housework to do and children to look after to keep themselves attractive And yet they should realize that they owe this duty to their husbands and children just as well as they owe it to them to cook and sweep and sew

The housewife s task is not always [illegible] and money for a professional scalp treatment shampoo and hair wave every little while If your hair is naturally curly, of course you need not have it waved

FUR EDITORIAL

The fur market is rising the bottom has been reached—and passed

Trappers Fur prices are rising chiefly because the incoming fur catch is smaller than it has been for years This condition is resultant from the withdrawal of men from the trapping industry—due largely to the low prices lately prevailing for raw skins

Fur Strike The fur strike in New York—which has lasted for the greater part of a year—is now settled Manufacturers are once more buying from the dealers and the volume of retail fur business in America is on the increase This releases the accumulated collections of raw skins that have piled up in this country and Russia during the recent months

Fur Collections The present winter fur collections are, to date, in consequence, approximately 75% below normal in the aggregate as compared with prior years.

Foreign Market The improvement in exchange rates between this country and England is stimulating the purchase of American furs in Europe

New York Fur Auctions The New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, one of the greatest factors in the fur industry of the world, opened last week the first big offering held in this country for many months Fur prices opened up at an average increase of 20% above valuations ruling prior to sale

Two Recitals To Trail Negro Music Festival

BY ROY HARRISON DANFORTH

The festival of negro music which is to be given tomorrow evening in the Auditorium Theater differs from any musical event that Oakland has ever had. Negro musical effort has not by any means passed the city by. We have heard Roland Hayes and other colored artists on tour and we have had our own excellent Etude Musical Club and other organizations. Not before, however, has there been an [illegible] effort either of the magnitude of this or of the strenuous and capable preparation.

Mrs. [illegible] Hackley, who has the whole musical direction of the affair in her hands, has had ample preparation for such work and ample experience. Her scrap book is filled with notices which have been given similar choruses under her direction in a score of other American cities, and in each case the writers have apparently striven for their most complimentary terms.

The chorus of tomorrow is recruited from among the better singers in negro church choirs of this side of the bay. Among the churches represented are the Fifteenth Street and [illegible] Chapel A. M. E., Beth Eden and North Oakland Baptist, St. Augustine Episcopal and others. The Etude Club is offering its singers and the colored people's Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. are furnishing a quota. The program follows:

Chorus—(a) "I Know the Lord," (b) "Go Down Moses," (c) "Steal Away."
Women's chorus, "Since You Went Away."
Solo—"Little David."
Antebellum sermon.
Chorus—"Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray," "Good News," "Roll Jordan Roll."
Double male quartet in folk songs.
Folk songs and games by girls and boys.
Prize anthem—"Listen to the Lambs."
Solo Exhortation.
Chorus—"Every Time I Feel the Spirit," "Hay'ng Songs," "Swing Low Sweet Chariot."
Solo—"A Good Old Sister's Lament."
Chorus—"A Walk in Jerusalem," "There's a Meeting Here Tonight."

DE GOGORZA WILL SING IN BERKELEY

Emilio de Gogorza, noted Spanish baritone, will sing in Berkeley Tuesday evening at the Harmon Gymnasium before the Berkeley Musical Association. This is the third concert in the association's current season. De Gogorza's program is expected to reach members of the association, for whom alone the recital is arranged, the first of the week. Two more recitals remain in the association's season.

WILL HEAR ABOUT MUSIC CONSERVATORY

Oakland is to indicate its first definite approval and support of the plan to build a regional Conservatory of Music somewhere in the San Francisco bay region at an important meeting to be held at the Z. W. Potter Studios next Friday evening, January 28.

Miss Potter, having been asked by the Berkeley contingent to assist in the Eastbay campaign, is inviting some fifty or more guests to her studio home in the hope that an exchange of ideas on the subject may operate towards securing the Western unit of the proposed Conservatory of Music near the University of California in the Berkeley hills.

Mrs. Agnes Ray of the State Board of Education will represent that body in a brief talk. Mme. Sophie Neustadt will speak for the Alameda County Music Teachers' Association, of which she is president. Roy Harrison Danforth will speak for the press. Glenn Woods, director of music in the Oakland schools; L. G. Stricklin, head of the music department of the University of California; A. S. Lavenson and others from representative civic and musical bodies will also appear upon the informal program.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Moyle of Berkeley, Charles Keeley and Miss Alice Eggers will assist Miss Potter as hostesses during the evening.

NEW SYMPHONY SEASON OF U. C.

Symphonic music at the hands of the San Francisco Symphony is coming again for a season to the University of California, according to announcement of Prof. Sam Hume of the Greek Theater. The concerts will be given again in Harmon Gymnasium on February 17 and 24, March 3 and 10, Thursday evenings.

The programs are to be what are designated usually as "mixed." When the last season of symphonies concluded at Harmon Gymnasium Professor Hume took a card referendum not only for pledges of attendance but to secure an expression of preference as to the character of programs. Prospective patrons were asked to say whether they would most like symphony programs, popular programs or mixed. The "mixed" won.

Alfred Hertz, who will conduct the organization, has arranged programs which will combine the classical with lighter compositions. Among the selections which he will give are Brahms' Symphony No. 1, Mozart's "G Minor Symphony," Schumann's "Symphony No. 1," the Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde," "Death and Transfiguration" by Richard Strauss, the Concerto Grosso of Handel, the Egmont Overture of Beethoven, the "Finlandia" of Sibelius and six variations on a Russian theme by six Russian composers.

Subscriptions for the season of four concerts may be secured through the office of the Greek Theater at the University of California.

Music and Musicians of the Week

GRAVEURE DOWN FOR TWO MORE RECITALS

Louis Graveure, who so definitely delighted his hearers at the Auditorium Theater Friday evening, is to give two more recitals in San Francisco, according to announcement yesterday by Frank W. Healy. They will be on January 30 in the afternoon and February 2 in the evening.

Both programs indicate the rare ability at program building which has been always a chief characteristic of the Graveure talent. Both differ in the main from the programs sung here. In June Graveure is to sail for a long tour of England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, France, Germany and Italy. His accompanist on the present tour is Edouard Gendron.

PHILHARMONIC TO GIVE TRIOS AGAIN

Selections by the Philharmonic Trio will be featured in a program to be played before the Pacific Musical Society at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco next Thursday evening. The same trios which were rendered by the Philharmonic players recently at the College of the Holy Names and which were so well received are to be repeated at Thursday's concert. The trio is composed of Orley See, violinist; A. Villalpando, cello, and Thomas Frederick Freeman, piano.

See and Madame Sophie Newland Neustadt are to share in a program to be rendered in the faculty recital for the Institute of Music at Sorosis hall in San Francisco on Monday evening, January 31. See will be accompanied by Mrs. Zay Rector Bevitt. His offerings will include the Wieniawski Concerto and a group including the prelude and allegro (Pugnani-Kreisler), "Prize Song" (Wagner-Wilhelmj), "Ghost Dance" (Burleigh).

VISITING PIANIST TO GIVE RECITAL

Miss Marion Coursen, New York pianist, will be introduced to local music lovers next Friday evening at a concert to be given at the Jenkins School of Music, 46 Randwick avenue, by Miss Cora Jenkins. Miss Coursen will be assisted by Albert Rosenthal, cellist, who is well known in the bay district. The concert is invitational and will be the first of a series to be given during the season by Miss Jenkins.

Miss Coursen is a graduate pupil of Henry Holden Huss and with Rosenthal will be heard in the following program:

1. Sonate Op. 69, A Major, for Piano and Violoncello ... Beethoven
   Allegro—ma non tanto
   Scherzo—Allegro molto
   Adagio Cantabile—Allegro vivace
   Miss Coursen and Mr. Rosenthal
2. Papillons ... Schumann
   Miss Coursen
3. (a) Andante ... Schumann
   (b) Neapolitan Serenade ... Sgambati

   Miss Coursen

NEWS OF PLYMOUTH MUSIC CONSERVATORY

Biographical and analytical comments on Schumann, Glinka and Dohnanyi were made by George Edwards, director of the Plymouth Conservatory of Music, at a lecture in the San Francisco Public Library Friday afternoon. The audience was familiarized with these composers and their works, part of which will be given by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra next week.

The Misses Dorothy and Marjory Grantvedt of the Conservatory played Thursday afternoon at a regular meeting of the Women's Club of Plymouth Church.

Rehearsals will begin next week at the Conservatory on Bach's sacred Cantata "God's Time Is the Best." This work will be given at Easter time with a chorus choir, a children's choir, solo voices and an orchestral accompaniment.

EXTENSION DIVISION ARTISTS ARE HEARD

University of California Extension has been giving musical treats to the Northern part of the state during the week with the aid of Berkeley musicians.

On Thursday evening at Upper Lake, Lake County, Mrs. [illegible] Talbot, soprano, and Thomas F. Freeman, pianist and composer, gave a recital. On Friday and Saturday Mrs. Talbot and Mr. Freeman, joined by Cedric Wright, violinist of the Eastbay district, gave recitals at Scotia and Arcata, Humboldt county.

At Upper Lake the musicians were assisted in their recital by a reading by Miss Florence Lutz of the University of California, who gave "An Evening of Humor."

University Extension plans to furnish lectures, readings and musical programs of the highest quality throughout the state to remote communities where educational advantages are limited.

TWO BERKELEY CLUBS HAVE GOOD PROGRAMS

The Etude Club of Berkeley and the Berkeley Piano Club both held interesting meetings last week. That of the former was held on Monday under the chairmanship of Mrs. H. J. McNulty. The participants were Miss Alice Calhoun, Mrs. Herbert M. Lee, Mrs. Herbert Avery, Mrs. Donald George Schnable, Mrs. George A. Cummings, Mrs. Clarence W. Page, Mrs. George N. Nass and a piano ensemble. The last, which presented the first movement of the New World symphony of Dvorak in transcription, was an unusual feature of the program. The ensemble included Miss Beatrice Lucretia Sherwood, Mrs. Charles Everett, Mrs. Martyn P. Warner and Mrs. H. A. Dunbar.

Berkeley Piano Club held its meeting on Wednesday devoted to a miscellaneous program. Those who participated were Mrs. Mabel H. Crane, Mrs. J. J. Le Conte, Mrs. Charles H. Miner, Mrs. [illegible] McCleave, Mrs. G. D. Kierulff, Mrs. Grace W. Jones, Mrs. R. K. Ham, Mrs. George A. Davis and Mrs. Blanche Ashley. Mrs. Kierulff and Mrs. Davis offered song groups.

ALLIED ARTS TO OFFER MUSICIANS

Berkeley Theater of Allied Arts will turn its attention to musical matters when, on the evening of January 27, it offers a concert at the Twentieth Century Club. Those appearing will be Horace Britt, first cellist of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and Constance Alexander, mezzo-soprano. The theater heretofore has been interested only in the production of plays, but begins with this concert to live up to the meaning of its name. The program is later to be announced.

ORATORIO SOCIETY REHEARSING WORK

Rehearsals are being held for the coming production of "The New Earth," composed by Henry Hadley and to be given in the spring by the Berkeley Oratorio Society.

Berkeley will be given the distinction of furnishing the setting for the third production of "The New Earth" in the United States. Added interest is taken in the oratorio because of the success of "The Messiah," given recently in Oakland and in San Francisco and in which the society took a prominent part.

The rehearsals are being held at Dana Hall, Bancroft way and Dana street, Berkeley, every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The production has been sung only twice in this country before and singers of the bay district are welcoming the opportunity furnished them to participate in such a production.

TWENTY EIGHT IN TREBLE CLEF LIST

Twenty-eight coeds of the University of California have sung their way into final tryouts for membership in the Treble Clef Society, the principal women students' choral organization. Paul Steindorff, orchestra leader and professor of music at the university, will determine those eligible for membership. He is director of the society.

Following are the names passing the preliminary tests:

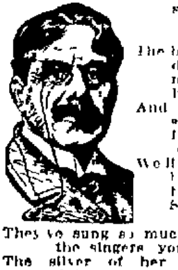
PUPILS ARE HEARD IN STUDIO RECITAL

The junior piano pupils of Miss Eva Garcia recently gave a recital at the studio. The following pupils participated: Isabelle Carlton, Ellen Clarke, Carmelita Dinneen, Esther Wilson, Allen McKeegan, Rita Randall, Margaret Evans, Carmelita Sturgis, Rose Piplone, Ethel Schell, Betsy Pembroke, Gladys Cuddy, Inez Cushing, Harriet Fisher, Edward Odell, Charles Dinneen, Vernon Comper, Melvin Hoyt, Charley Foley and Earl Throckmorton.

Prizes for the best marks from August to January were awarded to Ellen Clarke, Ethel Schell, Rose Piplone, Melvin Hoyt and Vernon Comper.

SONGS of FRANK L. STANTON

"The Promise of the Spring"



There's a dream somewhere of [illegible] fairy gleams—
The breath of dear dead lilies is melting into blooms!
And ho for fields so fallow! Have thrushes ceased to sing,
We'll drift into the beauty and the blessing of the Spring.

They've sung so much about her—the singers young and [illegible]
The silver of her sunshine, her dying wealth of gold;
But [illegible] bells and birds can bring,
And my eyes are touched with weeping with the promise of the Spring.

O springs have [illegible]
'Twas new as [illegible] was the [illegible]
When royally in deeps of May rode lovers who were men;
When one in red arenas, by sweet faith sanctified,
Faced fearlessly the lions and kissed a rose and died!

The promise of the springtime! The sowers of the seed!
The dream that finds the blossom in the beauty of the deed,
And gives us hearts of welcome and gives us souls that sing
To the God that brings to flower all the promise of the Spring!

The Woman Hater

by RUBY AYERS

CHAPTER VI

So far as our story approaches the end,
Which do you pity the most of us three?
My friend, or the mistress of my friend
With her wanton eyes—or me?

When Tranter had gone Miles paced the room restlessly till midnight. The whole affair had suddenly become intensely distasteful to him. He hated anything mean and underhand and the evening had shown him his actions in a none too pleasant light.

He had been a quixotic fool ever to undertake to deal with the situation. For the moment he forgot that an iron of his own had been thrust into the fire and remembered only that Mrs. Tranter had urged him to prevent Philip's marriage.

Philip was his friend and Philip trusted him—trusted both—himself and Mrs. Dundas, and Faversham knew that neither of them was worthy of that trust.

Miles smoked innumerable cigarettes as he paced up and down trying to see a new solution to the tangle.

Was the game worth the candle? How much better in the end would any of them be if the rupture between Philip and Mrs. Dundas became final? Whatever happened his own position would be intolerable, though it was not of himself that he was thinking so much as of the betrayal of his friend.

She was not worth it. What were a few kisses and heartaches in comparison with years of faithful comradeship?

Once she had done her best to ruin his life. Was he again for her sake to lose all that was left to him?

"It's not worth it," said Miles aloud as he flung a cigarette end firewards and went off to bed.

He would clear out of New York tomorrow and leave things to take care of themselves. He left a note for Greyson telling him to call him early and have his portmanteau packed.

Flight was the only possible way. He smiled grimly at his reflection in the mirror as he struggled with his collar.

[illegible] would think he was running away from her. Well, what did it matter?

But the wakeful darkness was haunted by the memory of her honey bee brown eyes and the wavering sweetness of her smile.

And in the morning his chains were forged afresh by a letter from Philip's mother.

"For the last two days Philip had been more at home," she wrote, "and there had been no mention of Mrs. Dundas.

"Have I to thank you for it, my dear Miles, and does it mean that I may recall hope at last? I know you will think I am a worrying old woman, but you do not know what it means to me. All my trust is in you and your promise."

Miles frowned over the letter. Yes, he had given his promise. How was it possible to break it?

Greyson came to the door.

"Shall we be out of New York for long, sir?" he inquired.

Faversham raised his eyes from Mrs. Tranter's letter for an instant; the whole of his future hung in the balance. Then he looked away from Greyson's inscrutable face.

"I've changed my mind. I shall not go after all."

"Very good, sir."

If Greyson was surprised he did not show it. He unpacked the portmanteau again and went about his business as usual, but at the back of his discreet mind a big wonder was growing.

It took definite shape when later in the morning Faversham told him to get Mrs. Dundas on the phone. There was distinct disapproval in the man's face as he went to obey.

Modeling himself on his master, Greyson was persuaded that he too was a woman hater. It had been a proud boast of his that no women ever interfered with either of their lives.

Apparently things were changing.

There was a note of stiffness in his voice when he returned to Faversham.

"Mrs. Dundas is on the telephone, sir."

Faversham [illegible]. "Ah, thanks," very casually. He put down the paper he was reading and strolled across to the telephone.

Greyson was too dignified to listen. He went away and shut the dividing doors with great deliberation.

Across the line Mrs. Dundas's pretty voice sounded a little nervous.

"Is that you, Miles?"

"Yes. I am coming round to see you. Shall you be in in half an hour?" There was the faintest hesitation before she answered.

"I have an appointment for lunch, but—"

"Isn't it possible to break it?"

Again the little hesitation, then: "Miles, I promised Philip. He came yesterday and—"

"I know. I can't discuss it on the telephone. I'll come round." He rang off without waiting for further reply. He was frowning heavily as he went out. The old weary sense of distrust was upon him again. No woman was worth it. Why had he started to interfere?

[illegible]ously. Her brown eyes shot a timid inquiry into his.

Faversham's first words were:

"Have you told Tranter you cannot lunch with him?"

The blood flew to her cheeks and her eyes fell.

"No. It's impossible. How can I dismiss him like this without [illegible]? Two days ago he believed that I was going to marry him. I hurt him dreadfully yesterday."

Faversham looked at her steadily.

"I am not going shares with any man," he said.

She [illegible] she laughed.

"That might mean anything or nothing," she answered.

Faversham moved [illegible] window. He was [illegible] justifiable anger towards [illegible] heart he was blaming her for [illegible] position in which he found himself, [illegible] all the time he knew he had only himself to thank for it.

"I don't know what you said to him yesterday," he began with an effort. "Or, rather—I do know, for he told me. You led him to believe that you lunched with him yesterday as an offering of friendship for his sake. That is not the truth, is it?"

She answered rebelliously:

"I don't know what the truth is. How can I if you won't tell me?"

She stood twisting her fingers together, her eyes downcast.

Faversham came back to where she stood.

"You have made a fool of me once," he said very quietly. "You are mistaken if you think I shall allow you to repeat the experiment."

She looked up at him, pale to her lips.

"What do you mean?"

"You know perfectly well. I came here two nights ago because you sent for me and for no other reason. If you sent for me in order to play the old game you are wasting your time."

She caught her voice on a sob.

"Oh, how dare you? I wish I had never seen you."

Faversham turned to the door.

"That is easily remedied," he said. "You need never see me again."

She let him go out into the little hall. She stood listening to his departing footsteps. Her hands tightly clasped, her whole attitude one of strained attention. Then suddenly she moved; she flew after him and called his name.

"Miles, come back."

Faversham stopped. He smiled with faint irony as he looked at her.

"I think it is useless my staying now. You had better think things over and let me know what you decide."

"Decide? What do you mean?"

"I mean that you must choose between me and Philip. I am not playing second fiddle to any one."

"Have I asked you to?"

"Not in so many words perhaps." He waited a moment. "Good bye," he said and went out.

Mrs. Dundas went back to the drawing room. Her cheeks were flushed and her eyes bright with nervous excitement.

What did he mean? She could not understand him at all. For the first time in her life she had met her master. The old rules of the game which she had never known to fail were useless now. She paced up and down the room trying to steady her nerves.

"I will not be mastered by him," she told herself. "Why should I? I will show him that I will not be mastered."

She went into her bedroom and dressed for her appointment with Tranter, but when she was ready to go she stopped and looked round her in miserable indecision.

She was not going to enjoy this lunch. She did not wish to go. The mere thought of Tranter irritated her. She was sick to death of his devotion.

SUNDAY CLOSING LAW PROPOSED
BY SUPERVISORS READY TO PASS

The Knave

PROMINENT WESTERN CAPITALISTS
GO ON SPECIAL TRIP TO MEXICO

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—The Sunday law has been passed to print, which ordinarily would mean that it will be passed. A singular thing about it is that the only religious body that has concerned itself in the measure is the Seventh Day Adventist organization, which has opposed it. Heretofore in such efforts the religious element has always been in the lead. But of course this proposed measure has no moral element in it. Its inception was due to an agitation of barbers, who did not want to work on Sundays, and wanted to force others with a disposition to work to close their shops. Boss barbers opposed the measure. Bootblacks have fallen in with it, and a few grocers who live in districts where there is Sunday trade, and who have to keep open because competitors do. It is not believed that such a Sunday will long hold, even should its constitutionality be affirmed by the Supreme Court. There are at least twenty occupations on a par with those prohibited which are specifically excepted. If it should be held to be constitutional, a referendum could be invoked against it which would stand a great chance of success. For there is no doubt that the people of this city have a decided antipathy to any kind of a Sunday law.

Harbor Control

If anybody had an idea that the bill providing for the transfer of the harbor control from the State to this city had a chance he can modify it now, though a delegation of supervisors and others have gone up to see about it. When the measure providing a contingent set of officers carried so handsomely at the late election it was realized that a fight would be attempted. With an able legislative delegation from this city it might have had substance, at least it might have had a determined start, from which future fights might be made; but San Francisco's delegation is not of a class that is likely to make a showing with a forlorn hope. The only evidence of its discernment so far is that it can see and has acknowledged that there is no show to put such a measure through at this session. The Governor discusses this subject intelligently in his message: "Modern transportation recognizes that a harbor such as the San Francisco harbor cannot be a local project. It is essentially the harbor of every county bordering upon it and the natural harbor and outlet of most of northern California. In my judgment it will not be very long before the State of California will treat the harbor of San Francisco as modern harbor engineers are treating similar ports. The New York harbor is no longer even a State project. It has become an interstate project. The same situation is true of New Orleans and other eastern harbors. The State Board of Harbor Commissioners should be preserved as the necessary instrumentality for the operation of the harbor in San Francisco along modern port and harbor lines."

The Deputy Sheriff Sat In

Those who take account of the incidentals of important happenings have been considering the recent holdup at Martinez, where two bandits, instead of meeting with ready obedience on the part of a card party and lining its members against the wall, thus leaving their stakes on the table to be gathered up without more ado, met with a deputy sheriff who had the nerve to drop to the floor and begin shooting, with the net result that the two masked bandits who attempted to pull off the enterprise were desperately wounded and captured, with an incidental of two spectators slightly wounded. The point is that peace officers have at last found a way to thwart bandits of a certain class. The deputy sheriff was taking a hand in the game, instead of being innocuously in bed, whence he could not have gotten awake and dressed and accoutered until the bandits had accomplished their nefarious purpose and gone away. This is a hunch that is valuable. Set the officers to playing poker, and when the bandits arrive to rob the game they will be right on hand to receive them. But as to the spectators who were gratuitously on hand and contributed nothing to the incident except getting shot, no moral can be adduced to fit their case. No doubt they were enjoying themselves and making more money than some who were in the game; but after all, their mission in the incident was like the flowers that bloom in the spring.

Legislators To Probe U. C.

Several signs have been observed of lack of perfect confidence in the management of the State University. Chief of these was the defeat of Amendment 12 notwithstanding a more active campaign in its behalf than is often accorded a measure before the people, and with the absence of any organized campaign against it; but the most recent is the resolution offered by Senator Purkitt of Glenn, demanding a specific showing as to affairs relating to the State's great institution. After whereasing as to the considerable expense the university is to the taxpayer, and the fact that largely increased appropriations are now asked, and also as to certain reports that the university is educating foreign nonresident students at the expense of the State, and generally as to the necessity for increased appropriations, it is resolved that a committee of five senators be appointed to look into the matter and ascertain the number of resident, nonresident and foreign students enrolled; the number of resident students who flunked last term; the number of nonresident students who flunked; whether the work of students is graded by other students or by teachers and professors; the average expense per student of maintaining the university; the fees charged nonresident and foreign students, and other facts that they may come across that bear upon the necessity for increased appropriations. Features that are taken account of by those who discuss the matter are that a report from the university authorities is not asked for, but that a legislative committee is to probe for facts in an investigation; and also that the wording of the resolution, which is here only summarized, suggests that somebody is prompting this foray against California's famous institution.

Vanderbilt On the Japanese

Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. has been touring California in an automobile, as he says, to get at the bottom of the controversy over the Japanese. Apparently he has recognized the apathy of the East as to the contentions of California, and realizes that the Japanese question is not understood in that portion of the country that controls national legislation. His extensive inquiry into the subject is outlined in a very temperate article headed "Keep California White," which has appeared in Leslie's Weekly. He was impressed with one thing to start with: the utter impossibility of the Japanese ever becoming an assimilable element. "The Japanese encroach up to the doorways of the whites, but there is an uncrossable social chasm between them. They have nothing in common. The barrier of racial difference and racial prejudice simply aggravates the situation." The gentlemen's agreement as to Japanese immigration has not been kept. The increase of Japanese population by births is given thus: In 1910 they represented one out of every 44 of all other nationalities in the State; in 1919 they represented one out of every 13. Mr. Vanderbilt's article is in excellent temper, and ought to go a considerable way to enlighten the Eastern mind, which seems to be persistently oblivious to the real situation.

Predicament of the Rice Men

It had a long talk with a rice grower a few days ago, and gained an insight of what those engaged in California's newest industry are up against. Their crops were put in and tended by labor at its peak price. Some of them contracted their crops at a price that might have brought them near even had it been a normal year so that harvesting could have proceeded. But harvesting was held up by rains, the grain could not be delivered, and in the meantime the price fell from four cents and a quarter to two and a quarter, about where it is at present. If the grain had been harvested in prime condition it would hardly have returned the cost of production; but most of it has not been harvested at all, and some that has been cut will not be threshed—there being instances, indeed, where it has floated away. There could hardly be a combination of more untoward circumstances. And added to everything is the big lawsuit which has been decided against them in its initial stage, tending to cloud the future of those who will weather the situation sufficiently to try it again next year. One does not hear of failures for the reason that the banks, the grub depots, the harvesting machine men, and all the agencies which generally stand behind the agriculturist until the harvest time, refrain from pressing by law their claims "are careful not to rock the boat," as this grower put it.

Buying Spring Valley

Three supervisors, for one reason or another, failed to be on hand when the vote was taken calling an election for the purchase of the Spring Valley Water Works, and two voted against the proposition; but thirteen went on record in favor of it, evidently having no fear of the hoodoo number. The two who voted "no" were Schmitz and McSheehy. They are the members customarily in dissent, though that is not saying their position in this matter is wholly unwarranted. The purchase of Spring Valley by the city is generally recognized to be not only equitable, but necessary. But there are details over which there may properly be an argument. A minority report holds that there is no proof that the value of $37,000,000, fixed by the railroad commission, is right. There is only the representation of the commission for it. McSheehy claims that the price is ten millions higher than it was ten years ago, after deducting three millions for depreciation. Schmitz opposes the purchase as proposed because some 26,000 acres of Spring Valley lands had been held out. It was not a very formidable monkey-wrench that the opposing supervisors threw in the works, but sufficient to arouse the interest of those who set store upon the 13 hoodoo, and to cause them to resolve on watching the outcome, to see if the sign can be safely defied, even by the Board of Supervisors and a rich water company.

Fickert Surmounts His Ailments

Former District Attorney Fickert is recovering from a very serious attack of pneumonia. Fears for his recovery were at one time entertained, but his rugged constitution and determination not to go under served him in good stead. The former District Attorney's vicissitudes, political and physical, have been many and unusual, and his fighting spirit may be credited with bringing him through both. For years he was the storm center of municipal politics, first as a candidate against Heney when Heney was in his heydey; then as prosecutor of Mooney when, it may be said, heaven and earth, almost, were moved to get the bombster off; then again as a candidate for re-election, when physical affliction laid him up during his campaign with an ailment from the recovery of which there were grave doubts. That he was defeated his friends attribute to the fact that he was not only prostrate during his campaign and therefore unable to give personal attention to it, but that his opponents saw that the public was duly informed of the gravity of his illness, and the probability inferred that he would not recover. But the fact that he was dancing a short time before this last experience is enough to show how he has triumphed over everything.

American Dentists Abroad

In the notices that have appeared of the memoirs of the former French Empress Eugenie, the genuineness of which is considerably disputed, it is recalled that an American dentist was instrumental in assisting her to escape during the communist uprising of 1870. This serves to remind that American dentists figure large in great historic events. There was one at the court of the Kaiser who gained an insight of the royal German household, and who told of it in a series of articles which were published during the war. American dentists seem to outclass the indigenous practitioners of Europe. They find a profitable field there. Which leads up to a passage in a private letter from one who recently went across. Mentioning the fellow voyagers he said: "And what do you know about this? Painless Parker is aboard!" It seems that this well-known personage is on a mission to ascertain the chances of establishing offices according to his unconventional methods of practice. He is represented to have been the life of the ship, and to be prolific of saws and epigrams. One thing he said is interesting. It was that conventional dentistry had no reason to be afraid of him. But thirty per cent of those who should have dentistry performed patronize dentists anyhow, and he is after the other seventy per cent!

Captain Robert Dollar

Captain Robert Dollar is a character who appeals particularly to the Eastern mind, which is rather more inclined to glorify the self-made man than this extreme West—particularly when the self-made man belongs here, and possibly has clashed in economic controversy with some elements which have gained greater headway here than elsewhere. Captain Dollar wrote a book of reminiscences not long ago, which gets reviewed and quoted from at intervals; but those who do not believe in achieving success in his way have realized little of that satisfaction that is suggested in the saying, "O that mine enemy might write a book!" There is little in it that might be construed to his confusion. And he says things outside the book that are interesting. "There is more chance for a boy to succeed in business than there ever was in my time," he says. "We are continually on the lookout for lads whom we can start in the shipping business and work up to high salaried jobs. We can't get enough men for the big jobs." He has no stated recipe for getting rich, but attributes his success to the fact that he never drank, though he lived a long time before the lid was shut down; that he reads the Bible every day and that his wife is a loyal helpmate.

An Epoch-Making Family

The death of Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick serves to remind of a notable family. I am not sure whether the husband of the woman just deceded is of the second or third generation from the founder of the family; but all Californians who came from agricultural States will readily understand wherein the first Cyrus H. was an epochmaker. He invented the first reaping machine to be drawn by horses; and when we take account of the marvelous mechanism that has since been invented we may realize in some sense the wonderful distance we have come in a short time. For up to seventy years ago all grain was reaped by hand. No domestic invention except the sewing machine had such great effect upon the people. Much later than 1850 the reaper was so much of a curiosity that people went from towns into fields where reapers were being operated. To see horses reap grain in that day was comparable to the interest taken in men emulating birds in the first flying machines ten years ago. That America became the granary of the world was in a great degree due to American machinery that was invented to harvest it, chief of which was the reaping machine. The McCormicks have left their impress upon American life. One of the second generation intermarried with the Medills, taking to wife a daughter of Joseph Medill, founder of the Chicago Tribune, and who died in California in recent years, and Medill McCormick, the issue of such marriage, succeeded to an interest in that newspaper and represents Illinois in the United States Senate.

Grant Carpenter's Story

Grant Carpenter first came into notice here as a reporter of incidents in which Chinese figured. From that he fell to writing sketches and plays in which Chinese characters and psychology figured more seriously. And then he wrote a book, "The Night Tide; A Story of Old Chinatown." It gets a considerable and favorable review from a high source in the East. Carpenter for years had to do with Chinese here, as their "historian" and as their "solicitor," as it has been put, and the review makes the acknowledgement at the outset that "one feels that he knows his Chinaman, and that his portraits are authentic." The story is hung on a thread of adventures, involving a Chinese "scholar" who preys upon his own people; a highbinder, and a group of wives and slave women. It deals with tongs, wars, intrigues, murders, the slave trade and many other phases of Chinese life and intrigue which the person not with Mr. Carpenter's insight and opportunities for observation may not know of. The conclusion of the reviewer is that "as a story this book will hold the reader's interest from start to finish, but there is a good deal more in it than mere entertainment."

Selling Family Silver

Coincident with the announcement that a Chico judge had decided that liquor is not property, and that stealing it, therefore, is not a crime, is the statement of a widespread movement to sell family silver, plate and superfluous jewelry, to forestall burglars. The unusual decision in the first instance resulted from the burglary of a wine cellar; the movement as to family plate results from the spectacular increase of burglaries on regular lines and the resultant insecurity of valuables that have intrinsic value. Very many rich and well-to-do families possess more of value in the way of heirlooms, loving cups, plate that serves only as sideboard ornaments, jewelry that goes out of fashion, than they may be aware of. The burglar takes account of it, however, and they take account of the burglar, and are thereby induced to realize on it when they would not do so otherwise. Consequently much precious metal is finding its way to the metallurgists from what might be called an original source. It is another instance of the changing times. On account of the increase of lawlessness and the insecurity of trinkets dormant valuables are being brought forth and realized on. Better that, it appears to be considered, than taking chances on being despoiled by, and affording temptation to, the robber.

Ruction in Aviation Circles

Perhaps there is not general surprise over the charges and reports concerning the accident to Aviator Boggs, whose mail-carrying airplane fell and was burned in the streets of this city. This enterprise is under the management of the postal department, at the head of which is Postmaster-General Burleson, and the public is prepared to hear of things going queer of which he has the management. Making big allowance for exaggerations, mocking paragraphs and a predisposition to belittle the holder of the postal portfolio, it is undoubtedly a fact that many more things go wrong under him than under any other cabinet officer who can be cited. Colonel Jordan, who is in charge of the San Francisco-Salt Lake air mail division, it is announced, is not an aviator. That is almost enough in itself to arraign Postmaster-General Burleson. That a man who is not an aviator should be put in charge of aviation in a new service, such as the carrying of mails, argues a queer conception of the responsibilities that such a position entail. All the other charges take color from this. The opinion of Captain Rickenbacher, whose ability to discuss the subject cannot be questioned, is that the selection of San Francisco for a terminal field in itself was error; that the terminus of the route should be Oakland. This must at least be given consideration; and if there is merit in the contention, it is only another arraignment of the postal management.

Louis Frick

One by one the old-timers drop out. Louis Frick, tonsorially connected with the Palace hotel, went home last Saturday feeling ill. In a few hours the report came that he had passed along. It may be remembered that on this page some account appeared of his having been the official barber of every train carrying the California delegation to the national Republican convention for the last four quadrennial occasions. He was an agreeable character aside from being a very competent barber. It was related how he had been the proprietor of the shop in the old California Hotel, in which building was also the famous old California theater. He served many of the noted actors who appeared there, and was on such terms that he retained a most interesting store of reminiscences concerning them, and not only of actors, but of many others who figured importantly in the city's affairs in that time which has come to be referred to so often as the Golden Age.

Another Mexican Excursion

An important and significant journey was undertaken by a notable group of men during the week. From this city there were W. H. Crocker, his son, W. W. Crocker, John H. Rosseter, president of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company; a Seattle banker, and others, who were joined at Los Angeles by L. E. Hanchett, capitalist and director of the Union Oil Company; John Miller, president of the Los Angeles Edison Company; Harry Robinson, president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles; Harry Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, and others. The general destination of the excursionists was Mexico, via El Paso, and the general object, it may fairly be inferred, is to investigate as to the many opportunities that exist for the investment of capital and the employment of industry in legitimate development. Now that security is assured those who go into the country with legitimate intent and prepared to honestly perform, it is significant that such a group, representing as they do abundant capital, should thus early make personal investigation of the situ*ation. It should be satisfactory to the neighbor*ing people, and no doubt is. The investigation, it is inferred, will range from oil to agriculture, and include many other natural resources.

Diary of a Forty-Niner

A review appears in a pretentious Eastern publication which specializes on its literary supplement of the "Diary of a Forty-Niner," written by Chauncey Canfield. The casual reader would take it that the book is a recent output. Chauncey Canfield has been dead quite a number of years. The Diary first appeared a long time ago. He was the San Francisco agent for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, and was well known in the more popular clubs, particularly the Bohemian. He had a penchant for writing, and was the author of at least one other book, whose title, if memory serves, was the unusual one of "The City of Six," the scene of which is laid around Downieville, near which in early days there was a mining town, laid out by six miners, that went by that designation. In that book was woven in an account of the summary hanging of a woman from a bridge near Downieville, an actual occurrence and said to be the only instance in the history of the State of a woman suffering such a fate.

Jack Spreckels in Two Tangles

A recent decision by United States District Judge Sawtelle serves to recall the matrimonial enterprises of young Jack Spreckels. The decision awards his first wife a matter of $10,250. His first wife is now Mrs. Wakefield, and the sum sued for is based on an agreement made more than seven years ago, whereby Spreckels agreed to pay her $350 a month, and $100 a month for each of three children, in case a divorce was granted. The divorce was granted, with nominal alimony, and it was then contended that the divorce superseded the agreement, and the allowance was stopped and has not been paid for more than five years. Meantime Jack married again, and accounts recently appeared of wife No. 2 arriving from Europe with an interesting story of having been despoiled of valuable jewelry by a Lothario who was reported to have gone to Mexico, and later of her taking up residence in Nevada. Thus a former matrimonial experience laps upon a later one, though both find a path through the divorce court.

Automobile Spooning

I am interested as to how the Piedmont effort to reduce automobile spooning turns out. The chief of police of that town is taking the matter in hand, and it is said in advance that he is thus making himself unpopular. While the spooning division may not like the interference, all others who are out in machines after dark will appreciate the abatement of the danger that inheres in coming around curves and meeting up suddenly with machines inadequately driven with one hand and no general attention being given to the exigencies of the road. I had not supposed it was a crying evil on the continental side of the bay, but I was aware of its prevalence down the peninsula, or, until the bandits scored so often, through the park, where automobiles are encountered running free, and suddenly warped into direction when a collision is imminent. I know the police here have considered the subject what to do, but have not hit upon a plan yet that seems to meet the emergency. If the Piedmont chief shows the way, not only will he be followed by the authorities here, but no doubt in many other places.

MARE ISLAND YIELDS BASE TO ALAMEDA

Vallejo C. of C. Head Telegraphs That Encinal City Site Is Virtually Certain to Win Decision in Capital

Present Station to Be Kept As Construction Yard of Pacific Fleet, Message of Hogan Tells Supporters

Alameda as Pacific naval base Mare Island as Western repair and construction yards—this according to telegraphic advices yesterday from President J J Hogan of the Vallejo Chamber of Commerce is the unanimous decision of the special Congressional committee having in charge naval base investigations

President Hogan was despatched to Washington three weeks ago by the city of Vallejo instructed to do everything in his power to bring the base to Mare Island His telegraphic advices of yesterday, directed to Mayor Roney of Vallejo, are intended to 'break the news' to the hard fighting folks of the navy town

Although the press despatches reported that the committee at Washington had postponed again announcement of its decision, President Hogan's wire stated that the committee had met, but in executive session

MARE ISLAND TO STAY AS NAVAL STATION

He stated that the base matter was up and that at the end of the meeting he had come into possession of information upon which he could rely that Alameda finally had been made the unanimous choice and that so closely had Mare Island run in the consideration of the committee, and so strong had been its arguments for eligibility that it had been determined to continue it as a naval station as an important adjunct to the main base

President Hogan's information immediately was given to the public and news from Vallejo is to the effect that the city already is reconciled especially in view of the fact that with its prestige as a building yard established by the mighty battleship California Mare Island is to be established as a construction yard and repair station with the whole of the giant permanent Pacific fleet to keep it busy

The feeling is that Vallejo loses nothing of that which it has, but gains as the whole bay region must gain, by the establishment of a base at a nearby sister city

MARE ISLAND TO KEEP 8000 WORKERS.

VALLEJO, Jan 23—That Mare Island will be needed to care for battleships of the United States navy should proposed disarmament plans be carried out, was stated here today by those conversant with affairs at Washington This contingency would keep the present force of 8000 men intact

Telegrams from President Hogan of the Vallejo Chamber of Commerce first stating that Mare Island still was under consideration, and finally declaring the unanimity of the Naval Base Committee on a choice of the Alameda site, were recited here today

Hogan's last despatch follows

"Since telegram of yesterday, subsequent information leads us to believe that the committee is unanimous for Alameda for the base and for developing Mare Island as a building and repair yard Proceedings were executive but I believe this information is correct Committee will meet in a few days for final decision."

SUB-COMMITTEE TO PICK NAVAL BASE

WASHINGTON, D C, Jan 22—Appointment has been made of a minor sub-committee of four to draw up a report in favor of either Alameda or Hunter's Point as a site for a naval base It was learned authoritatively today that these are the only sites now being considered by the joint committee of Congress charged with the selection.

The report of the minor sub committee will be submitted to the full sub-committee early next week and will embody the views of other members of the committee who believe that San Francisco bay is the logical and practical place for the establishment and development of a naval base

It was also stated that the Navy Department now holds the same view as a majority of the sub-committee as to San Francisco bay being more desirable than any other site. All of the members of the full sub-committee declined to discuss the expected report today, stating they had agreed among themselves not to discuss a possible decision by the majority until the announcement of it was ready to be made public They admitted, however, such announcement might be looked for early next week.

Representative Britten, Republican, Illinois who ranks next to Representative Butler, Republican, Pennsylvania, chairman of the house naval affairs committee in the membership of that committee, said today there was "no secret" about the fact he personally favored either Alameda or Hunter's Point.

Wilson Asks Why Cox Crosses Sea to Gaze at Ruins

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan 22—At last something tangible in the way of President Wilson's views on the presidential election in which the Democratic entry went down to such an overwhelming defeat, has found its way out of the White House. Someone commenting upon the Democratic candidate's proposed travels made this remark to the President:

"I notice that Governor Cox is leaving for Europe to view the devastated regions resulting from the late war"

"Why should the governor go so far afield?" was the question with which the President made his cryptic comment, according to White House reports.

King Tax Bill Fails to Poll Needed Votes

On Reconsideration Monday Administration Forces Expect Better Showing.

By AD SCHUSTER.

SACRAMENTO, Jan 22—The King corporation tax bill was given its full test of strength in the assembly today and lost on the two-thirds majority needed for passage by a scant two votes As in the senate Arthur Breed of Oakland was the leader in the opposition, so in the assembly two from Oakland, Edgar S Hurley and Clifton Brooks were most prominent A motion for reconsideration made by Floor Leader Pettis means that the bill will come up for a reconsideration vote on Monday when a simple majority will be needed in order that another ballot may be taken Hopes of the administration, then rest upon the winning over of two men who today opposed the bill and as Pettis had to change his vote in order to move the reconsideration the result stood 51 to 28 Fifty-four votes are needed for passage

Counting Pettis to vote "aye" Monday, and also counting the vote of Frank Merriam of Los Angeles who says he will vote "aye" before he will see the measure lose and that his opposition has been based on a desire to secure a postponement until after the recess the administration will muster up 53 votes when Monday morning comes around This means that there is but one man to change and that the battle will not be over until the Monday roll call is taken All but Hurley and Brooks in the Alameda assembly delegation voted for the bill.

U. C. PLANS REMEDY FOR WHITE PLAGUE

Chaulmoogra Oil, So Successful in Leprosy, Will Be Experimented With On Sufferers From Consumption

Medical Experts Are Hopeful of Beneficial Results, According to Reports Made to the President of University

Once more hope blossoms for the victim of the white plague. This time it is chaulmoogra oil that may bring an end to the devastating disease and this time it may be a real cure that is achieved

Such, at least, is the promise of the University of California For some time chaulmoogra oil has been curing sufferers from leprosy For some time, too, it has been used on animals which have been inoculated with tuberculosis bacilli and the animals have recovered.

The final stage has been reached and the university, according to the announcement yesterday of Dr George H Whipple, director of the Hooper Foundation for Medical Research is ready at once to embark upon the treatment of human sufferers with the alleviating oil

EXPERIMENTS CONDUCTED UNDER HOOPER FUND

Experiments with chaulmoogra oil at the Hooper Foundation have been carried on by Dr E L Walker professor of tropical diseases, who has tried it on a large number of animals during the past year. Because of the chronic nature of the infection of tuberculosis these experiments are necessarily of long duration, say the college heads in explaining the delay in announcing results

Of the actual work contemplated in saving human lives from the spread of tuberculosis through the use of chaulmoogra oil, Dr Whipple says in his annual report to President David P Barrows

"During the coming year it is hoped to extend this study to a carefully selected group of human patients infected with tuberculosis With the consent of these individuals it will be possible to investigate with great care the reaction to this peculiar drug.

This drug can be given in considerable amount to humans affected with leprosy and by this means leprosy is now regularly and rather promptly cured Whether or not this drug will have as favorable an influence on the lesions of tuberculosis in the human being can only be ascertained by the most carefully controlled observations upon experimental animals and patients Attempts are being made to prepare new compounds of the chaulmoogra acid which may still be more powerful in their effect upon the bacteria concerned

SUCCESS WITH OIL USED FOR LEPROSY

"For this work the services of a chemist skilled in this field of research is an absolute necessity At present funds are not available, but it is hoped that the great importance of this work may be realized by friends of the university who may be in a position to supply the funds required"

That Dr Walker the conductor of the experiments, may be called to the Hawaiian Islands by the United States Public Health Service as a result of his success in controlling leprosy is the announcement of Dr Whipple The work in this regard is described as follows

"Further work on the leprosy bacillus has uncovered some important facts related to the epidemiology of leprosy When finally worked out it is hoped that these facts may radically modify the present methods of public health control of the disease of leprosy, which so far has defied the activities of the various boards of health in the communities in which it is prevalent The United States Public Health Service in the Hawaiian Islands is greatly impressed in this work and it is possible that Dr Walker may find it necessary to visit their laboratories during the present year"

BERLIN, Jan 22 — A slump on the German stock exchange, while the mark improves abroad—these are symptoms of our mad economic conditions and illustrate the falseness of our present situation We groan over unfavorable exchange, hindering imports and reparations but do such volumes of small domestic business that banks despite doubled personnel, can hardly handle it and constantly declare new holidays in order to catch up on their business

Collections taken in the streets for hungry, unclad children are like catching rain drops in a bottomless barrel while an army of officials, undreamed of during kaiser times, draws salaries Billions are spent for champagne needless luxuries are imported and there are more balls, dances and gluttonous feasts than before the war

A half billion marks was gambled in Berlin during the racing season Troops with many various names for their regiments hear loud whisperings that their existence is justifiable to the entente allies only because they overthrow Communist revolutions

AUSTRIA'S UNION WITH GERMANY

Yet we seem surprised at bloodshed at every harmless meeting We are helpless before the decree forbidding Austria's union with Germany—regarded as the greatest crime of the peace treaty—yet every financier and nearly every politician secretly admits that Germany is quite unable to bear the burden of setting Austria's house in order

As in ancient times, every stranger was considered a barbarian and a deadly enemy, so now it is considered a patriotic duty to spread lies for enemy ears As during the war llar Bethmann-Hollweg is being glorified by this sterling republic and the politically minded German people are again having hammered into them the doctrine that they are surrounded by greedy enemies and in danger of annihilation

They are told that they must use all weapons, even craft and lies to defend against this conspiracy This is quite immoral and all well meaning people should join to free the splendid German people from the mists of such false illusions

Socialist industrial workers divided into three parties violently fighting one another, are persuaded by their leaders that questions of the state are meaningless to the proletariat and that the only important thing for them to do is to capture and demolish the capitalist fortress

All citizen parties, however, divided on domestic policy by shades of economic theory, are united on nationalism all making the same mistake of denying the charge that the imperial government was responsible for the war pretending such admission would be a confession of the guilt of the German people They forget that the denial of the world's verdict must arouse false suspicion that the German people in 1914 were not deceived by a lying party but were party to a plot and that they are not, wittingly or unwittingly, fostering a spirit of revenge especially among those who have lost military or civil positions.

STUDENTS RAGE AT FRENCH

The old imperial flag abolished under the republic is enthusiastically cheered even by small group capitalists, who at the first shock of the kaiser's fall called themselves the democratic party

Students rage when a professor praises a celebrated French mathematician When the professor who at a big university lectures on chemistry uses the word "reaction" he is applauded wildly, indicating that whatever is reactionary is today welcome

A Prussian league demands speedy return of the Hohenzollern rule The fiftieth anniversary of the Versailles proclamation was celebrated officially just as if the German empire then founded still existed The kaiserin's health is prayed for in churches The government says no warning word

The Prussian parliament elections which will be held in February will show a swelling of the flood of nationalist sentiment

Lying is not only disgraceful but also, thank God is stupid silence is complicity Blind gamblers are dragging a people who are necessary to the world as the world is to them along a path which must end in a precipice and will drag all humanity into new and unbearable confusion

HOUR OF VAST IMPORTANCE

The Briand ministry in France is probably the last attempt at a friendly and dignified understanding on our continent This is an hour [illegible] return Any discussion of various questions even the most important, namely, reparations is idle without a clearing of the atmosphere and this both sides have thus far avoided

Germany and especially a unified entente—if the latter were strengthened by the participation of America—could, with the clarified atmosphere, lay the foundation for a new international morality and world order German disarmament must not be the beginning of her destruction but of the disarmament of all Europe which is unable to breathe without first removing her armor

Whoever brings this enlightening idea into the minds of the German people must take advantage of this last hour of grace The clock has begun striking.

British Minister Suggests Cancellation of War Debts; Situation Dark, Says Barnes

By GEORGE N. BARNES,
Former Member of the British War Cabinet.

BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright 1921 by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

LONDON, Jan 22—The political barometer of Great Britain points to unsettled conditions The many dis*turbing elements in the Irish situa*tion constitute one storm, the Far Eastern troubles are another Then too, there are the barnacles in the government service, bequeathed by the war, each sticking to his job like a limpet to its rack Moreover, unemployment has grown, during the past week or two to alarming proportions and are now naturally being exploited by the revolutionaries among us And last but not least the public mind has been startled this week by two events of magnitude.

The first was the publication of documents connecting the Germans with the Irish insurgency during the war The second was the Sinn Fein outbreak in London when an attempt was made to set fire to an oil warehouse

ELECTION BLOW TO GOVERNMENT

Many blame the government for all these troubles Indeed this fact has only lately been reflected in two elections In one of these this week the government candidate retained his seat only by the skin of his teeth In the other the government candidate Major Astor was defeated Normally such events would portend an early general election Lloyd George may intend to bring on hoping to liquidate the war settlements before quitting but this will tax to the utmost his genius for political strategy According to present indications he is losing his stride

A startling suggestion was made the other day by a British Cabinet minister that the British debts to America be cancelled and also that debts of other European countries to Great Britain be cancelled The suggestion, originating in such a quarter, is proof of the parlous state to which the war has brought us

Indeed it is more It is the finger of Nemesis warning us that peace time finance is not applicable to the debacle of war

WOULD CANCEL DEBT TO U S

There is much to be said for reciprocal cancellation Our debt was incurred largely on behalf of our poorer allies early in the war We never will be repaid simply because those nations, now and forever, will be unable to pay us And if they did it would glut our markets and further paralyze our trade

The moral argument for cancellation is that all the civilized countries of the world were concerned in the war therefore none should benefit by belated participation in it If America insists on payment Great Britain will naturally pay, but the above points are surely worthy of consideration in the United States.

Career, Not Love, Chief Hope of Co-eds, Says Dean

BERKELEY, Jan 22—It's vocations, not husbands that are the chief concern of the present day college girl, says Miss Lucy Stebbins, dean of women [illegible] Not that college women eschew matrimony entirely explains Miss Stebbins but they are taking their time about choosing their mates

"Don't for a minute think that all college girls are old maids for they're not" hastens to explain Miss Stebbins "But it seems that many of them are not satisfied any longer to step directly from the college classroom into a home of their own The college girl today wants to feel her own independence and wants to test her ability to take her place as a self-supporting member of society.

"This new college girl who takes her place side by side with the men of the business and professional world is merely the product of the times that's all Certain economic conditions have made her, and when the test has come she has not been found wanting How does the [illegible] feel the success of matrimony when she does not enter it? The university hasn't delved deeply into that question We are merely concerned in seeing that the girls who want to make their own way in life are given every opportunity for success

Miss Stebbins says the aim of the college girl at present is more serious than formerly No longer she admits does the girl assume the role of a modest violet bedeck herself in her fineries and wait by the roadside for her "prince" to come riding by In her place, she declares has come the independent young woman who is ready to work and win her own way in life and then to accept love if it comes

French People Restless Over Failure to Force Germany to aCrry Out Reparations Part of Versailles Treaty

Bankruptcy May Face Victors Before Eyes of Money-Mad Conquered, Says Viviani Unless Indemnity Is Paid

By RENE VIVIANI,
Former French Premier.

BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

PARIS, Jan 22—Events have happened rapidly since my last article. The Leygues cabinet has fallen. After many difficulties, inherent in the present troubled situation and after certain political personages, for various reasons, declined power, the perilous honor has fallen to Briand The labor of bringing the cabinet to birth was severe, besides complex domestic problems, external politics are complicating the internal policy

Briand had to satisfy certain groups and form a ministry resting on a thinly outspread majority which obviously will not agree on all subjects day after day

The cabinet situation, however, is not exactly precarious since accounts must be taken of two facts and these facts are apparently contradictory

Parliament is becoming increasingly impatient to obtain satisfaction in foreign questions When it seems the disarmament question is getting farther and farther from settlement and the same true so far as reparations are concerned it insists strongly upon a solution.

PROBLEMS UP TO MINISTRY

If these questions are not solved by the present cabinet the parliament will be more impatient with the next This impatience, facing the practically negative results obtained by Leygues, caused his overwhelming repudiation. But on the other hand, parliament realizes that not alone is ministerial responsibility at stake, but likewise a collective responsibility weighing on it too, in the eyes of the country

Therefore, the present cabinet will be allowed to go ahead, but results of its policy will be anxiously watched

Meanwhile the council of the prime ministers of allied nations meets in Paris on Monday For our part, we have small taste for these meetings It seems to us that ambassadors of all allied countries are appointed to receive instructions from their respective governments and try to carry them out at the foreign offices to which they are accredited and that therefore the best plan would be to convoke a meeting of governments only to draw conclusions after the ambassadors had prepared the way

NO BENEFIT FROM MEETINGS

The only advantage of Monday's meeting is to hasten business and reach solutions more promptly Unfortunately it cannot be claimed that sensational meetings thus far have yielded great results Since ratification of the treaty numerous meetings have been held yet we perceive no practical application of the treaty

What will the next supreme council produce? We already have a taste of what it will be We are told from London that the Near Eastern question, as contained in the Sevres treaty, which has been further obscured by the overthrow of Venizelos, will be passed over, since opportunity for study since last November has been insufficient

We are told also that the reparations question is yet unripe and that means of knowing Germany's paying capacity are still not possessed by allied governments The question of Germany's disarmament remains concerning this there will be much talk, including the problem of effectives massed in Bavaria under various names.

PROBLEMS MAY BE SIDETRACKED

Shall they be reduced at one stroke or tolerated awhile in exchange for the destruction of heavy armament material? We shall know in a few days The certainty is that the grave reparations and the Near Eastern problems will be sidetracked to official deliberations, though they cannot be sidetracked in the public mind

However, the reparations problem is the most disquieting factor in public opinion as since the armistice France has imposed extremely heavy taxes and has had recourse to various expedients in order to live, to pay debts and to make loans for the restoration of her devastated departments Meanwhile Germany, without increasing taxes with identical railroad and postal rates, her laboring and business population except the middle class, enriched offers a spectacle of public distress along with her private riches

VICTORS THREATENED WITH BANKRUPTCY

This raises the formidable question of whether it be tolerable that the state shall plead ruin while a majority of its citizens are rich and whether in the name of morality and justice, this apparent discord between state distress and private fortune prove acceptable

It certainly seems that the Germans, being historically and politically responsible for war and its consequences ought to make financial and budgetary efforts to provide the German state with resources needed to pay its debts The German state did not sign the peace treaty, but Germany in its entirety and hers is the responsibility before history

It is certainly proper that victors championing justice, should not make exaggerated demands and not render German economic life impossible

Political Enmities Pile Up on Corporation Bill Under Unjust Suspicion

By AD B. SCHUSTER

TRIBUNE BUREAU, SACRAMENTO, Jan. 22.—The tax fight of 1921 has caused political enmities that will not be forgotten in years. A piling up of grievances, real and fancied, accusations based on fact and rumor, threats of physical violence and verbal clashes on the floor and in the ante-rooms have caused a situation in the California legislature seldom equalled in poltics. As a result those tightly-drawn lines that were to apply in matters of reapportionment and reorganization, have snapped and unless the feeling is softened in the constitutional recess, the legislators will come back here prepared to fight all the way on every issue on an administration and anti-administration line.

AUGMENT ANTI FORCES.

Out of the whole situation has come this fact: The tax enmities have lined up against the administration some men counted on at first to support the Stephens economy and efficiency bill and who are now declared proponents of the tax payers' measure. An early result was the resolution directing the board of control to ascertain how much the governor's plan might save. There has been a feeling that with the shifting of offices under the proposal a very small amount would be saved and, in fact, $300,000 is the largest amount yet claimed by anyone. In comparison the other proposal would save four or five times as much.

The regrettable thing about the whole row is that so much of it is occasioned by buncombe and bunk. It is most absurd for one side to assert that everyone who is voting against the tax measure is a tool of the corporations and has been influenced by the "massed attack" of the corporation lobby, just as it is ridiculous to say that all who support the bill are doing so because they are under the thumb of Governor Stephens or Martin Madsen. To line up the vote on a "For the People" and "For the Corporations" basis is not fair to anyone when the leaders of those who support the bill say openly that they only vote for it as the best of two evils.

DOESN'T SATISFY SUPPORTERS.

There is no doubt of it: The King tax bill does not satisfy its own supporters. Because they hold that it is the best that could be framed with the information on hand, and that it makes the rates of utility companies and general property nearer equal, there are those who favor it. The argument against the measure is that there was no fair and complete hearing, that there are many injustices and that other means of raising the revenue and of cutting expenses will make such a bill unnecessary. They also hold, and quote a railroad commission letter, that the utility rates of taxation ultimately will be borne by the public.

When the leading labor men are voting against the tax bill it is hard to reconcile the "corporation" charges that have been bandied. In all of the talk of lobby pressure there is also much that is spread for effect. Taking the lobby as a whole it is composed of representative men who were invited to be present in the very bill under consideration. It is true that on the night that the senate stayed up until dawn one man in the employ of a railroad circulated a bottle among thirsty ones and became so obnoxious that he was put out, and it is true that the lobbyists have pressed so close in to the assembly rooms that they had to be excluded.

On the other hand, there are stories of assemblymen who say they have been told that, unless they support the bill, all of their own measures will remain unsigned, and of other administration methods used to apply the screws on doubtful members.

EACH SIDE ACCUSES.

It is probable that a part of this is groundless talk. Certain it is that in the same hotel lobby where the corporation men circulate, the whole administration force of "big men" are also circulating. The result has been that each side is accusing the other of improper methods, and each is seeking to rally support on the strength of the alleged iniquities of the other. There were two close approaches to fisticuffs in the assembly hallway yesterday, there are old friends in the southern delegation who will not speak to each other and there are more predictions as to results and "conversions" than there are bills introduced.

Without attempting to express any opinion on the merits or demerits of the bill, it is a matter of plain truth to say that there are legitimate grounds for opposing it and that the blare of condemnation which would make every opponent a corporation friend or tool is unfair. There may be some such "tools" in the opposition, but to brand the entire number is to resort to a political trick to force by popular pressure a change in vote.

When the fight has had time to cool off it will be found that there have been many expedients resorted to of which neither side will be proud, and it will also be found that the main grounds for division have been contained in the bill and not in the lobbies. There is almost no one who is not agreed that before any such sweeping tax changes shall be proposed again there should be the money and time provided for a long and careful investigation as to the underlying facts which should determine the ratio of increase.

SINN FEIN GIVES ORDER TO ATTACK BRITISH BARRACK

Desperate Fighting Follows Offensive; England Prepares for Campaign.

By CHARLES M. McCANN,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

DUBLIN, Jan. 22.—A "major offensive" has been ordered by Sinn Fein leaders against British military centers throughout southwestern Ireland, it was learned here today.

The first results of the order were shown when nine police barracks were attacked in County Tipperary within 24 hours.

The attacks occurred at Holy Cross, Chevry, Devea, Golden, Ballinure, Golding's Cross, Glenbower, Boskeon and Lisonragh. It is estimated 500 Sinn Feiners participated.

Desparate fighting took place at several points. In the night attacks the British troops summoned reinforcements by sending up Very lights, employing the same signals in vogue in the world war.

The number of casualties was not divulged, but the announcement was made that the military took great numbers of prisoners.

BRITAIN DETERMINED TO CRUSH "REBELLION"

Great Britain's determination to "crush the Irish rebellion" was reiterated here today by Chief Secretary for Ireland, Sir Hamar Greenwood, in an address to government forces.

Greenwood's speech was a fighting answer to "President" de Valera's fighting proclamation, issued earlier in the day.

The secretary appealed to crown forces to show by their discipline that they are not enemies of Ireland, but friends, "trying to rescue Ireland."

Standing before a group of high military officers, Greenwood addressed massed regiments of "black and tan" police and Royal Irish Constabulary. The men previously had marched in review past the secretary's stand, erected outside the government barracks here.

"The rebellion must be crushed," he declared. "We must break up the forces which are attempting to smash the British Empire."

Turning directly to the black and tans, the secretary appealed to them to "show by your discipline that you are not here as enemies of the Irish people. Convince them thus that you are here to rescue Ireland from terrorists who have constituted no government, but have instituted the reign of bomb and rifle."

ENGLISH ARE WARNED OF "DIRTY FIGHTING"

"You will be up against dirty fighting," he warned.

The secretary later supplemented his speech in an interview with the United Press.

"The present rebellion," he said, "is the result of decentralization and the desperation of rebel leaders over the strict enforcement of martial law.

"It would be erroneous to accept the recent increase in Sinn Fein outbreaks as evidence of increasing strength. It is the result of a tightening of military rule, which, though operating slowly, certainly will defeat terrorism.

"My principal appeal is to the auxiliary police to convince Ireland by their actions that they are here for the good of Ireland, not as enemies of the people."

Hostess Club of Y. W. C. A. Will Give Theater Party February 3 at Fulton

Affair Will Serve as Benefit to Carry on Weekly Friday Night Festivities

The Hostess Club of the Y. W. C. A. issued invitations for a theater party Thursday night, February 3, at the Fulton.

Once a week the girls of the Hostess Club take over the Webster street building, to which they invite the young men and women. Sometimes it is a dance, sometimes a feature evening, sometimes just games and fun. Again the girls have some social service work—the support of a family at present—which drains their treasury. The benefit theater party is announced to provide funds for the financing of the Friday night festivities. Tickets may be secured from members of the committee or at the "Y," to be exchanged at the box office of the theater.

Among the patronesses for the evening are: Mrs. John J. Valentine, Mrs. E. B. de Bolla, Mrs. Russell Lowry, Miss Alice Brookman and many others.

The theater party committee numbers Verne Douglas, Lorelda Medau, Eleanor Bell, Gladys Thomas and Cleo Ashford.

U. C. TRIUMPHS IN BASKETBALL TILT

The Olympic club team of San Francisco went down to defeat before the University of California basketball team at the Harmon gymnasium here last night to a score of 30 to 29. Symes, captain of the California team, starred during the contest, scoring 16 of the 30 points. The playing of Barnes and Berndt for the Olympics was another feature of the game. A spectacular rally was staged by the Olympics during the last few minutes of play and threatened to annex the decision.

During 1919 3808 persons in the United States were killed by autos.

Special to THE TRIBUNE

"Any other reason?"

"Don't know."

"I was born."

The examination ended and Peteri had failed in his examination for citizen papers.

Cudahy's Son-in-Law Sued for Heart Balm

Special to THE TRIBUNE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Because Elizabeth V. Henely "by her association and conduct with other men" gave Percival Fisher Browne, now the son-in-law of Jack Cudahy, the right to believe she did not care for him, was the reason given by Browne for not marrying her. The allegations of Browne were contained in answer to Miss Henely's $50,000 suit for alleged breach of promise, which was on file today in the Superior Court.

Miss Henely, who formerly conducted a hair-dressing establishment at a fashionable Pasadena hotel, alleged Browne promised to marry her March 2, 1920. He was a bank teller and told her he could marry her as soon as his salary was sufficient to support a wife. Miss Henely alleged, on July 12, he married Edna Cudahy.

PRISON INMATES IN N. Y. FEWER SINCE DRY LAW

Special to THE TRIBUNE

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 22.—The end of the first year of prohibition on June 30 last found a decrease of 1817 in the population of New York state prisons and other correctional institutions, according to statistics of the State Commission of Prisons announced today. One year after John Barleycorn had been officially buried the inhabitants of prisons, reformatories and similar institutions numbered 9145, as against 11,016 for the year preceding.

Of this number 2868 were in New York City alone.

However, reports received since June 30, according to the commission, show the population of the institutions increasing, as is common in times of industrial depression.

Wolves Escape, But Rabbits Captured

Special to THE TRIBUNE

SHOALS, Ind., Jan. 22.—Wolves which have wrought havoc among live stock of Martin county, escaped 1500 armed citizens who scoured thirty-five miles for the pack, but hundreds of rabbits and a dozen foxes were killed in the round-up. The wolves are supposed to have sprung from some which escaped several years ago from one of the four circuses which winter at West Baden.

Haunts of the wolves, deep ravines and caves, were explored and late in the hunt their cries were heard. When a second drive is made the eastern line will be strengthened.

Wells Drury, secretary and managing director of the chamber, has accepted the presidency of the Drury Advertising Service with offices in Berkeley and San Francisco and will resign from the chamber March 1.

President Frank M. Thatcher said that he greatly regretted the prospect of losing the services of Secretary Drury, that he had given years of service to the organization and the community and he felt that in this that he expressed the true sentiments of all members of the board and of the membership of the Chamber of Commerce.

A communication was received from the Osborn Engineering Company of Cleveland, O., asking permission to submit plans and specifications for the construction of the million-dollar stadium that is projected for the University of California campus.

Boy, 13, Rouses Sleepers, Then Battles Fire

Special Dispatch to The TRIBUNE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Emmanuel W. Browne, aged 13, after arousing his parents and other roomers in an apartment house in which they reside, fought a fire that was sweeping the interior of a nearby garage single handed until firemen arrived.

The lad is the son of Frank J. Browne, manager of a local theatre. He was aroused by the odor from burning rubber. He first awakened his parents, and then running through the apartment house which adjoined the garage, he roused others.

This much accomplished the boy unreeled a fire hose in the building and in a few minutes had a stream of water playing on the flames.

GARAGE WILL GO UP IN SPITE OF DISTRICT PROTEST

Efforts of the Thousand Oaks Region to Change Woman's Mind Is Futile.

BERKELEY, Jan. 22.—The protest of residents of Thousand Oaks region to the City Council against the erection of a garage by Miss Elmyra Gaylord at Fresno and Solano avenues has been without result.

The lot on which she plans the structure Miss Gaylord purchased from the city for the sum of $2750. The deed still reposes in the mayor's desk.

Miss Gaylord appeared at the city hall to discuss the matter with the mayor.

"Change my mind? Never!" declared Miss Gaylord. "I intend to use the property for the purpose for which it was bought." The only consolation she would afford was that her proposed structure would be an "attractive" one.

HUGHES STILL LIKELY TO HEAD CABINET

President-elect Harding's announcement prior to starting upon his final outing in advance of assuming the presidency that he would defer announcement of his cabinet selections until a day or so before his inauguration pleased some Republicans and disgruntled others.

Those who are not satisfied with the men tacitly recognized as "leading possibilities" were gratified, seeing in the delayed selection further opportunity to urge their objections and to advance the interests of their own favorites. Other Republicans apprehended in the postponement danger of increased friction over the cabinet and wider room for factional and personal differences.

Harding himself acknowledged existence of these cross-currents and clashing of personal interests, but disclaimed being concerned about them, accepting them as normal manifestations. He could not fail to develop conflicting opinions as to the availability of men and the desirability of their appointment, according to the personal predictions of the men consulted.

The first reaction following his announcement was renewal of speculation in senatorial circles as to whether Charles E. Hughes will be found heading the cabinet list upon its publication. All the gossip from Marion and among the statesmen and politicians at the capitol has agreed in the past ten days that Mr. Hughes at present tops all the names as the likely Secretary of State.

CHANCE FOR ONE TO CHANGE HIS MIND

The query going the rounds is whether Hughes or Harding may not change his mind between now and March 3 and some other name finally head the list. It is reported that Hughes' personal preference is for the United States Supreme Court Justice, when there shall be a vacancy, and that it is shared by his family. His eminent fitness for that place is recognized and some of his well wishers in the Senate would rather see him in it than in the office of Secretary of State.

Senator Penrose, in a public statement, rather bluntly stated the feeling entertained by some of his colleagues as to the unconcern of the Senate over the personality of the Secretary of State, insofar, as he points out, the Senate of the United States will determine its questions uninfluenced by the views of the head of the Department of State whoever he may be.

Senators feel assured that President Harding will not propose a vital international policy until he is convinced that it will have the support to a compelling degree of Republicans in the Senate. Unanimous concurrence in any foreign policy is hardly expected, but he will certainly, Senators believe, not move until he finds himself backed by the weight of party opinion in the Senate.

Nation's Praises Ring in Harding's Ears; Lauded by Leading Men of America

By ROBERT T. SMALL
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright, 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 22—President-elect Warren G. Harding starts his pre-inaugural vacation on the picturesque rivers and the inviting golf courses of Florida with the praises of the nation's "best minds." Senator Harding feels that the country has been adrift, or at least the government has. He knows that the task ahead of him is a tremendous one, but he has stated he is unafraid.

"Because I know," he said, "that through courtesy, confidence and close adherence to justice, one will have at his call the best minds and intellects in this great country, and with their truth, advice and direction, we can not go wrong."

It is possible for the writer to set down here the impressions Senator Harding made upon most of the distinguished persons who were summoned to Marion. The language in each case is that of the visitor himself, soon after he emerged from the council chamber.

LAUDED BY BRYAN

William Jennings Bryan: Harding is actuated by the highest motives in striving to find what he feels is best for the country and the people. I never knew a man more desirous of doing the right thing. I find that he and I are not so far apart either in matters of religion or politics.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of New York: Senator Harding is taking up the grave problems which confront him, both domestic and international, with open-mindedness, sagacity and fine patience.

Henry C. Wallace of Iowa, slated for Secretary of Agriculture: Senator Harding wants a permanent, reassuring agricultural policy for this country, and I am confident that his administration is going to accomplish much good along this line.

Andrew W. Mellon of Pittsburgh, banker: I have entire confidence in the Senator's wisdom and in the course he is following.

HAS NATION'S BACKING

Former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana: Seldom, if ever, in our history has a President entered upon such complex and difficult duties as will come to Senator Harding, but it is equally true that in few cases, if ever, has a President undertaken such a task with the backing, with so great a fund of good will and popular confidence as he possesses.

S. J. Lowell, master of the National Grange: We were greatly pleased at noting the broad comprehension of agricultural problems which Senator Harding entertains.

Senator McCumber of North Dakota: I think Senator Harding is on the way to producing a basis of international agreement that will prove feasible, that will be entirely satisfactory to this country, acceptable to the other powers and that will greatly diminish the danger of armed conflict.

Marshall Field III of Chicago: I was an enthusiastic supporter of General Wood, but after talking with Senator Harding am satisfied that the country has been fortunate in its choice.

Gifford Pinchot: I feel Senator Harding is thoroughly sympathetic with forest preservation plans.

Senator Shields, Democrat, Tennessee: As Senator Harding is working, I feel there is a good chance of producing something satisfactory in the way of foreign relations.

DOING NORMAL THINGS

Will H. Hays: This normal man is doing the normal thing.

Senator Reed of Missouri: Senator Harding is a fine man, but all talk of an association or a league of nations is silly.

Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson, Chicago: Senator Harding faces the biggest task of any President since Lincoln, and I want to help him.

Senator Fall, irreconcilable, of New Mexico: Senator Harding is on the right track.

William G. Sharpe, Democrat, former ambassador to France: I am most gratified to learn from my conversation with the President-elect that so far as he is concerned there is no danger of this country leaping into a state of splendid isolation. He is keenly alive to the fact that America cannot be aloof; that it must carry its share of the world's burdens.

Senator Smoot of Utah: I was pleased to find how deeply Senator Harding is interested in the subject of adopting proper business methods in the government departments and how thoroughly he has been able to inform himself about it.

IMPRESSED WITH HARDING

Dr. Jacob Gould Schuerman, president of Cornell University: I was deeply impressed with Senator Harding's desire and determination to give the best possible service to his country. Senator Harding has a genius for conciliation and confidence. I suppose no man now living has such a correct sense of the aspirations and ambitions of our people as he possesses.

Victor F. Lawson of Chicago: There is much satisfaction in the manner in which the President-elect is going about the business of bringing together the various elements of national opinion in an effort to insure harmonious national support for the incoming administration.

Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago: Since Senator Harding was nominated he has grown more in that confidence which the public gives to a man it desires to represent it than any man I know.

Colonel J. S. Galbraith, commander of the American Legion: It has been a pleasure to learn how profoundly concerned Senator Harding is seeing that disabled soldiers have something done for them.

The foregoing expressions of opinion from leading Democrats, as well as Republicans, tell a story of pleasant, affable conferences. But they also tell a story of unbounded respect. No wonder Warren Harding starts happily on the houseboat trip in Florida waters.

DIVORCED, THEY WILL LIE IN TWIN GRAVES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 22.—Although separated for the rest of their lives by a divorce, Louise and Carl Schultz will lie side by side in the family plot in Wanderers' Rest cemetery when they pass on.

This was the decision of Judge Fairchild today when a division of the estate came up for settlement after a final decree of separation had been granted. The court ruled that should either remarry, the plot would still be restricted to the principals and could not be made the place of burial for a new wife or husband.

Girl Pretends Love to Get Suitor's Auto

Special to THE TRIBUNE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Expressions of love and promises to marry were the means employed by a girl to gain possession of a suitor's automobile, according to the confession made in United States Commissioner Long's court today by Lucile Bandy of Phoenix, charged with stealing the machine of Chris Pallus, also of Phoenix, and driving it to Los Angeles.

The girl, who already has a husband, related that she had arranged with Pallus that she was to drive his car to this city and that Pallus was to follow later, when they would be married.

After she arrived here the girl wrote to Pallus that she had deceived him and told him that she was married and had a husband living. Her story was corroborated by a girl friend.

One Killed, Two Hurt in New York Holdup

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—One man was killed instantly, another so badly wounded he will die and a third severely beaten in an attempted holdup in the heart of New York's hotel and business district.

A group of men were playing cards in the back room of an auction establishment, when four bandits entered. A fight ensued. The men in the room hurled chairs at the invaders who immediately opened fire. Manuel Schields fell dead and Henry Young, another of the card players, was shot four times. He was removed to a hospital where it was said he was in a dying condition. The bandits escaped.

S. F. Policeman Wins Award for Bravery

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Award of prizes for conspicuous rescues and first aid work in 1920 was announced by the Red Cross tonight. Included in the list were:

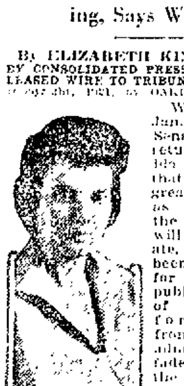
For life saving: Patrolman Charles L. Manuels, San Francisco, first prize for diving overboard and saving a waif from the "Red Cross Petrograd children's ship"; third prize, Buell Spriesterbach, 16, Everett, Wash., who, after sinking several times himself, rescued another boy from drowning.

Walter James Hillsdale, Ore., third prize for aid to railway wreck victims at Hillsdale (general first aid prizes).

SENATE FACTION PROBLEM FACES NEXT PRESIDENT

Task of Calming Turmoil Will Be Difficult One for Harding, Says Writer.

By ELIZABETH KING STOKES
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright, 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)



WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—When Senator Harding returns from Florida he will find that one of his greatest problems as President of the United States will be the Senate. There has just been time enough for the first Republican reaction of thankfulness for deliverance from the Wilson administration to fade a little, and the original Senate factions to emerge again.

The political situation at this writing converges in the Senate. The trough of national politics today merely is the sluicing back and forth of what is in the Harding mind and the response the Senate factions make to it. The temper of the Senate, day by day, is that of a body that has tasted power and momentarily is ready for a test of strength. During the Wilson administration there has been a desperate opposition, namely, criticism of the domination by the chief executive.

With Senator Borah having accomplished a favorable committee report on disarmament and simplification of the inauguration; with Senator Penrose leading the protest against Charles Evans Hughes as Secretary of State, and all the lesser grumbling that has been going on in the Senate every day, there is reason to recall the assertion of a politician at the convention—that the Senate would not be wholly appeased by the election. Republican factions were not comforted into stillness at Chicago.

TURBULENCE EXISTS

"No man in politics," said a veteran Republican at the capitol this week, "on short notice could calm the natural turbulence that exists in both parties. We must expect some extremes in personal temper until the country has thoroughly recovered its balance and that will not be until we have slowly settled down to common sense and hard work."

The Senate never was in such a role of prominence and self-satisfaction. Senator Harding said here that he wanted the co-operation of "both ends of the avenue." They are farther apart than ever. Even Vice-President Marshall, a man with a quiet mind, not long ago protested against recommendations for legislation coming directly from departments and bureaus. Senator Lodge concurred.

The tenor of the discussion was that legislation originated in the House or in the Senate, and that opportunities from the other end of the avenue had exceeded their welcome. On the other hand, there is a "club feeling" in both houses of Congress which puts through what amounts to instructions to the executive, such as the passage of the war finance corporation measure over the President's veto.

UNDERSTANDING NECESSARY

There was considerable informal talk at the last session of Congress about the necessity of some definite relations between the executive and legislative branches of the government, this emanating from the treaty making difficulties.

The trend of the Senate lately has shown that the matter gradually is coming to a head, but upon a larger scale than treaty relations. Some think that during Senator Harding's term the division of authority and the measure of co-operation will have to be more precisely determined.

All this makes it doubly hard for the incoming President. The Senate is not in the frame of mind to follow him in his assertion that he wants to make "everything sweet for everybody."

The Democratic side apparently is fairly silent today, but partly due to the fact that the other party has had so much prominence as to crowd out Senator Underwood, the minority leader, and Senator Hitchcock from the news. The Democratic temper reflects the incompleteness of the peace situation. No matter how deeply the President may pigeonhole the treaty, all Senators know that the subject was left unfinished and will crop out.

OBJECTIONS FADE

Time has worn away some of the fine shading of objections to this and that reservation by Democrats and the interim has afforded an opportunity to create sentiment that would strengthen Republican factions reviving peace resolutions.

Some Democrats now would be more likely to work for a quick peace than for the initiation of a complicated new scheme for world security worked out by President-elect Harding after his consultations at Marion.

As for the factions on the Republican side: Senator Borah is a power, somewhat because of the great force of his personality, considerable on account of the gathering of the clans of numerous progressive and racial movements under his wing. All his confreres on the floor are important and powerful.

Senator Johnson still believes he hears the people calling and will cause Senator Harding's conservatism some qualm with his designation in the new Congressional Record as "Republican and Progressive." Senator Penrose is a faction in himself.

"GOLF CABINET"

Then there is the "makings" of a "golf cabinet" faction that looks as if it would have Senators Hale, Frelinghuysen, McCormick and Sutherland for its cronies, men with whom Senator Harding at present is on the personal terms of guest and host, so much so as to put them in the position of having been advisors from the start.

In the middle ground is a faction in which Senator Colt, the able Rhode Island judge, figures prominently with Senator Kenyon of Iowa, whose opinions are more and more respected, Senator Capper, the farmers' champion, and others.

Only for the moment has the light of Senator Lodge been eclipsed by Penrose. Senator Lodge has tasted power himself and is the majority leader. President-elect Harding will have Senator Lodge to reckon with. In the last Republican regime Roosevelt and Lodge were close, riding off together through the parks and ending with many a Lodge-Roosevelt family party at the White House. Senator Lodge does not play golf. A statesman with a trenchant wit said the other day that a "golf cabinet" ought to be selected with the care given to Senate committees, for instance, a lineup like this: Senators Penrose, Lodge, Borah, Colt, Underwood and Hitchcock.

NEW YORK TORN OVER FIVE-CENT LOAF OF BREAD

Can It Be Sold at Price, Is the Question; Little Bread Baked at Home.

By CLARA SAVAGE
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright, 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The question that is agitating this metropolis, shaking it to its depths and stirring up hot controversy from one end to the other, this week, is whether or not you can get a good loaf of bread for 5 cents. Many housewives have suggested that this is possible if the loaf is baked at home, but a department of the city government went on record today, through the deputy commissioner of markets, as against the practice of baking bread at home. The deputy commissioner is a woman—Mrs. Louis Reed Welzmiller.

Strangely enough, it was not a woman who started the controversy over the 5-cent loaf in New York. It was a man baker. He said a 12-ounce loaf of bread could be put on the market for 5 cents with a profit of from 1½ to 2 cents a loaf to the baker. He produced the loaf. Brother bakers threw up their hands in horror and said "Impossible!" The woman deputy commissioner of markets sided with them. When I called on her in her office today the 12-ounce loaf that started all the trouble was sitting on her desk. But even with this tangible proof of bread at 5 cents on hand, Mrs. Welzmiller supported those who believe it an impossibility.

CALLED IMPOSSIBLE.

"I have been to see the baker and his bakery," said Mrs. Welzmiller. "In the first place, he bought at low price the plant of a baker who failed, and a good supply of flour. He does all his baking and thus reduces his overhead costs. Since he does not have a big bakery, he has fewer workers—fewer oven men to pay $72 a week, for instance, fewer unskilled workers at from $38 to $42 a week. I also find that he makes up for his low price on bread by charging high prices for his cake and pies. These are abnormal conditions. It is hardly fair to state, on this basis, that the 5-cent loaf is possible.

"I do not advise any woman to bake bread at home. That was all very well when every home had its great old-fashioned coal range in which baking could be done with no added expense, but nowadays it does not pay the woman who cooks by gas to do slow baking. The cost of gas has risen. A woman may make a loaf of bread for which the ingredients cost not more than 5 cents, but she uses up enough gas to raise the price considerably."

10 PER CENT AT HOME.

When this statement by the woman deputy commissioner of markets was repeated to New York women who bake bread, they rose to the defense of their art. The latest figures on the subject state that of the total amount of bread made in New York City 10 per cent is baked by women at home, while 50 per cent is baked by the four large baking companies and 40 per cent by the smaller bakeries. Judging by the storm that the anti-bread baking remarks by Mrs. Welzmiller arouses among women, the first percentage has been set rather too low.

"Mrs. Welzmiller is making a mistake. Women should be encouraged to bake—even though they use gas stoves," said a woman who is at the head of a domestic science laboratory. "It takes forty-five minutes to bake a small loaf of bread in a gas oven. A woman can bake two loaves of bread and at the same time bake a casserole dish, a cake or a pudding, or perhaps a souffle for luncheon, or any of a number of dishes that need slow cooking. When you divide the cost of the gas among several dishes it is negligible. It is perfectly possible and practical to bake a loaf of bread at home for 5 cents."

Theater Party Will Aid Two Campaigns

The Ethel Moore Memorial Children's building and the dental clinic in Fruitvale school will receive the benefit from the joint theater party which the Manzanita and McChesney Parent-Teacher Associations will give Tuesday in the McChesney school auditorium. "The Hills of Happiness," showing the tuberculosis work in Southern California; "Equal Chance," showing the work of the public nurse," and "Come Clean," a soldier film, will be shown at two matinee performances, beginning at 2:45 o'clock. Miss Florence LaGanke, director of household arts in the public schools, will be the afternoon speaker. She will review the work of the public health center during the past year.

The evening performance will begin at 7:45. In addition to the afternoon program a comic feature film will be offered.

Mate's Love Stolen, Woman Asks $50,000

Special to THE TRIBUNE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Charging another woman with stealing the love of her husband, owner of a concession on the Ocean Park pier, known as the "Frolic," Mrs. Mary E. Simpson filed suit in the superior court today against the other woman, Mrs. Beatrice Lau, for $50,000 [illegible]

Charles F. Simpson was the husband and according to the complaint Mrs. Lau maliciously gained his affections and persuaded him to desert his wife and go with her to Fresno and other cities and leave Mrs. Simpson without support.

Threatened Collapse of Austria Causes Panic Among Europe's Officials

By WILLIAM BIRD
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright, 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The war, which started in Vienna, has gone to roost. The foreign offices of Europe are in a panic as a result of the threatened collapse of Austria, which menaces and might easily destroy the whole fabric of the European political system.

Democracy itself is in the balance and the absence from the European counsels of the only nation that entered the war for the preservation of democracy leaves a welter of conflicting political interests, whence it is difficult for a solution to come.

Both Germany and Hungary would gladly annex Austria, which cannot subsist surrounded by hostile states, but France, while doubtlessly welcoming a rewelding of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, will not countenance a union with Germany unless Bavaria separates from Prussia. On the other hand, neither Italy nor Czecho-Slovakia could tolerate a reunited Austria-Hungary, whose first aim would be to reconquer her lost provinces.

Thus we have the fate of Austria's starving millions made subject to ancient European rivalries and the supreme interest of mankind's peace and liberty is accordingly overlooked.

DEMOCRACY SAFE IN PROSPERITY.

What the architects of peace forgot or ignored is that only one thing can make democracy safe, namely, economic prosperity. Democracy is a luxury for well-to-do nations; the ruined cannot afford it. So the poorer nations of Europe are wavering between reaction and a proletarian dictatorship—they are between a white or a red terror.

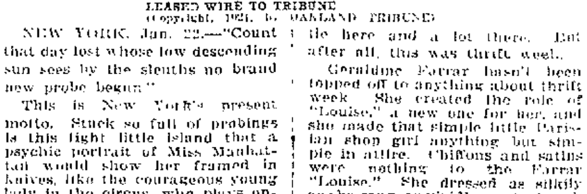
France, with Premier Briand, is making a last try for a moderate republic, but if Briand fails the deal will pass to Poincare and the frank reactionaries. This will mean armed peace both at home and abroad. Italy, with Giolotti, is making the same experiment, with all chances favoring a movement to the left if he fails. Only in England is there democratic stability on account of greater prosperity—and now this is menaced by the unemployment crisis.

Unquestionably, America's task at the present time, as looked at by Europe, is to fortify the elements working toward democratic moderation and opposing the extremists who, on one hand, desire a militaristic reaction and on the other a proletarian dictatorship. America holds the key to this riddle primarily because of her economic supremacy, but also because of her still powerful moral ascendancy over European peoples. Now that it appears there will be a policy forcing European labor to remain at home, instead of going to America, as a refuge from tyranny and economic slavery, it devolves upon the United States to use economic power and moral leadership to make Europe a place where labor can produce in peace and tranquility and participate in forming its political destiny.

In other words, if America, by force of circumstances, is compelled to abandon her historic "melting pot" role by refusing asylum and opportunity to foreigners, she ought logically to use the power she possesses to export political ideals and enable foreigners to enjoy the same advantages in their home countries as they would in the United States. Indeed, on no other basis can the permanency of democratic institutions in Europe be assured.

The choice of American capital, backed by the American government, must lie between autocracy and democracy, and the former, if encouraged now, will be even more dangerous to our liberties than when America entered the war.

So agonizing democracy looks westward for salvation to the land of dollars and political ideals. The men who during the next few months determine America's choice have a heavy responsibility before history.



Seven Days in Lil Ol' New York

By JESSIE HENDERSON,

LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright, 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—"Count that day lost whose low descending sun sees by the sleuths no brand new probe begun."

This is New York's present motto. Stuck so full of probings is this tight little island that a psychic portrait of Miss Manhattan would show her framed in knives, like the courageous young lady in the circus, who plays opposite the dagger thrower. Former Governor Whitman, special counsel for the January extraordinary grand jury—and hence chief dagger hurler—says police graft conditions are worse than in the Lieutenant Becker days. New York consequently feels a pardonable glow of pride in having broken her own record.

In moments between worrying about city hall pluckings, New York is this week giving thought to the poultry show in Madison Square Garden. While, to put it facetiously, squabs and chickens are no unusual sight in this biggest of small towns, yet 16,000 of these birds gathered under one roof is an unusual spectacle.

WEATHER HITS SNAG

The high cost of chicken feed which has troubled of late years so many a Broadway spender, was an absorbing topic, and it seemed not to surprise any one that all these chickens were laying for somebody. A number of newly emancipated voters, by the way, seemed to get satisfaction from the fact that while the feminine contingent of the poultry show did most of the really useful work, the masculines as usual did all of the crowing.

Crowing, by the way, is one of the things New Yorkers have done about their Palm Beach weather until the cold wave this week froze the boast on their lips. The St. Regis hotel selected the chilliest night of all in which to have a fire in a basement storeroom. Smoke, creeping through the hotel, alarmed the guests, who turned out in picturesque disarray only to turn in again when the blaze was soon conquered. The little incident proved to many people, however, that when the Hudson river is frozen over from Tarrytown to Nyack, the old-fashioned flannel nightgown has several advantages over the thought in crepe de chine.

BLUE LAWS SEEM DOOMED

Tenuous as crepe de chine and as easily pierced by the cold breath of popular disapproval are the chances of the blue law lobby just opened in Albany and directed from headquarters in New York. Sunday motion pictures and Sunday professional baseball are the big issues this year and other issues are Sunday grocery and drug stores.

The blue law people at New York headquarters say they have no intention of trying to do "such nonsensical things" as to limit kissing; and thus it would seem that they are cutting out the one eminently useful feature of their program. For 'tis said the kiss has worked more havoc than the Sunday grocery.

Havoc has been worked, too, by fur and other thieves in the last seven days. Playing the role of Santa Claus with reverse English, some skinny burglars descended the chimney of one shop and helped themselves to $10,000 worth of furs. A few days later a policeman chased a man shoplifter down Fifth avenue through the afternoon shopping crowds and as in a movie thriller, shot him down on the sidewalk, put him under arrest and bundled him off to a hospital.

HOLD-UPS COMMON

Hold-ups are, however, so common and guns such common exhibits that a lot of shoppers just said: "Oh, a robbery!" And went about their business.

In the last seven days robbers have collected about $50,000 by a process of thriftily taking a little here and a lot there. But after all, this was thrift week.

Geraldine Farrar hasn't been topped off to anything about thrift week. She created the role of "Louise," a new one for her, and she made that simple little Parisian shop girl anything but simple in attire. Chiffons and satins were nothing to the Farrar "Louise." She dressed as silkily as she sang, as vividly as she loved.

Thrift got yet another slam from the stage people when Mrs. Fiske opened in "Wake Up, Jonathan," a play which proves that a poet is richer than a millionaire any day; and when George Arliss introduced "The Green Goddess," for the purpose of showing, among other things, that while a rajah may not have a good, kind heart, he certainly is a flashy dresser. No, thrift has not been conspicuous on the boards this last week.

Meanwhile, the osteopaths in New York have asked for a state law against high heels. They appear to feel that the high heel means a long and pointed vamp and this, of course, is hard on the soul.

Britain Hints That U. S. May Be Asked To Cancel Its Debt

of any nation that belongs to the league, in spirit. A dispatch from Marion, Ohio, on the previous day said that Senator Harding felt his responsibility and that the necessity of the times, as well as the interests of his country, demanded solid support for plans which would make war more difficult. The differences between the two sides of the Atlantic are narrowing.

There must be collaboration between the two sections of the English speaking peoples. Meantime, good luck to Harding on his Florida holiday. May he return to health and gain strength for the great task before him.

There are new troubles in South Europe where war-liberated nations are now squabbling busily over the landmarks of their neighbors. And in the north the Lithuanians object to the Vilna plebiscite apparently because they fear the politics of the majority. The Poles suggest as an alternative a Lithuanian-Polish federation, but Lithuania demands prior recognition of her frontiers, with withdrawal of Zeligowski, but this the latter refuses to do.

Meanwhile, the Bolshevists are massing troops and may crush both unless there is a timely return to common sense. The League of Nations certainly inherited a mess of trouble in a world awry and it will require all the support and good guidance possible in the coming months.

The Rapallo treaty, meantime, settled the affairs of Italy and Jugo-Slavia, though it is a sad reflection that it leaves a half million Slovenes under Italy, largely as the result of the helplessness of Wilson and the preoccupations and commitments of the allied powers.

Germany Anxious to Learn Debt Amount

PARIS, Jan. 22.—"If we could know exactly the total amount of reparations to be demanded from Germany, we would be able presently to make financial arrangements with America, with which we could collaborate in giving world commerce the confidence it is now lacking," Herr Bergman, German financial secretary, said today in an interview with L'Intransigeant.

"I know it will be difficult to obtain but I am confident we will succeed."

BUSINESS HURT BY CONTRACTS BEING IGNORED

U. S. Chamber of Commerce to Make Inquiry Into Cancellations.

By HARDEN COLFAX.
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE
(Copyright, 1921, by OAKLAND TRIBUNE)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is about to begin a comprehensive inquiry into the cancellation of contracts by American business men on orders placed with British firms.

Woven into and around the investigation will be the whole question of cancellation of contracts, not only abroad but in the United States. The effect of the investigation will be to bring into the open some of the evils which have surrounded what business describes as the greatest curse with which American business has been afflicted since the war—cancellations without justification. This practice has not only clogged the courts of the country with suits for damages, but has played a vital part in retarding the return of business to normal.

Joseph H. Defrees, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, characterizes the contract-repudiation mania which has infected the business world as wrong. So does General Samuel McRoberts, for National City Bank of New York, who was a visitor to Defrees' office while the latter was being interviewed by the writer. Here McRoberts remarked:

HONESTY IS NEEDED

"What is needed in American business is a revival of good, old-fashioned American honesty. Business seeing that the repudiation of contracts is unmoral. Fortunately I think I see signs every day that the moral tone in this respect is improving."

Defrees believes that cancellations which might be classed as repudiation of contracts are wrong and that there is the opportunity now for the application of the golden rule in business. He said:

"I have no doubt that most of the orders which have been subjected to cancellation were technically capable of enforcement. Where an engagement is made and a cancellation is thereafter accomplished it can only be said that it is fair, ethical and worthy of American business if it results in a new meeting of the minds of the parties, acting freely and without constraint.

"There are many instances in which such meeting of minds occurred in most recent cancellation. Frequently, to carry out the contract literally would place such a burden upon the purchaser as to cause his failure, or, at least so cripple his efforts as to minimize his future operation as a customer.

CONTRACTS MODIFIED

"In such cases it has been found both to the interest of the seller and of the customer for the contract to be modified either by cancellation, by change in price, or by change in dates of delivery, so that the customer could continue, and the seller could assist in preserving his customers for the future advantage to him.

"Such arrangements cannot be regarded as unethical. It is simply unfortunate that the occasion for their creation has come into existence at all."

The minute prices started on the down grade recently, however, and deliveries were easier to obtain cancellation of contracts by all classes of business men began. This was one of the things which helped to break the sugar market, forcing the price of retail sugar to the householder from 23 cents down to 10 cents and 9 cents. It assisted in breaking the milk market. It was a contributing cause to the closing of textile mills and clothing factories, and one of the controlling factors in the shutdown of shoe factories.

But while helping to lower prices to the customer, the cancellation of contracts played fast and loose with producers, bankers who had lent money to do business and the employment of labor.

The American Sugar Refining Company went into court and sued a big sugar district distributor to make him either take the goods he had agreed to take or pay the difference between the low price of the open market and the high price of his contract. This example of suit for damage is being followed all over the country. Business men, bankers and business lawyers are anxiously awaiting verdicts.

The investigation of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will be the result of an important series of complaints by British business men to the American Chamber of Commerce in London recently passed on to the national chamber here. But inquiry shows that complaints are reaching the state department and the department of commerce from many American houses of cancellations from many South American, Cuban and European concerns. In all likelihood these complaints from Americans will be set up against the British complaints.

Laundryman Faces Charge of Contempt

Following the issuance of a bench warrant by Judge F. St. Sure on testimony indicating him to be guilty of contempt of court, Fred C. Horst, formerly a driver for a local laundry, surrendered himself to Sheriff Barnet and was released on his own recognizance by Judge St. Sure, with instructions to appear in court next Friday.

Horst, who since severing his connection with his former employers has been operating as a "free lance," calling himself the East Bay Laundry Company, is declared to have signed a contract not to solicit business from customers of his former associates. Recently he was enjoined from doing so.

Donahue and Hynes, attorneys for the laundry, produced a number of [illegible] in court who testified Horst had asked them to give him business.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. [illegible]—A race for the auditor's office between husband and wife, during which she usually came out second best, was testified to in the Superior Court today by Mrs. Anna T. She claims that it was agreed between them when they were wedded that she was to draw his salary. Jury Disagrees in Abduction Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. [illegible]—The jury hearing the abduction trial against Joseph Rodriguez failed to agree today and was dismissed.

Rodriguez came here from Los Angeles after he had told a private detective agency that he could solve the Denton murder mystery. He enlisted the aid of a young Spanish girl, Josephine Vallirial, as interpreter, and later was arrested and charged with abducting her. While in jail he confessed to the Denton killing, and after the police had investigated admitted his story was a hoax.

Witness Still At Large, Case Put Over

BERKELEY, Jan. [illegible]—For the sixth time the case of Richardson, alleged bootlegger, whose home at 1820 Sixth street was raided on December 21 by federal and local officers, was continued this morning because the star witness, A. Razzo, boilermaker of Oakland, failed to make his appearance.

January 29 was set as the new date for trial by Judge Robert Edgar. Razzo disappeared shortly after Richardson's arrest, and despite the efforts of a half dozen policemen to locate him no trace has been found of his whereabouts. City Attorney Frank V. Cornish, who is prosecuting the case, believes however that he has enough testimony to convict Richardson without that of Razzo.

A Brain Can't Work Right on Thin, Watery Blood

It takes iron to make strong, magnetic, forceful men with the power and energy to win

WITH PLENTY OF IRON AND RICH RED BLOOD YOUR BRAIN is the most wonderful thing in all creation—without this it is nothing. IRON CARRIES OXYGEN from your lungs to your brain. Without iron, your brain gets no oxygen; without plenty of blood and oxygen your brain becomes dull and heavy, YOUR INTELLECT POOR, your memory fails, YOU DO FOOLISH THINGS and make bad decisions.

With a "blood and iron" starved brain you may drive your automobile into a telegraph pole, because YOU DIDN'T THINK RIGHT, it may make you so "flighty" in thought and reckless in judgment that your money seems to take wings and fly away; everything seems to go wrong to be upside down, you call it "BAD LUCK" or misfortune. IRON STARVATION may turn the coolest man of the strongest will power into a nervous, irritable, careless being, it may make COWARDS of the bravest and FAILURES of the WISEST.

Many a capable man falls just SHORT OF SUCCESS—NEARLY "GETS THERE" BUT NOT QUITE—simply because he lacks sufficient iron in his blood to give him the physical strength and power to furnish the proper FORCE TO HIS BRAIN and the "STAY THERE" STRENGTH TO HIS "WILL."

THERE ARE 30,000,000,000,000 RED BLOOD CORPUSCLES in your blood and each one must have iron. Don't try to "fool" yourself into thinking you are a man of "red blood and iron" when you have good reason to suspect that you are not—consider the SIZE OF YOUR BANK BALANCE and what success you have had in life. A MAN IS ONLY PART OF A MAN WHEN HIS BLOOD LACKS IRON.

ASTERS OF A "BLOOD AND IRON" STARVED BRAIN

[illegible] blood is starving for iron no [illegible] nor stimulants can put you [illegible] the husks of grains and the [illegible] of fruits and vegetables as our [illegible] to enrich your blood and fill [illegible] iron or take a little or [illegible] to time to make up for [illegible] by modern methods of [illegible] be sure that the iron you take [illegible] and not metallic or mineral [illegible] usually take. Metallic [illegible] as it comes from the action [illegible] pieces of iron, [illegible] different thing from [illegible] iron is like the iron in your [illegible] spinach, lentils and [illegible] your druggist, under [illegible] Iron. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat. Nuxated Iron also contains a product representing the principal chemical constituent of ACTIVE LIVING NERVE FORCE for feeding the nerves, so that it may therefore be said to be both a BLOOD AND A NERVE FOOD.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood, give you new strength and energy and help revitalize your worn-out exhausted nerves, and thereby greatly strengthen your will power and aid in restoring your failing memory. If you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people, who were ailing all the while have surprisingly increased their strength and endurance in two weeks time in many instances. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Look for the letters N I on every tablet. At all druggists.

So much progress has been made by the Unitarians in Alameda during the past year that the need of a new Unitarian church is strongly felt. Plans are also being made for holding services twice a day on Sundays.

A fine list of speakers was present. "The New Church for the New Age" furnished the main topic. The speakers upon this subject were the Rev. Clarence A. Reed, pastor of the Alameda congregation, and the Rev. Charles A. Murdock, a Unitarian of 57 years' standing, Mrs. Eileen Allen, the Rev. Albert L. Hudson, representative of the Unitarian Association, and Prof. William Morgan.

Earl Wilbur, president of the Unitarian college, had as his subject "Our Day of Opportunity." He emphasized the present day demand and need for religion and spoke upon the favorable outlook and described it as being the day of opportunity for the church.

An interesting musical program was presented by Miss Ivah Murphy, soprano soloist, and Miss Pearl Collar, pianist.

NG GA PY TO BE LIFE SAVER AT CHINESE FEAST

Gow Yet Tells World Times Are Changed, But New Year Gargle Remains

When the advent of Chinese New Year is ushered in [illegible] Chinese throughout the world at midnight Wednesday February [illegible] the older and more conservative followers of Confucius will observe in Oriental idiom:

"It ain't like the old days."

To the minds of the older generation it will recall the time when their New Year's meant [illegible] thirteen days to religious observances, feasting, [illegible] fireworks and the paying of all debts so that they could save their faces and make happier the lives of their ancestors in the Seven Heavens.

"NO BLUDDY HOME"

And the younger, more progressive, republican Chinese?

Gow Yet, Third street fish store peddler, essayed yesterday to answer the question after he had obtained a firm grip on a carp, a Chinese delicacy which had persistently slipped from his grasp.

"Evvy thing change nex day," commented Gow. "No bluddy home. Young Chinese a boy think hip smarter more than parent. All e time chin chin." He brought down the broad side of his fish hatchet with a resounding smack on the goggle-eyed head of the carp.

"My time," he continued, "evvy bluddy have hip goo time—three nut burn punk joss blouse moon, say Happy Noo Year, burnum fire clakker, catchem all debts e e o vah!" This time he bestowed such a hearty thump on the fish it shed scales in all directions.

"Now day Chinese a boy alltime talk to d—d much. No bluddy no hab got chance. First nim catchem short [illegible]. Next come Melican clos. Him allight. Co[illegible] chool chin chin talky tall alla day. Him allight."

NG GA PY FHI ORDER

"Chinese a boy him too ploud burn fire clakker—smell punk—ack like bladder. No—Chinese a boy now day hip like fizz dancing alla time day night. No hab got time fire clakker, joss not a-thin. Wassa use?"

Local Chinese however have just been cheered up considerably by the action of the federal authorities in releasing Thursday 1500 gallons of ng ga py, a semi-colorless Chinese intoxicant with a recoil like a choke bore shotgun.

"Who," queried Gow, "Puttem ng ga py alla same pie like lince meat?" "It is foony!" He raised his axe and then upon second thought laid both it and the fish aside.

"Puttem ng ga py in lince pie," he continued, "this foony. You crazy."

"Hey," he demanded abruptly, opening his upper frock, "where you catchem ng ga py?"

Judge Holds Court To Save Man's Job

LONDON—(By Mail to United Press.)—The British working man has certainly come into his own. Judge Cluer held a special sitting in the Shoreditch court on a Saturday when the court would ordinarily be closed, just to oblige a workingman who was afraid that if he lost a day's work he would be "fired."

MOTION PICTURE MEN TO MEET TO AID HOOVER DRIVE

Davis Pledges Co-operation of Citizens of Oakland in Relief Campaign

In [illegible] program of the Allied Amusement Industries of Northern California by which the motion picture industry will co-operate to make successful the Hoover European Relief Campaign, [illegible] motion picture theater owners and exhibitors will meet Monday night at the Hotel Oakland with the executive committee from San Francisco to [illegible] plans for county-wide co-operation here for the relief canvass.

The Alameda county participation [illegible] in the hands of H. R. Beach, president of the Alameda County Exhibitors' League, and C. L. Griffin. At the meeting Monday night at 8 o'clock at the Hotel Oakland, Eugene Roth of the California Theater in San Francisco, who is [illegible] chairman for the motion picture industries of Northern California, will be present with the entire San Francisco moving picture committee.

DAVIS PLEDGES AID

Mayor John L. Davis today pledged his full co-operation to the work of the moving picture interests for the relief canvass. Mayor Davis's letter sent to Charles A. Nelson, business manager of the Allied Amusement Industries, is as follows:

Allied Amusement Industries of California,
100 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco.

Gentlemen:

I am very much enthused over the splendid work your organization is doing in behalf of the starving children of Eastern and Central Europe Baby Relief Work, and wish to take this opportunity to assure your organization of my hearty support in an official and personal way.

I think the plan adopted by your organization to give a children's morning matinee to our public schools is far reaching in giving the children of Oakland an opportunity to participate and assist the less fortunate children of European countries.

OAKLAND TO CO-OPERATE

I believe I can safely say that the citizens of Oakland will co-operate with the Oakland administration in putting this over 100 per cent.

Very truly yours,
JOHN L. DAVIS.

The moving picture interests nationally pledged Herbert Hoover, in charge of the European Relief Campaign, to raise $[illegible]00,000. The national fund is for $33,000,000 to save from starvation 3,[illegible]00,000 children of Central Europe.

In San Francisco every motion picture house will hold a children's matinee on the morning of February 3, the public schools being given a half holiday for the occasion, the proceeds being turned over to the relief fund. It is expected that some similar program will be arranged for Oakland.

'Opportunity' Classes Found To Benefit Berkeley Pupils

BERKELEY Jan 22—A "square deal" for every one of the 10,000 children in the Berkeley schools as one way of solving the present day juvenile problem has been adopted as the program of the college city educational heads.

Just how far the program has already been carried out was demonstrated this week in a report made to the board of education by Dr Virgil Dickson director of a bureau of research and guidance organized some months ago in the Berkeley department.

That the "misfit" child either overlooked by nature or endowed with an unnatural precociousness is entitled to as much of a chance in life as the normal pupil has been the policy behind a broad program of work inaugurated by Dr Dickson which has placed 550 Berkeley children into special opportunity classes in the local schools.

It is this class of children Dr Dickson points out that is developed into rebels against existing social conditions and many times furnish police and state problems of their failings and eccentricities are not caught and corrected in early childhood.

"The only true democracy in our schools provides for an equal chance for all" declares Dr Dickson. "Once this would have meant the poor child but now it means the so-called abnormal and super-normal children."

How special treatment accorded "repeaters" in class work has not only improved the school standing of children but has cut down the cost of school maintenance was shown by Dr Dickson in a report made this week to the Board of Education. But the real results of the work declares Dr Dickson cannot be measured in terms of money. These he said are shared by the community at large in the lessening of the number of juvenile "problems."

Of the work done by Dr. Dickson and his assistant, Miss Marian C Smith the following are extracts from the report of the former:

"The Bureau of Research and Guidance is constantly making studies to determine the character of the work being done in schools by means of standard tests in arithmetic reading spelling etc. These tests help to reveal problems that need attention.

"Another phase of the functioning of the bureau of research and guidance is the careful and scientific study of individuals and subsequent guiding and placement.

"Misplacement because of lack of educational opportunity physical defects, lack of ability or latent unchallenged potentiality results for many children in failure repetition of grades discouragement inefficiency and unwholesome attitude toward school and society. By discovering and adjusting these misfits three services are accomplished:

"1—By segregating these children in small groups often temporarily an opportunity is given to meet the educational needs of each one.

"2—The quantity and quality of instruction given to the regular classes is enhanced by the removal of these children.

"The financial saving in thus reducing the number of repeaters is great. The exact amount of saving to the city by this procedure cannot be estimated but the value which comes to the boy and girl in saving of time elimination of failure preserving of self-respect and successful achievement of tasks commensurable with the ability is immeasurable. We believe that we are helping to build for citizenship in an economic sure and sane way."

About 550 children in the Berkeley schools are now profiting by individual and thoughtful attention.

That a careful grading and segregation of pupils have resulted not only in increased efficiency in the elementary classes, but in curtailing expenses by cutting down the teaching staff, is also shown by Dr Dickson.

Although the period from June to December 1920 showed an increase of 363 pupils in the elementary grades, but two new teachers were added to care for the growth Dr Dickson's report discloses. At the present time he shows a total of 1[illegible] teachers caring for 5310 pupils in elementary classes. By careful analysis of school problems six new teachers reported as necessary by principals in the various schools were eliminated this term at a saving of approximately $11 000 Dr Dickson shows.

Do You Clutter, Stutter, Lisp Or Stammer? Try This Cure

MISS IRENE ROWE, director of the speech defect clinic at the public health center, and "Tony," the entire clinic, organized last week

Miss Irene Rowe Corrects Defective Speech at Health Center, Tony Only Client

[illegible] Do you lisp [illegible] Miss Rowe supervisor of the Speech Improvement department in the [illegible] public schools and [illegible] the speech defect clinic in the Alameda County Public Health Center.

Clutter [illegible] the newly recognized disease. It is the explanation for that disagreeable habit of saying what one does not think. Science defines it as a defect resultant from a speeded up mentality and slow method of expression. It is curable. Miss Rowe has performed miracles for many a professor in the California universities public speakers and weary business men. Now she is turning her attention primarily to children.

800 CHILDREN CURED

More than 800 youngsters in the public schools last year were speech patients of the young woman and her twelve assistants. Elementary grades gave the greatest number of cases. [illegible] These students cluttered lisped stammered stuttered. They are done none of them. The latest scientific methods in vogue on the Atlantic coast have been marshaled to their defeat.

Here comes the Health Center Grove and Thirty-first street to announce its first speech defect clinic for the youngsters who do not receive the treatment through the public schools. It was organized last [illegible] with one student. Its [illegible] will shortly be crowded with the [illegible] whose indistinct speech is making them the brunt for their companions jokes. Teeth tonsils adenoids malformation of the mouth cleft palate, nervousness, are causes for the recognized disorder which dental surgical psychiatric and other clinics are endeavoring to correct along with Miss Rowe's efforts.

ONE-BOY CLINIC

Tony from Tompkins school is at present the whole speech defect clinic. Tony's life was miserable because he stuttered. Today Tony is not stuttering—so much. After a while he will not stutter at all.

Dr A H Podstatter and Dr Clarence W Mack speech defect specialists and clinicians at the public health center will shortly organize a university extension class in connection with the Speech Defect department. Deviations of mentality from various causes which might react upon the child and the physical cause will be discussed by the two experts.

Leopard Child Is Real Live Rival of Tarzan of the Apes

BY UNITED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

LONDON Jan —"Tarzan of the Apes" has a real live rival in a leopard child which was recently discovered by Stuart Baker Fellow of the Zoological society in the Cachar Hills which skirt the Indian forests.

The full account of this wild half animal child is told by Baker in the Journal of the Bombay Natural History Society and the principal details as received here are as follows:

At the court house in the village of Dhungi a native came to Baker protesting against doing his share of the forced labor for road mending etc which in those primitive parts takes the place of taxation. The man explained that if he left his home to take part in such work he would have to leave his little wild son who would immediately run back to the jungle unless someone were there to keep watch over him. On Baker's expressing doubt as to the verity of the man's excuse he was taken outside the court to see the wild child.

SEVEN YEARS OLD

This was a boy about seven years old and he was squatting on the ground like a small animal. On Mr Baker's approach the child sniffed the air and scuttled on all fours to a hiding place behind his father. Closer examination of the child showed that he was covered all over with small scars from innumerable cuts and scratches and he was nearly blind from some form of cataract.

The father explained what had happened to the boy. About five years previously the Cochari villagers had found two leopard cubs close to their homes. These they had taken and killed. The mother leopard searching for her offspring haunted the village for two days. On the third day a woman cutting rice in one of the village plantations laid her baby boy down on a cloth while she got on with her work. Presently hearing a cry she turned round to see a leopard springing away with the child.

The whole village turned out to hunt for the leopard but without success. Believing that the child must have been eaten they finally gave up their search.

Three years later a big game hunter brought news to the village that he had just killed a big leopardess—and he had left behind some cubs which the villagers could secure. On hearing this the natives turned out to find the cubs and brought back two cubs—and one child.

STOLEN BY LEOPARDESS

It was the same little boy that the leopardess had stolen away three years previously. The parents at once identified him and the rest of the village admitted the claim. At the time he was caught the child ran on all fours as fast as an adult man could run and in dodging in and out of the bushes and undergrowth he was uncannily clever and quick. At that time he was suffering only slightly from the cataract but after his capture his sight rapidly grew weaker.

When Baker saw him—some two years after his delivery from the jungle—he had learnt to walk nearly upright but there were hard callouses on his knees his toes were turned at right angles to his instep and the palms of his hands and the pads of toes and thumb were covered with tough horny skin.

The village chief told Baker that when first caught the boy bit and fought everyone who came near him and any village fowl which came within his reach he would tear to pieces and eaten with extraordinary rapidity. When Baker saw him he was more or less tamed and walked upright except when startled when for the sake of speed he took to all fours. He was getting friendly with the villagers whom he knew only by scent. His food consisted of rice and vegetables and he had grown resigned to sleeping in his father's hut.

The cataract was not in any way due to the leopard's treatment for an older child of the same woman was similarly afflicted. The child was in excellent condition thin but well covered and with an exceptional development of muscle.

WOMEN MAINTAIN THAT SILK HOSIERY IS INDISPENSABLE

ENID BENNETT finds out the importance of fine feathers as an asset to happiness in "Silk Hosiery," a unique romance at the Franklin theater.

That "It isn't the women, it's the trimmin'" is the principle that Enid Bennett painfully learns and skilfully applies in her latest picture, "Silk Hosiery," at the Franklin Theater this week.

A modest little model, dreaming of a wholly mythical Prince Charming, she is rudely awakened to find herself suddenly drawn into a net of intrigue that threatens to wreck her life. Then Prince Charming comes to life and gowns, taxis, crooks strew the way out of the general muddle to the little shop-girl's last surprising stunt.—Advertisement.

Masons, Pythians Will Attend Installation by Odd Fellows

Spirit of Unity Between the Three Orders Will Be Proved Saturday.

Masons and Pythians will unite next Saturday evening in paying tribute to the third member of the fraternal trinity, the Odd Fellows, by attending the joint installation which the three local lodges of the latter order are giving in Aahmes Temple, Thirteenth and Harrison streets. Said to be the first affair of its kind ever held in the West, the installation is holding the spotlight of interest among fraternal circles because it emphasizes more strongly than ever the spirit of unity which exists between the three orders.

Official notice that the Masons and Pythians would cooperate with the Odd Fellows in the installation came this week with the acceptance of the invitation sent out by the Odd Fellows to Aahmes Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, and the Dramatic Order of Knights of Khorassan, each representative of the various Masonic and Pythian lodges.

Judge Lincoln S. Church, recently elected illustrious potentate of Aahmes Temple of the Shriners, and past noble grand of Oakland Lodge, No. 118, I. O. O. F., will be the speaker of the evening. Judge Geo. W. Samuels, also a member of the Shriners and the Odd Fellows, will present the past grand's jewel to O. L. Newman, junior past grand of Oakland Lodge, No. 118, and Assemblyman Clifton E. Brooks will make the speech of presentation for Porter Lodge.

The ceremonies will start at 8 o'clock, with the entrance of District Deputy Grand Master Jack Frawley and his attendant grand officers. Officers in the three lodges will be installed concurrently. Following the speeches of presentation of the past grands' jewels, Judge Church will deliver the oration of the evening.

Dancing and a reception to the newly installed officers will follow until midnight. Supper will then be served in a downtown restaurant. During the supper School Director Fred S. Campbell will speak on "The Duties of Odd Fellows to Civic Life."

Special reservations in the auditorium of the temple are being made for Shriners, Pythians, Nomads of Arrudaka and the Merchants' Exchange.

JUDGE GEORGE W. SAMUELS, who will speak at the joint installation of the Oakland lodges of the I. O. O. F. next Saturday evening.

U. C. LIBRARY IS OF RECORD SIZE

BERKELEY, Jan. 22.—If students at the University of California aren't the best read persons in the world it isn't because of lack of material.

However fastidious the student may be in his tastes, he has almost a half million books from which to choose his reading matter at the university library. In his annual report just submitted to President David P. Barrows, Librarian Harold L. Leupp shows the state university to have probably the largest library in the United States, outside of the Congressional library at Washington, D. C.

His report shows an exact number of 418,824 volumes in the possession of the university at the end of last year. A total of 21,399 books were added during the last year, 6298 of this number representing gifts. Of the vast number of books loaned out but 257 were lost during the year.

As the principal feature of his report in addition to the size of the college library, Leupp urges the pensioning of library employes by the university. Unless income is provided for old age the university will face a dilemma in recruiting new and competent help, says Leupp, who also advocates increased salaries as a means of attracting properly qualified persons to the profession.

Battery E of 143d Examining Recruits

Examinations of recruits for Battery E of the 143d Regiment of Field Artillery, now being reorganized, will be held in the National Guard clubrooms in the Odd Fellows' building, Eleventh and Franklin streets, at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening.

Following the examinations a general meeting of former E Battery men will be held, at which further plans for an active recruiting campaign will be discussed. A minimum of fifty men is required for mustering in and it is expected that more than half of this number will be composed of former members of the battery.

Plans are now being formulated for the erection of a temporary armory to house the new 75-millimeter guns with which the battery is to be equipped. Former service men may enlist for a period of one year, or longer if desired.

All former members of the battery are urged to attend the meeting tomorrow in order to assist in the reorganization of their old outfit, which is to be commanded by former First Sergeant Jack Cook.

Sales of much larger scope than previous round-ups that we have had. Hitherto these sales have consisted of a round-up of stocks on hand. This time, with our buyers in the East, we have also made them a market round-up. Thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise has been sent us---bargains purchased here and there on new low market. Because it would be impossible to sell this merchandise in one day, sales are extended to last the week.

A year ago we celebrated the enlargement of the Downstairs Store and the installation of the new outside entrance with Expansion Sales that were wonderful business days To make this year's Round-up Sales exceed that mighty sales record has been our aim We have assembled a great deal more merchandise, and the prices are considerably lower Our chances to obtain merchandise at price concessions have been better so this is going to be one of the old time affairs where quality goes hand in hand with price and style BE HERE

WEEK BEFORE AUTO SHOW OPENS IS BUSY ONE WITH DEALERS

AUTO SHOW TO OPEN ON JANUARY 31

By JIMMY HATLO

One week from tomorrow Manager Bob Maitland will swing open the doors of Oakland's Civic Auditorium Paul Steindorff's orchestra will play the national anthem and Oakland's Third Annual Auto Show will be officially opened to the thousands who will swarm into the big building to do homage to the ingenuity and skill of America's motor car designers

The artists are applying the last dabs of color to the decorative scheme the exhibitors have been massaging their four wheeler exhibits with polish until they fairly dazzle the eye the tickets have been painted in a wide variety of startling shades and in fact everything is in readiness for what promises to go down in history as the most successful motor car exposition ever staged in Oakland

SHORTAGE OF SPACE

Despite the tremendous size of the Auditorium it is not adequate properly to accommodate the demands of the Oakland dealers The number of exhibitors who obtained the full amount of space they desired to display their cars or trucks may be counted on one's fingers Applications for space were far in excess of the actual footage available which necessitated a general curtailment of space The result is a display of quality rather than quantity the dealers being forced to confine their exhibits to the choicest models of their respective lines or in many instances alternating the cars from day to day

A number of distinct surprises will be uncovered to the motoring public when the doors of the automobile show are opened in the form of brand new models that have been kept secret even from the trade There will be displayed for the first time in a Pacific Coast motor car exposition several makes of cars that are destined to attain heights of prestige in their respective price classes by reason of their quality construction and the nation wide reputation of the makers.

REAL SHOWDOWN

There are still more which have only recently made their debut and have been seen only by a few people. An automobile show is the real showdown of the automobile business for there the silver tongued salesman has no opportunity to get you off to one side and make his sale without the annoyance of competing cars It is the one time of the year when the prospective purchaser can inspect and compare cars under one roof and, by reason of the numerous "cutout" chassis exhibited learn a great deal about the vitals of each car

Opposed to the glamor of the dolled-up passenger car and sleek glistening bodies with every sort of device imaginable to aid comfort and luxury will be the purely commercial aspect of the motor truck division But in those heavy duty chassis will be lessons in advancement in design and construction that spell dollars to the business man who naturally must attain economical delivery expense

The show, as has been said will open on Monday January 31 and continue until the evening of February 6, the doors of the Auditorium being pried apart sharply at 9 a. m every day and taps blown at 10 30 each evening

Workers Ask Plants Use to Make Cars

Because an automobile plans in Detroit closed for a month a request was made by the idle employees for permission to use the factory to make cars for themselves and families The workers agreed to pay for all raw material used and to maintain all existing departments and in general, to return the plan in even better condition

Billion Is Urged For U. S. Good Roads

One of the principal subjects considered by the American Good Roads Congress for its session in Chicago February 9 is a proposal to use the billion dollars in funds now available for road building in 1921 as a partial remedy for unemployment conditions throughout the country

ARTIST KET SAW THE DECORATIVE SCHEME FOR THE OAKLAND AUTO SHOW IMMEDIATELY HIS IMAGINATIVE INCLINATIONS PICTURED FOR HIM THE SCENE WHICH he has reproduced here—part of the auditorium interior as he thinks it will appear when the doors open on the first night of the motor car exposition, January 31 Motor car buyers already are "rarin' to go" They want to see what the new year has produced in automotive designs Their wish will be gratified if just a few of the surprises materialize which the dealers have in store for the public

MOTOR SHOW WILL BRING CAR ORDERS

With the automobile show only a week away and the whole Eastbay district talking show it is certain that the big event will be a huge success

Our exhibits will include stock Hudson and Essex cars and a cut out chassis says A. E. Boqua, of Hamlin & Boqua

"The cut out chassis will be lighted electrically and there will be a demonstrator to tell all about it We were unable to secure show space enough to show all the cars we wanted to but the Hudson and Essex display will be as complete as space allows

"The shows this year are a wonderful step in advance The automobile industry has been suffering along with others due to a slump that no one could control

We came here and took over the Hudson and Essex lines after a big concern with a large building had handled the car We rented a small building on Broadway for temporary quarters and sold automobiles All the time were were in the small location we had our eyes out for a more central place and one that would be large enough to handle the volume of car trade We found it in December and moved into our present location in the heart of the row

Studebaker and Overland Each Awarded Yosemite Cups

By JIM HOULIHAN

A controversy is likely to arise over the award of two trophies by Foster Curry of Camp Curry one to an Overland Four and the other to a Studebaker Light Six. The first was given to the Overland for having checked into the floor of Yosemite shortly after midnight on New Year's Day The second trophy was given to the Studebaker Light Six in recognition of the fact that the Studebaker, which reached Yosemite last Sunday afternoon was the first car to check in this year at Yosemite after having made the trip over one of the three accepted regular routes into the Valley In this instance the Studebaker used the Coulterville road

Officials of the Chester N Weaver Co and the Weaver Wells Company feel that but one cup should have been given and that they are the rightful recipients because their car and the crew which manned it conformed to what they considered the recognized rules that are laid down for contestants

The Overland car, driven by J. F. Smith Modesto dealer holds an official government certificate number 1 dated 12 25 a m January 1 1921

In the face of this apparent conclusive evidence Acting Superintendent Leavitt of Yosemite National Park gave out the following statement through William J. Moyle advertising manager of the Weaver Wells Company and the Chester N Weaver Company

The permit issued to the car that came into the valley over the railroad was dated January 1 1921 and marked 12 25 a m In my opinion it is impossible under the present road conditions for a car to enter the park at midnight and reach the rangers headquarters by 12 25 a m Therefore I am of the opinion that the car in question was already in the valley on the night of December 31 1920 It would seem that the Studebaker Light Six was the first car to get into the park under its own power irrespective of the fact that it came over the road the generally accepted route to be taken in the annual competition among automobile men

Chief Ranger Forest S Townsley concurred in the opinion expressed by Superintendent Leavitt Townsley said

It takes the automobile stages one hour and a half to go from El Portal the entrance to the park to the Rangers headquarters and they drive as fast as the

SPEEDWAY IN SOUTH PLANS BIG EVENTS

LOS ANGELES Jan [illegible] The 1921 speedway season will open here on February 22 when a series of five sprint races will be held on the mile and a quarter Los Angeles Speedway The announcement was made today by Manager A M Young of the Speedway Association

According to Young the race next month will be divided up into four 25 mile heats and a final race of 50 miles An unusually large purse will be hung up and in addition word has been received [illegible] ard A Kennerdell chairman of the A A A Contest Board that a large number of 1921 championship points will be awarded the race

Ralph DePalma and his fast little Ballot car the same car which failed to arrive from France in time for the last race on Thanksgiving day is all tuned up for the event and DePalma is understood to have been out on the large bowl for practice a number of times during the past month It is rumored that the little French racing car is even faster than the Duesenbergs which took all honors in the recent race

While entry blanks have not been circulated yet it is to be expected [illegible] the 1920 championship title with his [illegible] Chevrolet Special Joe Thomas with his Frontenac Eddie Hearne with his Revere and the Duesenberg outfit composed of Jimmy Murphy Roscoe Sarles and Eddie Miller will be on the job Al Thiele [illegible] also a probable entry and another Duesenberg is a possibility

Valley Cities Are Making War On Speeders

TULARE county and the city of Fresno are vigorously enforcing speed regulations, according to a warning sent out yesterday by George S Grant, manager of the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association

In Tulare county, according to Grant motorists are being fined $50 for exceeding the speed limit and there is every indication that jail sentences will be imposed with continued violations.

In Fresno there have been several accidents, due to speeding, and the police department is rigidly enforcing the 15 and 20 mile per hour speed limits within the city A large number of arrests have been made and fines of $10 imposed in each case

ONE AUTO FOR 11 PEOPLE IS RATIO IN U. S.

AKRON O Jan 22—Motor vehicle registrations for the past year obtained from the various states by the B F Goodrich Rubber Co show there are now 9 274 920 passenger cars and trucks in use throughout the United States—one for every 11 8 persons. This is an increase of 1 670 904 or 21 9 per cent over December 31 1919 when there were 7 604 016 motor vehicles registered

The gain during the last year was greater than that of any previous year and is considered remarkable by officials of the automotive industry in view of the adverse business conditions throughout the country during the last part of 1920 The largest previous gain was [illegible]

Every state in the Union showed a gain during the year Virginia leading with [illegible] per cent and [illegible] was last with [illegible] per cent The majority of states showed increases ranging from 18 to 24 per cent In a general way the figures show agricultural states made better gains than industrial states

NEW YORK LEADS

The race between New York and Ohio for supremacy in the number of motor vehicles has again been [illegible] in New York's favor The midyear registrations last summer showed Ohio leading by 81 000 cars and it was thought it would maintain [illegible] for the year [illegible]

FUTURE IS BRIGHT FOR AUTO MEN

By FRED SPOONER.

Special Despatch to The TRIBUNE

DETROIT Jan 22—As the natural result of the successful New York National Automobile Show, which closed last Saturday night, there is a note of optimism apparent among the manufacturers in the central west This note was entirely lacking in Detroit Cleveland Indianapolis and other centers prior to the New York exhibit As the result of the Chicago National Automobile Show which opens next Saturday night it is believed that affairs generally in the automotive manufacturing world will have started noticeably toward normalcy

Francis H Sisson vice president of the Guaranty Trust company, addressing the manufacturers at the annual affair of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, said that the peak had been passed that all chance of a panic had been passed some time ago that improvement would be steady from this time on, with five or more years of the utmost prosperity before the American people His statements backed by fact after fact excited the utmost interest and vociferous hand-clapping from the harried manufacturers and their representatives who wanted just that sort of a statement of the actual facts from a source so reliable

With their factories closed generally with the public excepting California buying but little while awaiting the reconstruction of business conditions the makers entered the New York show week with pessimism in all too many instances Their position was precarious in their opinion For never during the life of the automobile industry had things been at quite so serious a pass

PLANTS REOPENING.

Reports of the opening of many plants some with very limited working forces, and some with normal forces but on short time, was welcome news to the men of the industry Predictions toward the close of New York show week were that many more plants would be opening within a short time

Predictions of a return to old-time conditions before summer was heard frequently in the closing days at New York Much is expected from the Chicago show at which more dealers are always present than at New York and at which more real business is done

Conditions as they exist today, or as they existed prior to the New York exhibit are peculiar in many ways One man of prominence said that it was largely a condition of mind and cited an instance which came to his knowledge Listening to talk of two men on a subway train, he heard one say

"Yes I am going to buy a car but I am waiting for Bill to tell me when

The other smiled and said

"That is funny I am also waiting for Bill to say the word"

These two potential customers may be easily multiplied by hundreds of thousands without any trouble.

That the future presents a buyer's market is demonstrated, and statements such as were made by one big California distributor are proof positive of this. This man who has made a fortune in the business, pronounced general trade conditions bad, and later displayed a statement of sales week by week for a year, and in comparison with other years

SELLING HARD WORK.

That statement showed record-breaking sales for weeks in December, and when this was called to the attention of the distributor he said,

"But, man we had to sell every one of those cars. It was hard work"

As one maker said "That is really too bad now is that not so?"

Trouble with makers and dealers and distributors in the past has been that neither has been forced to sell cars They have simply been taken away from them The past years have not shown a buyer's market and things have been so easy that real hard work now palls upon them and causes the statement that business is bad

Predictions of a shortage of cars by spring are rife on all sides, due to the backwardness of the manufacturers in placing specifications for materials to balance their inventories

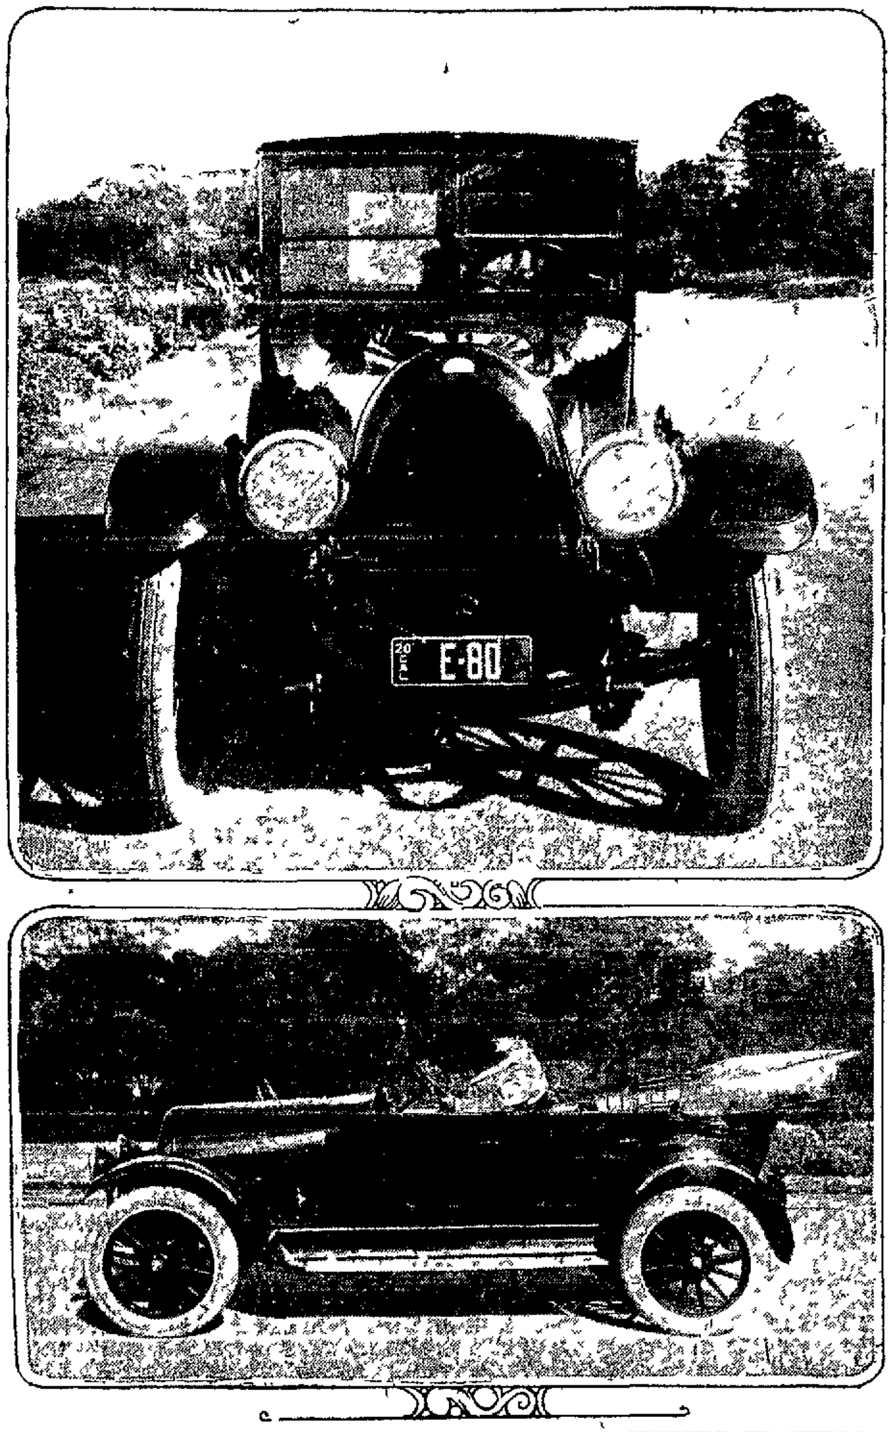
GET A "CLOSE UP" ON THE NEW FRANKLIN ISN'T IT NOBBY LOOKING? THE new "make up" is the first radical body design adopted for Franklins in many seasons Initial public display occurs tomorrow at the Franklin Motor Car Co. salesrooms.



HOOD CHANGE HELPS CAR'S APPEARANCE

The new design Franklin one of the first of the new 1921 cars which first met the gaze of the public at the New York automobile show arrived in Oakland last week and made its first debut on the salesroom floor of the Franklin Motor Car company yesterday And its arrival created a sensation on the row for the new design of the car puts the Franklin into the class of automobiles which can point with pride to their beautiful lines as one of the strongest arguments for ownership

Few cars make a more attractive appearance on the street or in the showroom than do the new designed models Gone is the distinctive appearing sloping nose which marked the car as a Franklin of air cooled design and in its place is a new hood of equally distinctive appearance but with an aristocratic touch that adds a wealth of beauty to the whole appearance of the car It was like a housewarming or a holiday yesterday at the Franklin place

If Ben Hammond is to be believed the new models will be the sensation of both the Oakland and later the San Francisco auto show for they will be displayed at these automobile exhibits

SALES ARE BIG

The past year has been an excellent one from point of sales according to the Franklin factory last month being the biggest in point of volume of any month during the year With the new design car however and the tendency on the part of the motor car buying public to look more keenly into the motor values and economy records the local Franklin forces are expecting this year to be even more prosperous

Hammond declares that he faces the year with more optimism than he has felt for several years back The holding of a big dealers meeting in the near future to plan the sales and advertising campaign on the car is now under discussion In commenting on the new design car Hammond said that he expected hundreds of people to visit the Oakland sales rooms of the company during the next week to inspect the new design car

There are many minor refinements and improvements in the car which will make for even more notable economy and greater comfort " he said They are as noticeable to us and as much appreciated by us as is the change in the design of the hood although of course that is the feature that will undoubtedly create the most comment and the widest discussion

POWER INCREASED

"A notable feature of the new Franklin is the use of the long piston the invention of an old owner which materially increases the power of the car

The other changes are appreciated by us because they give the motorist an additional value for his money when he buys a Franklin car and we are more than anxious to see that every Franklin owner is satisfied

"People are buying cars from a standpoint of thrift and economy these days as well as comfort and beauty, and our national owners' records show that in thrift the Franklin leads all its competitors because of its light weight its air-cooled scientific principles of construction

The new design car however is not only economical it is also beautiful Beauty of line distinctiveness of appearance, excellence of finish and refinements of appointment make it a notable value In my opinion it will prove the sensation of the year in motor circles

Sweden has 8500 automobiles

PEACE IS KEPT BY AUTO FLEET

Realizing the important niche which the automobile fills in helping to preserve law and order the city of Los Angeles has recently purchased a fleet of Dodge Brothers touring cars for use in the police department, thereby following the lead of Detroit and many other large Eastern cities who operate upwards of thirty on their various police departments

The acquisition of this equipment " said Mr Sweeney of the Los Angeles police department makes the Los Angeles police department one of the most mobile and flexible organizations in the country For the same reason that the efficiency of an army depends upon its mobility, so the efficiency of a police department depends upon its ability to get to the scene of the crime or trouble in the quickest possible time and, although the automobile functions in many important ways the most important and vital service which it renders is in the police departments of the great cities

The true worth of the automobile in the apprehension of lawbreakers is not realized in the ordinary well ordered existence of our lives but in periods of great emergency like the San Francisco fire or the Boston police strike These efficient four-wheeled policemen are called upon to perform every kind of strenuous service from saving would-be suicides to quelling riots and for this reason it is essential that police machines should be dependable and capable of withstanding extremely rough treatment.'

The machines are standard Dodge Brothers touring cars and are equipped with a penetrating siren which is only allowed on police cars

"BARL" EQUIPMENT ORDERED

Every police automobile in Cleveland O, it is suggested should be equipped with toxic gas grenades used to prevent the escape of prisoners during the war with Germany as a weapon in fight against banditry and crime in that city

AUTOMOBILE IS NECESSARY TO BUSINESS

The man who regards the automobile as a luxury cannot consistently ride in a Pullman car

People used to live without trains doctors telephones electric lights or automobiles Who says they are luxuries today?

A vast national building program assures prosperity for the automobile industry and you

The Farm Journal says 2 368 475 passenger cars are owned by farmers

The automobile insures delivery of fresh food free from harm by broiling sun and poisonous flies

The nation's three great interdependent industries—steel railroads automobiles

Fifty million citizens are made happier healthier and better by the automobile

The automobile is as necessary to city life as any other form of transportation

The automobile does not promote waste—it reduces it

Without automobiles city rents would quickly double

Without automobiles many suburban homes would be abandoned

You may safely defy contradiction of this statement No other labor saving device equals the automobile

The automobile ceased to be a luxury and became a necessity fifteen years ago

More than a million cars are needed annually for replacements

The automobile has quadrupled the working time of doctors

The automobile gives employment to hundreds of thousands recreation and useful service to millions

An instrumentality that makes 50 000 000 people healthier wealthier and happier is entitled to respect support and appreciation

MUD SPLASHING CAMPAIGN WINS FAVOR IN PARIS

A campaign against mud splashing by automobiles is bringing good results in Paris Motor cars supplied with anti splash devices are ordered to drive past a long white washed board fence about six feet high along a stretch of exceptionally muddy road It is found that the most successful prevention is a strip of rubber around the edge of the wheel

Engine Firm Starts Building Factories

Charles H Kettering is head of the Highway Engine Company recently organized in Defiance Ohio with a capitalization of $1 500,000 to manufacture motor truck and tractor engines Building operations on the factory's buildings will be started in the spring The company will be identified with the same interests which are at the head of the Defiance Motor Truck Company and the Defiance Machine Works It was originally starte din Detroit. Many prominent Detroiters are associated with Mr Kettering in the company

R C DURANT, who will head the new Durant Motors Corporation on the Pacific Coast

SHOCK PREVENTOR DEALER SELECTED

The James Smith Company with offices at 304 Thirteenth street has been named to distribute the Hood Shock Preventors a California product and known to the motoring public of the Eastbay district Hood who is a Native Son was the inventor of this absorber and his first production brought in many orders from everywhere due to the easy riding qualities it gave to an automobile

We are glad to get this line says Smith because we feel there are many people who have not yet realized what comfort can be derived from such equipment on a car that does not ride as smoothly as it should

Arrangements have been made to handle several other lines of automobile accessories by this company which will be announced in the near future The James Smith Company has a policy of satisfaction to the motorist.

Ammonia Injurious To Paint on Car

Some car owners are using ammonia solution to brighten up the hood when the latter had become dull This is bad practice though the immediate results seem to be good Ammonia destroys the finish and should not be used In fact body makers and varnish concerns give strict instructions to keep the car away from stables and barns so that the ammonia from the manure will not injure the body finish

NEW DURANT CAR TO GET TOUGH TESTS

The initial Durant car will be completed by March 15 but it may be many months later before it is ready for distribution

When the first of the new Durants is ready it will be turned over to R C Durant and Captain E V Rickenbacher as an experimental model and will be given every possible test before offered to the public This was one of the announcements made by Durant Jr at a dinner given to some of his close friends and associates upon his return from New York last Friday evening

In the construction of the Durant the best in materials will be used It is the intention of the Durants to present to the motor buying public a car as mechanically right as it is possible to produce While the materials used may be of the best there may be errors of construction which it will be necessary to overcome Before these can be eliminated they must be discovered

It is for the purpose of discovering these engineering faults that the younger Durant and the famous American ace of aces will take the experimental model out for the most thorough tests it is possible to give a car There are possibly no other men in this country as well qualified to conduct such a series of tests as the two selected by W C Durant

Durant and Rickenbacher are both recognized as among the leading automobile engineers of the country They have driven racing cars on speedway highway and dirt tracks They have toured the country in motor cars of high low and medium price and they have studied motors and carburation on the water the sea and in the air as aviation engineers as well as pilots

There is one thing certain we will not allow the car to go to the public until it is absolutely right In every new automobile there are oversights in engineering and blunders in construction We intend to find these out ourselves and eliminate them before the car goes on the market if it takes three months or three years This was the statement of Durant when he announced that he and Rickenbacher would go East immediately after March 1 to work with W C Durant on the production and development of the new car

Don't Slam Door If Anti-Rattlers Used

Convertible models generally are fitted with patent window anti rattlers in the form of rubber tipped screws which press against the window If these anti rattlers are used for the door windows the owner should be careful not to slam the door when the device is set The result of this will probably be a broken glass It is quite clear that if the screw protrudes out so far that it can touch the pane or its frame if the door is slammed the pane will strike the screw and break It would seem that the safest thing to do is to turn the anti rattler away from the pane before the door is opened, or remember to close the door without slamming it

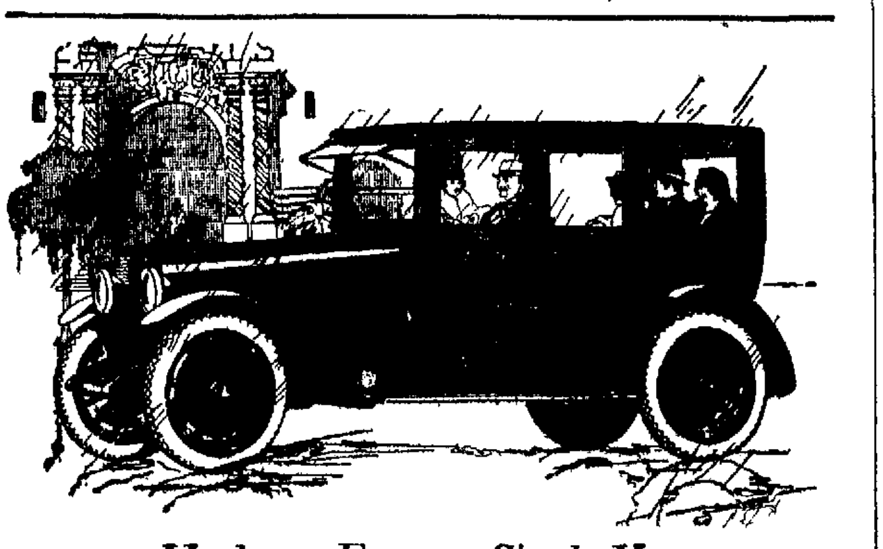
HUDSON



Hudson Enters Sixth Year as Leader of Fine Car Sales

Hudson's title to leadership rests altogether on the satisfaction of those who own the car.

Isn't it significant that five years and more than 100,000 owners have discovered no flaw in that title, as attested by Hudson's continued leadership of fine car sales?

CONTROVERSY STARTS OVER CUP AWARD

conditions of the roads will permit [illegible] the park [illegible] the valley [illegible] after [illegible] Weaver [illegible] party and [illegible] arrived [illegible]

BOTH [illegible] DIFFICULT

[illegible] has [illegible] sides [illegible] Studebaker [illegible] night [illegible] the tough [illegible] and the [illegible] completed by Burt Weaver [illegible] Studebaker [illegible] deserving of all the credit which should [illegible] come to them.

Undoubtedly the Overland driver who made the New Year's trip was not familiar with what is accepted among automobile men as the test of condition to cut out and he chose what to him was the only feasible way to [illegible] into Yosemite in order to be the claimant for the [illegible] which has been the object of [illegible] among the dealers. Smith and his Overland party had their work cut out for them after they reached Bagby station which is on the Yosemite Valley railroad line and about thirty miles distant from El Portal. They had to drive over the railroad ties and trestles until they again encountered the highway at El Portal.

Concerning the question of doubt raised by Levant and Townsley the writer is not prepared to answer except to say that these men apparently haven't much faith in the men who are under them when they infer that their belief is that that Overland did not arrive at the control station [illegible] January 1 from without the National Park bounds as the government record shown by Certificate No. 1 specifically indicates.

CLEARER RULES NECESSARY

Since an issue has arisen it might be well for Curry or anyone else who offers a prize in similar contests to state in unmistakable terms what rules govern the award and thus enable prospective contestants to be fully informed of the conditions required.

The Overland story which was told in detail two weeks ago is no longer news to the motoring public. Suffice to say that Smith the dealer who made the drive on New Year's Day is alert to the possibilities attached to a sensational stunt such as he put through and more will probably be heard from him in connection with other thrillers in which his car will play a part.

The Studebaker battle as it is recounted by Billy Moyle details some interesting incidents. Moyle's story follows:

The Studebaker Light Six with five passengers left Oakland on the afternoon of Tuesday, January 11. The trip through the snow was replete with all the difficulties and experiences that are met with on such a journey. The car used was a stock touring car minus fenders and top and was fitted for its journey by Burt J. Weaver who was in charge. Although the car was without fenders and top it was heavily loaded with food and camp equipment.

TOOK PLENTY OF FOOD

Enough food for five men for a month was taken. This precaution was the result of a previous experience. [illegible] when in taking a Studebaker four cylinder car over the mountains into the valley the party was snow bound for nearly six weeks and although they won the honor of entering the valley first the members of the party were forced to undergo many hardships until food and equipment could be carried to them by dog sled by the rangers.

The party stopped the first night at Modesto. Leaving Modesto early Wednesday morning the car was taken to a point on the Coulterville road near where the trail leaves the road for the lookout on Pilot Peak. Here the party camped for the night in snow that averaged [illegible] foot in depth but the [illegible] had drifted in as high as [illegible] feet.

BUCKS DEEP SNOW

Early the next morning, Thursday, the car was started and bucked the snow for a distance of about six miles arriving at nightfall at Hazel Green. While the car was being taken to Hazel Green [illegible] point three miles [illegible] the men of the party who had been left behind at the last camp being unable to get any further with hand sleds that were used to pack the camp equipment and supplies on account of the heavy snow and steep grade.

Friday morning part of the crew with the car [illegible] Hazel Green to get the car. The others remained to break camp and carry up supplies and equipment to the next camp which proved to be Merced Grove, the point to which the car bucked the snow which was getting deeper every mile.

The next day, Saturday, was the hardest day of the entire trip both for car and men. Long before daylight a member of the party was sent out on foot to examine the road ahead. When he returned he reported that two or three big trees had fallen across the road and that the snow had drifted to a depth of as much as fifteen feet in a few places. The first job was to clear the road of [illegible] by the entire party using saws and axes. The drifts were shoveled away as they were met. Some idea of the slowness of travel at this point may be imagined from the report of members of the party that after working from early morning until after dark the car was taken only one mile beyond Merced Grove.

Chief Ranger Forest S. Townsley who had kept in touch with the party met them and presented Weaver with a covered certificate to the effect that the Studebaker Light Six was the first car to reach the valley over any one of the three roads under its own power.

Miners employed in a coal mine at Freeland, Pa., are carried to and from their work in taxicabs at the employers' expense.

THE STUDEBAKER LIGHT SIX IN FRONT OF SENTINEL ROCK, YOSEMITE VALLEY, an objective reached last Sunday after a five day battle through snow over the Coulterville road, a feat which gave the Studebaker the honor of being the first car to reach the control station in the National Park over one of the three accepted automobile roads.

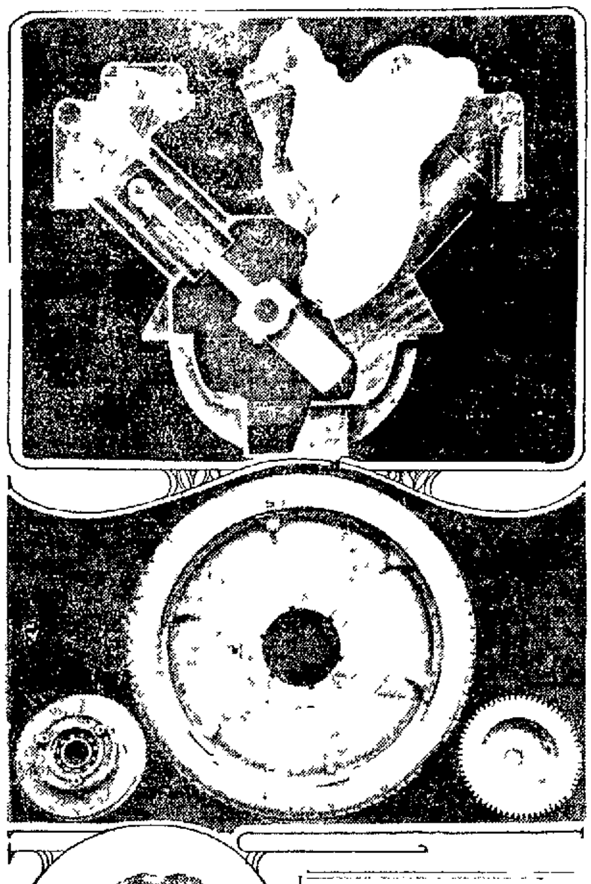
(Top) SECTIONAL VIEW OF V-TYPE TUNISON EIGHT-cylinder engine showing vertical valve action, (center) demountable disc wheels of a new type with Coast Cord tires, made in Oakland. These are two features of a radically new automobile designed and built in Oakland by M C Tunison (below)



Don't let the toot get out of your horn

RADICAL NEW TYPE OF CAR IS INVENTED

A revolution [illegible] mobile has been [illegible] M C Tunison an [illegible] engineer of Oakland His car differs [illegible] from prevailing types [illegible] motive development

Tunison has been [illegible] plane building and [illegible] new car is [illegible] plane feature [illegible] laminated wood enters into the construction of the body [illegible] the new [illegible] eight cylinder V type [illegible] motor weighing only [illegible] pounds is claimed to be capable of [illegible] 90 horsepower at [illegible] revolutions [illegible] minute The cooling system [illegible] of airplane pattern

The first model is [illegible] a 30 000 mile test trip [illegible] which will be away [illegible] men who have seen the [illegible] making

Aside from the engine [illegible] interesting feature of the [illegible] unique spring suspension [illegible] shocks are absorbed by a [illegible] tion of coils and flat springs Two single leaf springs run the [illegible] length of the car and are [illegible] to coil springs at the front [illegible] axles Not only does the designer say this will afford [illegible] riding qualities but he also eliminates squeaking as there [illegible] tion and no parts to require oil or grease

It is a known [illegible] that wood absorbs shocks while steel [illegible] them With this in mind the inventor proceeded to build [illegible] of laminated spruce consisting of [illegible] sections five sixteenths of [illegible] thick glued together with [illegible] waterproof cement under great pressure until a thickness of [illegible] one half inches was attained The frame is additionally strengthened by a heavy truss

The body is constructed of airplane plywood laminated and formed by a special process and covered with Dupont fabricoid which does away with painting and [illegible] lasting and attractive finish

The disc wheels with which the car is equipped are worthy of comment through their novel construction and the manner in which they are demounted By unscrewing the lugs and removing the hub caps the wheels come apart leaving the tire entirely free The operation requires but three or four minutes

NEW SPADE STEERING GEAR

The steering gear presents [illegible] departure from the conventional type It is operated by a worm which comes in contact with two ball bearings that take up the thrust in either direction There is said to be no lost motion and no sliding parts and consequently no slack at the wheel

In the engine Tunison has brought forth what he declares is the biggest surprise He states that he has taken advantage of the lesson learned in aircraft by cutting out all excess weight and unnecessary parts This can be illustrated by comparing the weight of the Tunison motor which is only 270 pounds with the average weight of other engines of the same horsepower something over 800 pounds The Tunison motor is of the eight-cylinder V type with a cylinder bore of two and eleven-sixteenth inches and a stroke of four inches The piston displacement is 181 46 inches The cam shafts are placed on the head blocks and are driven by a train of helical cut gears The valves are set and actuated as in a vertical position a fact never before accomplished in a V type motor The perfect seating of the valves enables the motor to turn over [illegible] 800 revolutions per minute without trouble

The crankshaft is balanced and made of special alloy steel heat treated and hardened Only two main bearings are required as the length of the crankshaft between the bearings is only 10¾ inches Two [illegible] bearings afford exception[illegible] large working surfaces

The starting lighting and ignition systems are of the standard type the different units however [illegible] attached to the front of the [illegible] where they are easily [illegible]

[illegible] of the dry disc type [illegible] is similar to that found in [illegible] cars

SPECIAL OILING SYSTEM

The lubrication system provides [illegible] oil to 11 parts of the motor [illegible] is splendid method [illegible] lubrication that cost of the [illegible] oil The oil is [illegible] through the radiator then [illegible] through the [illegible] pound pressure As it returns to the crankcase [illegible] and pumped [illegible] jet of cold oil [illegible] inch in diameter [illegible] piston cooling [illegible] extent that [illegible] heat is actually [illegible] cylinder walls [illegible] carbon deposits [illegible] the hot spot [illegible] of much piston [illegible] premature firing

[illegible] loading [illegible] principle with a [illegible] ratio of four and one half to [illegible] double universals The [illegible] is built of pressed steel heavily reinforced at the ends Both [illegible] all wheel bearings are fitted with ball bearings and lubricated with fluid oil

Another interesting feature is the fact that while standard automotive equipment [illegible] for a factor of safety of four to one Tunison claims that his car in no instance has a factor of safety of less than ten to one and in some parts the safety factor is as high as [illegible] to 1

My object in producing this car [illegible] Tunison has been to place on the market one that will be free from vibration and noise and easily operated

Here are the outstanding and strikingly different features that it is claimed will distinguish the new California car—the Tunison

Motor—Airplane type eight cylinders developing 90 hp at 3000 revolutions per minute The entire motor weighs only 270 pounds

Frame—Constructed of laminated wood 1½ inches thick supported on each side by a heavy truss

Body—Monocoque airplane type also built in laminated wood

Spring suspension—Combination of coils and flat springs

Steering gear—All sliding parts are eliminated by ball bearings that take up the thrust from all directions

Weight of car The entire car weighs 1?50 pounds

Tool kit—One wrench fits every nut and bolt on the car with the exception of the electrical equipment

Miscellaneous—The builder promises touring car speed up to 7? miles per hour [illegible] miles to the gallon of gasoline and 10 000 miles per set of tires Wheels can be removed and tires replaced in three or four minutes

TRUCKS PRAISED BY U. S. FARMERS

Out of [illegible] farmer truck owners who responded to a questionnaire sent out by the United States department of agriculture 95 per cent believe their motor trucks to be profitable investments according to Lou H Rose Maxwell-Chalmers distributor for Northern California

Over two-thirds of these trucks had not been out of commission a single day when needed during the year covered by the reports says Rose

Saving of time was considered their greatest advantage and poor [illegible] their greatest disadvantage

The average life of a truck is given as six and one-half to seven years mileage [illegible] per 17[illegible] days of use during the year It is significant to note in the report that though these trucks range in size from one half ton to five tons fully two thirds of them are from one to two tons

"Years ago Maxwell engineers foresaw that the most practical all-around truck would be somewhere in this latter class, consequently they concentrated their truck activities on a single sturdy chassis of 1½ ton capacity

RACING ON SPEEDWAYS IS DEFENDED

Among the measures that various solons have announced their intention to bring before the present session of the state legislature is one to abolish speedway racing Although this fact has only come to the attention of a relatively small number of people connected with the automobile industry every one with a true knowledge of conditions who has heard of the proposal has come out [illegible] against any measure that would eliminate speedway racing in this or any other state

When one considers even for a moment how far behind the times we would be today in the matter of our automobiles if it had not been for speedway racing it can at once be seen that the nation is vastly indebted to the racers for their achievements declares J W Milburn San Francisco manager for the Greer Robbins Company Hupmobile distributor for the state who was one of the first to come out in defense of the racing game

IMPROVEMENTS MADE

Without the tests of the early endurance runs dirt track races and speedway battles the modern automobile would not be built as modern as it is today Practically every improvement that has ever been made in an automobile can be traced directly to some breakdown in an early day racing event

Think of the improvements in the motor alone that can be credited to discoveries and adaptations coming from these historic contests The modern brake was evolved in this manner So were the transmission [illegible] differential the springs and every other important part of the completed car

Perhaps more important than any of these were the lessons learned from experiences in these races in the proper assembly of the car the importance of having a frame strong enough to stand all tests and of having a car that would always function properly as a whole in addition to one that possessed faultless individual parts

MORE WORK AHEAD

All this and more has been accomplished through the automobile races of the past and their task is not yet done No plainer proof of this has been furnished than the accomplishments of the past racing season A limit of 183 cubic inches of piston displacement was for the first time in the history of American racing placed on all cars entering sanctioned events

As a result more real progress has been made in showing the possibilities of the small motor than can be fully appreciated for several years to come All Hupmobile owners and dealers should be especially interested in this fact for the Hupmobile motor has exactly the same piston displacement as the racing cars of today and represents the last word in motor construction [illegible] this season

Cross-Country Tour of Autoists May Be Revived

RICHARD KENNERDELL, chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile Association, says that the trans-continental tour may be revived this year, and that it will be for the Glidden, Anderson and A A A trophies No move has been made as yet but promotion, if the tour goes through will be both for makers and private teams of two cars, the makers to be given the first opportunity to enter two cars, and, on the expiration of the time limit set, private entries to the number of two will be accepted Promotion of the event, however, will depend upon the change in conditions after the show

Spud Is Big Help in Repairing Hacksaw

A simple way to put a new end on a hack saw blade would be to stick the saw through a potato The short end projecting through can then be heated in the flame of a blow torch until it becomes red hot When this has been permitted to cool it will be found that the temper has been drawn from the end of the saw and it will be possible to drill a new hole in order to fasten the saw in the frame again The potato protects the covered part of the saw from the action of the heat and in this way preserves the temper of the main portion of the [illegible]—In Motor Boating for January

AUTOMOBILES

Automobile a National Blessing,

It Gives to Age the Happiness of Youth; It Keeps the Family United; It Is Man's Newest and Greatest Servant, Writes Famous Editor

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

The automobile is the machine that gives wings to the human race. It makes man independent of place and multiplies infinitely the time that is his.

The automobile is a National blessing; no longer a luxury in any sense, it is the necessity of life, the fulfilling of one of life's highest ends.

The man who buys his first automobile, or the man who buys his better automobile, gets for himself, his family and his friends that which is an integral part of life itself

In the making of automobiles the United States has taken the first place, and will never lose it.

* * * *

The servant of man, his newest, highest invention, it is the friend and benefactor of the entire family.

The automobile gives to old age the quick motion and happiness of youth.

It gives to childhood the opportunity to associate happily with the people fully grown, the opportunity to share their pleasures and their conversations.

The automobile does that which is, above all, desirable—it keeps the entire family united.

* * * *

The automobile takes the family to the country, to the seaside, to the mountains.

The automobile has demonstrated man's faith in himself and in his genius. And that faith actually has removed mountains, for it brings to the family the mountains or the sea at command.

If you have no automobile, get one.

Buy according to your means, and use according to your needs.

Remember that there is no extravagance in that which gives happiness to so many, that which enables the family and the friends to see and enjoy the earth, that which takes the old people from their exclusion.

Above all, if you possibly can, get an automobile. And if you have one already, get a better.

TIRE CARE IS OUTLINED TO CUT UPKEEP

Ask [illegible] motorist [illegible] what is the biggest item in his list of running costs and the chances are that he will answer "Tires." And it undoubtedly is true. Tires are expensive in first cost [illegible] they are carefully [illegible] return [illegible] an extra amount to their [illegible] undue wear could be eliminated if the car owner [illegible] some [illegible] about his tires and how to care for them.

In the first place the greatest cause of tire failure is improper inflation. The tendency of the average motorist is to run his tires soft. He fails to inflate to the proper pressure. In these circumstances the tire flattens out more than was intended, the side wall, the weakest part of the casing, is called upon to bear more weight than they were ever intended to [illegible] disastrous result. Without the due air pressure [illegible] sort of flexing motion [illegible] by which the various layers of rubber and fabric are loosened and the tire goes to pieces. Tire makers have in recent years continued to [illegible] on teaching owners the danger of under inflation and they have accomplished much, but in spite of their efforts improper inflation is still the great cause of premature tire failure.

SHOULD KNOW PRESSURE

The car owner should know just what pressure is demanded by the size tires he is using and then, providing himself with a tire gauge, he should religiously keep them at the indicated mark.

There is another way of producing just the same effect as under inflation in spite of the fact that the tire has been really inflated to the proper mark, and that is by overloading. Suppose for instance that a tire has been inflated to its proper pressure and [illegible] it is designed to carry 1000 pounds [illegible] of that load, however, the owner proceeds to put 1100 pounds on the [illegible] as if it were carrying its normal load with under inflation. This trouble is more common than might be imagined, for it occurs whenever a car owner piles on [illegible] persons on board than his vehicle was intended to carry. A couple of extra passengers means an added weight of three hundred pounds or more to the [illegible]. If extra weight is to be carried habitually the owner should increase the pressure in his tires to care for the added impost.

It must be remembered, too, that all tires of a given size are not exactly the same in strength. One manufacturer may give his product extra fabric and rubber to make the casing stronger than the normal tire. The car owner gradually finds the tire that best serves his purpose and individual conditions will largely rule here.

REPAIR ALL CUTS

It is a great mistake to allow cuts in the tire tread to remain unrepaired. A small tread cut may easily later on produce a bad blowout. In the construction of the tire the tread is intended as a protector for the body, the fabric underneath. When the tread suffers a cut so much of the protector is removed and sand, mud, water and other inimical agents are able to reach the carcass of the casing instead of being fended off by the resilient rubber outer covering. While the dirt and sand and mud work their way along separating the rubber from the fabric the water rots the cotton and the result is a ruined casing within measurable time.

The owner who desires to reduce his tire expenditure to the reasonable minimum will make a point of giving all his tires a weekly inspection. He will repair all cuts, even small ones, within a day or two of their appearance. For small cuts, those up to half an inch, say, a tread filler of some sort may be used. For the longer cuts, especially when the fabric is laid bare, vulcanizing is essential.

Every cut in the tread should be thoroughly cleaned out before being repaired. A cloth soaked in gasoline may be used for wiping out the cut and then a bit of cloth on the end of a screwdriver may be used for removing any dirt lurking inside. Next a coat of cement should be applied to the sides and bottom of the cut. After this has dried a second coat should be applied and when this is thoroughly dry, tire filler should be inserted. A piece of the filler may be worked into the cut with the blade of a knife, the mass being leveled off with the surface of the cut. If the tire has to be used immediately, a small piece of cloth or paper should be cemented over the filler so that it will not pick up dirt from the road.

It is now possible to get tire repair kits from various manufacturers, included in which are tire gauge, cement, patches, filler, inside and outside blowout boots, talc, etc. Every car should carry one of these kits as regular equipment. Constant care is the price of tire efficiency.

UNDER INFLATION

In addition to under-inflation misalignment of wheels causes excessive wear. When the wheels are not running true, a scraping motion is set up which quickly tears the tread and ruins the casing. The harsh application of brakes is a potent source of wear in the rear tires. Jamming on the brakes [illegible] wheels and the tires are dragged over the surface of the road instead of rolling over it. Care should be taken to use enough talc on the inner tube to keep it from sticking to the casing, but too much of this powder is likely to form in balls or ridges and cause trouble. Tires should be removed from the rims once in six months anyway and a coating of graphite be applied to the rims. Oil is a deadly enemy of rubber and the tires must be kept carefully out of puddles on the garage floor. This is where a set of jacks comes in handy.

It often happens that a hurriedly inserted flap folds and extends under the bead, which, being strained, causes the side wall to break, giving every appearance of a rim cut.

GO CAREFUL IN RAIN, IS ADVICE

"The fellow who never uses skid chains, that always seems to be the one to [illegible] when the highway is wet, while the fellow who always puts his chains on is the one who is more inclined to take things slow and easy," comments Max A[illegible], [illegible] dealer in high grade used cars in San Francisco.

"This may seem paradoxical, but the psychology behind it is very simple. The man who uses skid chains naturally is careful, while the man who never thinks of chains never thinks of taking the precaution to drive slowly as a general rule. Hence the seeming paradox.

"Always take skid chains with you when it looks like rain and take time to put them on or have them put on when it starts to rain. Should you by any chance get caught in a storm without them, then, if ever, is the time to take things slow and easy."

Ford May Turn Out New Six Cylinder Car

(Special to The TRIBUNE)

DETROIT, Jan. 22.—"According to rumors which are persistently passed around here, there is no indication as to when the Ford plant will reopen in Detroit." The foregoing is a statement made by J. Ed Spooner, veteran writer on motor topics, who also declares that the gossips say Ford may dispose of his big Highland Park plant and start at a very early date the manufacture of a new six-cylinder model in his River Rouge plant.

'FIVE OF KIND' BUY SAME MAKE

An interesting [illegible] story [illegible] this city from the Mexican border regarding the unanimous [illegible] of four aerial patrol fliers when it came to buying automobiles.

The story is passed along by J. M. Stewart, San Francisco manager for the Willys-Overland [illegible] company, distributor of the Willys-Knight and Overland cars.

Four officers and [illegible] commissioned officer in the flight [illegible] Aero Squadron stationed at Nogales, Arizona, decided to purchase cars to take them to and from the flying field and aid in making quick trips if a flying machine is stalled while on duty patrol duty. Every one of them came back to camp with an Overland, and the natives of Nogales have been wondering if the government has selected that car as standard equipment for the [illegible].

LUBRICATION POINTS TOLD BY EXPERT

W. A. S[illegible] gives the following list of necessary lubrication points for the instruction of all motorists. Each point named requires constant lubrication and the motorists should be familiar with them:

Front spring front shackle, [illegible] steering knuckle, [illegible] fan, water pump, front spring rear shackles, front spring hangers, steering gear, [illegible] clutch bearings, retainer, clutch case, transmission case, pedal shaft, hand brake shaft, brake cam shaft, front steering gear shaft, universal joint, [illegible] shafts outer ends, [illegible] shaft, rear springs front shackles, brake equalizer, universal joint, rear spring front shackles, brake equalizer, universal joint, rear wheel hubs, driving axle outer bearings, brake cam shafts, [illegible] rear spring shackle.

Depending on [illegible] and make, automobiles have from [illegible] to [illegible] points requiring regular lubrication. Only in Alemite equipped cars can these all be lubricated within a few minutes and without dirt, greasiness or discomfort of any kind to the motorist who attends to the job, advises Doyle.

The drudgery of bearing lubrication is ended when the Alemite ball check nipples and extensions replace the old style grease cups. Then all that has to be done is to snap on the flexible steel coupling to the nipple and give a turn or two to the Alemite compressor handle. The old, dirty grease is forced out and a new supply is forced in under tremendous and irresistible pressure.

Airplane Company Brings Patent Suits

The Curtiss Airplane and Motor Corporation has brought two patent infringement suits in the United States District Court against Handley Page Ltd. and the Airplane Disposal Company, another English corporation. Ten patents are involved in the litigation, which is based on efforts of the defendants to sell in this country surplus war planes which were purchased from the British government.

MOTOR SAFETY GROWS DAILY, EXHIBITS SHOW

The progress of science in making motoring safe alike for those who motor and those who don't is vividly demonstrated in the hundreds of improved appliances for the use of car owners which are displayed at the great Automotive Equipment Exposition now attracting the attention of motorists to the Civic Auditorium.

"It is remarkable in how many ways the safety of the motorist and his comfort are looked after in the present day," [illegible] comments William H. [illegible], president of the Burgess Auto Specialty Company, which has one of the attractive exhibits on display at the equipment show.

"A few years ago the idea of wind deflectors was an improvement not yet dreamed of, while today wind deflectors are an accepted fact."

LIFTING TIRES IS COMMON OFFENSE

The police records of a dozen cities show it to be a fact that nine out of every ten automobile thieves start out through the comparatively petty offense of lifting tires. From stealing tires they graduate to the more advanced rank of automobile thieves.

"Even in the embryo, as it were, the auto thief is responsible for thousands of dollars of losses in tires stolen every year from each of our great cities," points out Frank Loss, distributor for Brunswick tires.

"It is remarkable how many motorists take the trouble to lock their cars and in many cases use additional safety precautions to protect, and yet do not think it out of the way to leave their spare tires unprotected by lock or safety device of any kind. It is no wonder they [illegible] to their cars frequently to find the tire or tires gone.

"Tires are expensive things to lose and cannot be recovered except in rare cases, while the chances are now greatly in favor of a man's recovering his stolen automobile. This explains why we are advising all Brunswick users and all other motorists to protect their tires from theft."

CHILDREN TO BE TAUGHT SAFETY LAW

Even the man in the city who has lived so long in the city that he did not know trees from other kinds of telephone poles must have heard the timeworn axiom, "As the twig is bent so grows the tree."

"There's a lot of truth in that old proverb and many are the directions in which it may be applied. That explains why so many educational campaigns start where they should—with the little children.

"The latest suggestion in this line is to show the children the dangers incident to modern traffic conditions and how to watch out for them by teaching the youngsters traffic cop games.

"This idea has been worked out to advantage in New York and in several other large eastern cities," comments Charles Burman, distributor for the Oakland Sensible Six. Burman sees no reason why such a system should not be tried out in the schools and playgrounds of Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley.

"One of the older boys is taught to take the part of the traffic officer. He escorts the smaller children from one side of the street to the other, at first in the wake of a real bluecoat and later all by himself.

"In this way the children are impressed with the necessity for crossing busy streets in groups—always on the alert for approaching cars. Likewise they are taught to wait and watch for the stop and go signals and thus to cross only at the correct times.

"Such an educational campaign, if handled properly, would effectively lessen the number of automobile accidents in which children are hurt and would make motoring safer and less nerve-racking both to drivers and the children on the streets. It should be taken up and put into execution by the proper school authorities of the city."

HOW SPARK PLUGS BECOME FOUL

When spark plugs habitually become fouled with oil and soot it is a good plan to investigate and see whether they may not be projecting too far into the combustion chamber particularly when they are located in either one or the other of the valve pockets If they are screwed into the valve port caps the removal of the caps with the plugs in them will be the best way to determine the condition The points of the outer end of the shell should extend very little beyond the inner faces of the valve caps Anyway the adjustments to the carburetor or lubricating system should be made to prevent excessive gas or oil feed

Windshield Bracing Should Be Firm

On many makes of car the windshield is held in place by steel arms which protrude through the cowl and are fastened on the under side by a nut and lock nut Sometimes these nuts work loose from the vibration present with the result that the shield is allowed to move slightly The first evidence of this is seen in cracked finish in the vicinity of the windshield supports In making the necessary periodic inspection for loose nuts and bolts these windshield supports should not be forgotten

DEALER TO VISIT EASTERN FACTORY

Last Tuesday Philip S Cole president of the Haynes Auto Sales company left for Kokomo Ind where he will confer with executives of the Haynes factory

Cole has [illegible] matters of importance to take up with the factory among them the increase of allotments for the coming year to meet the auto car shortage which is predicted by both manufacturer and distributor Cole is well known at the Kokomo plant having made numerous visits in the past and whatever the nature of his missions has seldom encountered any difficulty in bringing the factory executives around to his point of view

After spending some time in Kokomo Cole will leave for the Chicago Auto Show in company with A G Seiberling He expects to return to San Francisco in time to apply what new ideas he may gather at the Eastern exposition to the staging of the Haynes display in the San Francisco show

PENN BUILDS BETTER ROADS

Pennsylvania during the 1920 construction season built approximately 410 miles of concrete road way 18 feet in width This is the world's record for one season of this type of highway

SHORTAGE OF MOTORS NOW IS PREDICTED

Will there be a [illegible] of automobiles this year

Had this question been asked a few months ago when manufacturers [illegible] were announcing price reductions it would probably have been met with an emphatic No Now however it is becoming a question that is making the motor car dealer to [illegible] nights for the rumor that there will be an acute shortage of motor cars during the big spring selling season of March April and May has become more than a rumor it's a fact

Here is what an automobile man Chas H Burman Oakland dealer has to say on the subject

A [illegible] of the automotive industry [illegible] in the United States can only be made after a careful study of each year In view of that [illegible] the inception of the industry If one will take the time to make such a study he will find that since 191[illegible] the demand for automobiles has exceeded production But what will surprise him even more is the fact that during the last few months the number of cars [illegible] junked has actually exceeded the number of cars manufactured

The first big demand for motor vehicles this year as in the past will be the demand resulting from the replacement of cars The demand for motor car vehicles from new buyers is just beginning to show itself and is of course an unknown quantity However the experience of the past is the only means of arriving at a reasonable conclusion Prospective buyers would do well to consider these figures before deciding to wait for further price reductions

ADJUSTMENT OF TAPPET NEEDED

There occasionally develops in an engine normally quiet in operation a tapping of one or two of the valve tappets For quiet operation of the tappets there must not be severe impact between tappet and valve stem If the tappet is moving fast before it commences to lift the valve the impact will be severe and there will be noise The tappet should be adjusted so as very nearly to touch the valve stem When the engine is hot at the end of a run (the proper time to make adjustments) the tappet should be adjusted so that it just touches the valve stem The valve being hot will not expand any more and when the tappet is adjusted in this way very good result will be obtained

Mack TRUCKS

Who's Behind the Truck You Buy ?

The present is the most logical time ever known to consider seriously the answer to that question.

There are more "orphan" trucks today than ever before. If you take a chance on one of these—where will you get Replacement Parts; where will you get Service; what will be the Resale Value.

Why try to defy Fate? It can't be done.

There are a few high-grade, manufactured motor trucks on the market and the purchase of any one of these makes from a reputable dealer is good business, but leave all others alone or you'll burn your fingers.

We are prepared to prove to You that of the few "good" trucks MACK is BEST.

GOOD DRIVING HAS ROLE IN RECORD RUN

The wonderful record of 29 hours and 1 minutes made by the Buick coupe between San Francisco and Portland was saved by just one inch. That is how close the record run came to a disastrous end near Castella.

As the complete details of the dash which beat the Shasta Limited's time 44 minutes were told last week by the daring drivers Claude A. McGee and Roy F. Skinner it became known that some extremely good brake and quick work on the part of McGee who was at the wheel prevented the Buick from crashing into a boulder as large as itself on a sharp turn. The road had been entirely blocked by a landslide and the only way to avoid a wreck was to stop. And the Buick was stopped with the front of the machine just one inch from the rock.

McGEE TELLS STORY

"I slammed on everything I had," McGee told R. T. Thompson general manager of the Howard Automobile company, "and hoped for the best. We were traveling about 40 miles an hour when we came around the sharp turn and saw the narrow road ahead blocked. The coupe handled beautifully in the pinch and I made the quickest stop of my life. We were forced to back up quite a distance before we found a place where we could make a detour around the slides."

McGee in setting the record probably established another mark for a speedy run—he stopped several times to take pictures. He is as expert with a camera as he is at the wheel and just as soon as it was light enough Saturday morning he began shooting the scenery. "The stars were shining yet when McGee stopped for the first picture. I thought that the speed had gone to his head," Skinner later said.

SNOW ENCOUNTERED

"At Hornbrook we started to climb the Siskiyous," said McGee. "At this point we ran into snow and also concrete pavement, but a short distance on the snow had become so deep the Oregon state highways engineers had found it necessary to open up a track wide enough for one car. The track was well cleared but not absolutely straight. At the speed we were traveling it was impossible to swing through the correct path, so we went straight through and took all the kinks out of the path for them.

"We turned out our headlights near the summit of the Siskiyous and I think the sunrise was the most beautiful sight I ever have seen. The whole country was covered with snow and sleet and everywhere we looked it was just like a gigantic Christmas card in colors with imitation snow. Every tree and rock in its white coating glistened in the morning light.

"At Grants Pass the Buick crew was informed that no car had gone over Smith's Hill under its own power in the last thirty days. In the summer time when the road is in the best of shape it is a hard second gear pull.

"At this time we found the hill so deep in mud that the front and rear axles drug the entire distance," said McGee. "We declined the offer of the man awaiting with the team to help out motorists. 'You can start but I'll get you yet,' he said. But we dug in and went through although at times the mud was rolling over the front axle. Despite this very hard pull the motor never showed any signs of heating. On the entire trip we did not put any additional water in the radiator for the motor kept cool at all times."

MUDDY ROADS CONQUERED

McGee has been driving Buicks of various models for many years in difficult road trips but he says that he never has found any that performed as well as did the 1921 Buick coupe. "Despite our speed and the terrible bumpiness of the frozen mud roads at places we rode in absolute comfort all the way," he said, "and when we arrived in Portland there was not one body squeak that had developed in the car."

Here is the schedule that was made by the Buick in creating the new record:

Place	Mileage	Time
San Francisco	0	4 2 p m Fr
Sausalito	0	5 01
Napa	46	6
Dixon	87	1
Willows	175	10 1
Corning	[illegible]	11 0

Grants Pass	456	9 3
Roseburg	541	1 12 p m

Portland	709	9 8

From Roseburg into Portland the trip was made through rain.

Better Times in Auto Industry Seen

Gray and Davis has received several releases from western automobile manufacturers for equipment ordered and on which deliveries had been postponed in sufficient volume to make unlikely further curtailment at the Cambridge, Mass., plant. This is regarded as a straw which may point the way toward better times in the motor industry. The adjustment with the government which has been pending since the armistice has finally been made and Gray & Davis will receive something over $100,000 in settlement of its claims.

HOW TRAVEL HAS GROWN

With the passing of the horse-drawn vehicles and mud roads and the growing popularity of the automobile and the modern highway the range of travel has increased from 10 to 150 miles per day.

NEW MOTOR FOR RACING IS SUCCESS

Development of the small piston displacement motor was the outstanding feature of the 1920 automobile racing season. Startling in its revelations of speed and stamina, its decrease in weight permitting lighter chassis, the 183 cubic inch motor developed on the country's race tracks during the year so seriously engaged the attention of automotive engineers that it may have a far reaching effect on the design of passenger cars and motor trucks in the future.

Conceived in the minds of automotive engineers late in 1919 but first actually tested in the Beverly Hills race at Los Angeles as 1920 was dawning, these small motors swept triumphantly through a strenuous year on board tracks and in road races piling up remarkable records for speed and sturdiness. Although possessing but six cubic inches more piston displacement than the Ford motor these small engines equaled and exceeded all records made by the ponderous racing cars of recent years even though the juggernauts were powered by engines of more than 400 cubic inches displacement.

All records for stamina have been exceeded by the 183 cubic inch motors. This was demonstrated most sensationally in the 25 mile road race at Elgin, Ill., in August when out of nine cars to face the starter all finished, eight making non stop runs without mechanical or tire troubles of any description. Gaston Chevrolet was forced to stop because of a clogged gasoline line but that cannot be counted as a real mechanical defect. This record for continuous running is without parallel in racing annals.

MAKES HIGH SPEEDS

As further evidence of the remarkable staying powers of the small type motor in five consecutive races of the most gruelling character over distances of at least 50 miles at average speeds of more than ninety five miles an hour, not one hood of the four Duesenberg cars was raised—truly astounding performance.

So successful has been the small motor that the 183 cubic inch type may be used by many passenger car and motor truck manufacturers. The lighter weight engine allows decrease in weight throughout. These motors have equal speed and stamina and are much more economical in fuel consumption. Even in racing at high speeds these motors average about eleven miles per gallon of gasoline.

All future races will be by cars of the 183 cubic inch displacement type. Amazed by the success of these cars in the International Sweepstakes at Indianapolis on Memorial day foreign manufacturers decided that the Grand Prix should be run by cars of the same engine specifications and similar rules have been promulgated for the Targo Florio in Italy, races at the famous Brooklands tracks in England and also in Sicily.

The 1920 racing season in the United States saw the late Gaston Chevrolet crowned king of the speedway. The little French driver never lived to know of his accomplishment, as he was killed on the 150th lap of the Thanksgiving Day race at the Beverly Hills race in Los Angeles when his Frontenac collided with Eddie O'Donnell's Duesenberg snuffing out the lives of O'Donnell and his mechanician, Lyall. Chevrolet practically won the title by his victory at Indianapolis for which he received 1000 points toward the A. A. A. driving championship. He was placed in but one other race during the year, taking 4th at the June Uniontown, Pa., race making his year total 1090.

MILTON HEAVY POINT WINNER

Tommy Milton of 156 miles an hour fame was runner up with 930 points to his credit. In number of victories Milton led with firsts at Tacoma, Uniontown and a third at Indianapolis.

Smiling Jimmy Murphy was a close third in titular honors with 580 points to his score. Ralph De Palma finished fourth with 40[illegible], his chances of being crowned premier driver fading with his bad luck at Indianapolis when he lost after being far in the lead.

Roscoe Sarles finished the season sensationally by winning the Thanksgiving Day race at Los Angeles in his Duesenberg mount, at the same time equaling the fastest time of the year by running 250 miles at an average speed of 103.5 miles an hour. The record had been previously held by Jimmy Murphy on the same track.

Gene Thomas, veteran French driver, was sixth with 320. Joe Thomas seventh [illegible]. Ralph Mulford eighth one point behind. Eddie Hearne ninth with 310 and Eddie Miller, new Duesenberg driver, tenth with 00 points.

STAR FREE FROM ACCIDENTS

With the exception of the lamentable fatality on Thanksgiving at Los Angeles the racing season was singularly free from accidents. Wade Morton and his mechanician were slightly injured in the June Uniontown classic when the Meteor fell into a hole torn in the board track while Joe Thomas and Arthur Chevrolet were bruised and cut while practicing for the Elgin and Indianapolis races respectively.

A resume of the 1920 season would not be complete without some reference to the remarkable performance of tires. With the advent of smaller motors and lighter cars together with faster tracks at Uniontown, Beverly Hills and Fresno, Cal., average speeds increased greatly. This called for added stamina from tires. Non stop runs were made at Indianapolis, both Uniontown races, Tacoma, Fresno and Beverly Hills giving strong evidence to the fact that tire manufacturers have more than kept pace with the increased demand for speed. For a racing car to go through an entire race at speeds up to and exceeding 100 miles an hour without a tire change is to the everlasting credit of our manufacturer. Such performances demonstrate the superiority of American tire craftsmanship for such records are unheard of abroad.

PUBLIC INTEREST GROWS

The recent racing season saw no waning interest on the part of the public toward automobile racing. At Indianapolis 120,000 people attended the greatest throng ever passing through the turnstiles for any similar classic in this country. At Beverly Hills on Thanksgiving day 65,000 crowded stands and infield. 75,000 saw the Elgin road race while 35,000 spectators stormed the Uniontown track at both races.

The last twelve months saw the passing of the famous Sheepshead Bay track and the Cincinnati Speedway but saw the addition of the Beverly Hills course at Los Angeles and the new track at Fresno. Evidently racing has lost no popularity with the public but the scene of contests is gradually shifting toward the Pacific Coast where uniform weather conditions insure against financial loss.

The new year looms large as a banner racing season. Plans are under way for races on all American tracks used in 1920 while foreign racing will receive an impetus never before attained. For the first time since 1914 racing will be resumed abroad in practically every European country except Germany. Many of the crack American pilots will participate in the Grand Prix while the cream of foreign stars will again be at Indianapolis in May.

WILL DE PALMA SHAKE JINX?

Ralph De Palma has recently returned from France with a new Ballot car with which he hopes to shake the jinx that has pursued him on American tracks for several years. The veteran driver, whose popularity ranks second to none, retains his wonderful driving skill and if he can get a car that will finish, he will get more than one checkered flag this year.

Andre Boillot, brother of the famous Georges who was killed in the war, will be seen at the wheel of a Sunbeam at the International race in Indianapolis next May. It is also rumored that Jules Goux and Jean Chassagne will again pilot Peugeots.

Among the American drivers Roscoe Sarles will probably be heard from now that he is a member of the sturdy Duesenberg team. Jimmy Murphy has developed so rapidly in the last year that he will hotly contest every race. Eddie Miller, former Duesenberg mechanic who with only two races for experience ran second to Sarles in the last Los Angeles race, will undoubtedly be heard from.

WHAT WILL CHEVROLET DO?

What can be expected from the Monroe Frontenac team now that Gaston Chevrolet has passed on is uncertain. Louis Chevrolet, designer and manager of the team, has been deeply affected by the death of his brother and may decide to abandon the game.

If the wonderful developments brought out by speedway racing are considered together with the popularity of the sport with the public 1921 promises to see automobile racing reaching new heights.

"Hunch" Gives Writer Success

Six Auto Stories Sold in Year

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 15.—Two years ago an automobile salesman—today one of the country's foremost story writers and the man behind half a dozen big motion picture plays.

That's the story of Byron Morgan, whose rise in fiction and motion pictures has been the most rapid on record.

And here's the simple hunch that carried this young man from an average salary and a daily grind to big checks and a writing den in his home in the Hollywood foothills.

He put down on paper the knowledge he had of the job at which he earned a living. With this he mixed a rare ability to plot.

Had Morgan been a clerk in a bank and applied his hunch he would have written of banks and bankers and if a bookkeeper in a laundry he would have written laundry stories. But he knew autos and the auto racing game so he wrote about them.

In one year this young man wrote and sold six automobile stories. He sold his first three stories all in a lump to one of the leading magazines. These were "The Junkpile Sweepstakes," "The Undertakers Handicap" and "The Roaring Road."

Then he got a hunch that nobody was writing about motor trucks so he wrote "The Hippopotamus Parade." He followed with "Second Hand Ghosts," and "The Bear Trap." These six stories are now published in one book called "The Roaring Road."

Morgan's stories were quickly taken up by the Famous Players-Lasky Company and he turned them into the big picture plays "Excuse My Dust" and "What's Your Hurry," starring Wallace Reid.

Morgan's stories were of how quickly people who look upon their daily job as just grind could turn it into good money. "Many who try fiction write on subjects with which they are not familiar. I think it is good to write about the thing you know the most about."

TIRE CRAFT TO GO TO THEATER THURSDAY NIGHT

The tire craft of the Alameda County Automobile Trade association will guarantee mileage on your vocal cords at their theater party at the Fulton theater next Thursday night.

The men who handle tires in the Eastbay district are going to the Fulton in a body. They have sold many tickets for the big event. There will be many special stunts for the tire men and all who attend can be assured of a good time.

These periodical gatherings of the various crafts of the automobile industry go a long ways to make closer cooperation in the trade and to eliminate bad feeling.

These men attend in a body, bring their friends and have a lot of fun.

Danger in Warming Up Thickened Oil

A lubricating oil that does not have a sufficiently low cold test when left standing over night during our cold spells will congeal or thicken, claims J. A. Williamson of the Standard Oil company.

Thickened oil will not splash or flow freely until it has been warmed up by running the motor for some time and during this warming up period there is the danger of excessive wear on piston rings, cylinder walls, bearings and frictional surfaces.

Wheel Works to Have Busy Season

J. A. Young, well known through his connection with the J. A. Young Industries of Detroit, has acquired a substantial interest in the Mott Wheel Works of Jackson, Mich., and will become active in the company's management. The Mott company is getting plans under way to manufacture on a large scale its Rubsam-Mott steel felloe and automobile rim which will be featured as its chief products.

HEART TALK BY BATTERY TO OWNERS

Clark Nowak of the Oakland Battery Company, local Eveready Battery distributors, in a humorous mood last week worked up this story introducing the reader to the grief of a storage battery. The yarn is a signed one.

BY A STORAGE BATTERY

The starting, lighting and ignition system of your car is so important to your comfort that I think that it is up to you to hear my story.

Compare me with a baggage porter. He needs two things to do the work he is paid for—good strong muscles and lots of energy. I've had a hand like a ham and a punch like a thunderbolt.

I'm built like him—my skeleton can stand baggage smashing tactics. My plates are strong antimony lead, my jars and separators are built to take a wallop.

Now about my punch. Forget all the technical stuff and remember it this way. In three seconds on an average, that it takes me to start your engine I do as much work as a porter does when he hoists 500 pounds of trunks up five feet into a baggage car. How about that for muscle?

POWER GENERATED

How do I generate all this power? That's simple sir. It sounds complicated when the technical sharps get to babbling about atoms and ions but there is nothing to it.

I have inside of me two kinds of ribbed plates filled with paste. One kind of plate has spongy lead paste, the other lead oxide, and are arranged alternately with separators to keep them from short circuiting. Then comes the big drink of fire water—electrolite or acid.

When you switch me on the electrolite in my tummy begins to bite the paste like everything. Naturally I get excited, but instead of profane language I give

STUDEBAKER
LIGHT SIX
First Into Yosemite

'World's Greatest Light Six' Proves Title

In a terrific test of its sturdiness, power and reliability, the new Studebaker Light Six has again proved the right to its title—"The World's Greatest Light Six Automobile"—by fighting its way over steep mountain roads, through snow that at times was many feet deep, into Yosemite National Park, winning the honor of being the first car to drive into the famous valley this year.

For five days, from early morning until late at night the Studebaker Light Six bucked the snow. Never once did it falter. Never once in the grueling test did it show signs of weakness. Battling like the thoroughbred it is this new and greater Studebaker fought for and kept its title.

Leaving San Francisco on January 11 the Studebaker Light Six arrived in Yosemite Valley on January 16 via the snow-covered Coulterville road, performing a feat that by many was deemed impossible.

The Mutual Creameries Completes Their Main Plant in East Oakland

The development of the Mutual Creameries from one small establishment dealing in milk at retail to an organization operating fourteen establishments in different parts of the Eastbay district has been one of the unusual cases of trade building of the past year

The main creamery and plant of the Mutual Creameries has just been completed and equipped on East Fourteenth street in Melrose This is a modern and complete plant for handling milk and milk products and has been constructed upon the most approved plans and finished with the best of machinery and storage facilities From this point is operated fourteen different retailing establishments in all parts of Oakland and the Eastbay district.

The Mutual Creameries is a corporation headed by Emil A. Hagstrom its founder It is a mutual organization along the lines of many cooperative buying and retailing organizations of the present day Hagstrom began by buying his milk in wholesale lots and at wholesale prices dividing the jobbing profit with the producer and his organization The milk is then delivered to the different branches and this is the only delivery made It is sold direct to the consumers on the cash and carry plan A small line of standard groceries is carried by each store

POOR SERVICE IS CAUSE OF COMPLAINT

In the period from July 1 1919 to June 30 1920 the Railroad Commission received 2667 informal complaints against all classes of utilities says the report of the commission just forwarded to the governor An analysis of these complaints reveals that poor service by the utilities is the source of more dissatisfaction among consumers than rates

The informal complaints based on rates aggregated but 487 out of the total of 2613 Of these 108 were directed against telephone and telegraph rates 104 against electric 99 against water 12 against gas 18 against auto stages and truck lines Sixty two rate complaints were directed against steam railroads and 10 against electric lines Remaining rate complaints were directed against steam heat water carriers warehouses express companies cold storage plants and wharves The informal complaints filed under the head of service totaled 1053 These compl[illegible] every class of utility telephone and telegraph companies leading with 361 complaints Water companies were next with 2[illegible] and electric companies third with 170 The informal service complaints against gas companies totaled [illegible]7 and 70 were registered against auto stages and truck lines Forty nine persons registered complaints against steam railroad service and 3[illegible] against electric railroads Installations extensions and cancellations which were the source of [illegible]04 informal complaints could well be classed under the service heading They were the cause of 194 complaints against electric companies 193 against telephone and [illegible] water companies and 79 against gas companies

A recapitulation shows that where 497 informal complaints were based on the rates fixed by the commission 1,093 were the result of dissatisfaction with service including installations extensions and cancellations

According to the records for the year 751 informal complaints were registered against telephone and telegraph utilities The informal complaints against electric companies totaled 537 and water companies 471 The gas companies were informally complained against 2[illegible] times and steam railroads 18[illegible] There were only 31 complaints [illegible] against electric [illegible]

APARTMENTS MEETING THE HOME QUESTION

Although those best posted on the subject of building are generally of the opinion that no appreciable reduction in the cost of materials or labor is to be expected in the immediate future keen interest was aroused among the members of the Oakland Real Estate Board by the announcement made by one of its members that a material reduction in the cost of apartment house construction has just been made and that a contract has been let to a big San Francisco concern for the erection of a 100 room apartment house in Oakland at $102 per room This figure when compared with estimates of from $1,00 to $1 00 per room for similar construction which obtained during the past twenty months indicates a probable prompt revival of housing construction in this community

A survey of rental accommodations made by the United States Department of Labor recently supports con[illegible] by the Oakland Real Estate Board to the effect that apartment houses and flats are the only satisfactory answer to the housing problem confronting the wage earner or small salaried man under existing conditions of high rental schedule and in view of the fact that such schedules are likely to continue for some years to come

Those best informed on such a subject are convinced that the present rental schedules will continue until such time as activity in residence construction has supplied the existing deficiency in housing accommodations to meet the demand of the law of supply and demand and utility is the basis on which all investigations are conducted with the result that in nearly every case awards by the commission are accepted with affirmative comment and frequently freely expressed gratification by both parties to the dispute The records of the gas and electric division show that of the 943 complaints filed 648 were adjusted in favor of the consumer and 295 in favor of the utilities The percentage of complaints per each 1000 gas and electric consumers taking the 18 largest utilities ranges from 25 to 0 07

CAR LOADS OF TREES GO FROM NILES

The California Nursery at Niles is finding itself swamped with spring orders The lateness of the season has made it possible to plant long after the ordinary date and purchases are being made in car load lots From four to six car loads of plants and trees are leaving Niles daily for all parts of the United States Canada and Mexico Five car loads of rose plants alone left in one shipment last week for the east

The demand at the present time is largely for ornamental trees and plants for garden and park use and for this variety of stuff there has been an unprecedented call

Superintendent Campbell says that he has never seen such a demand for trees and shrubs that produce colored berries Home owners he says are planting permanent gardens and are using large numbers of shrubs that have bright colored berries to furnish color for the gardens

The east is making large demands upon this nursery for rose plants which develop to great perfection at Niles

The remarkable feature of fruit tree shipments has been the demand for grape stock In spite of the prohibition amendment the nursery has been stripped of every bit of grape stock that they had An enormous acreage has been planted to grapes in this state this year because of the high prices received

The demand for fruit trees has also been enormous particularly for such trees as produce canning fruit This demand is attributed to the fact that so many canneries and preserving plants have been erected of late insuring a market for all fruits that can be preserved in any way

The opening of the famous grounds of the nursery to visitors has resulted in hundreds of people inspecting the gardens and growing houses particularly on Sunday President Roeding has inaugurated a policy of inviting visitors and this invitation has been generally accepted particularly by autoists

INVESTORS FROM THE SOUTHLAND

The contention of real estate dealers that Oakland should become the logical center of the California country land business has been substantiated through a recent influx of southern California bankers here in the interests of several large deals of this type one of which in excess of $500 000 may be consummated this week

The deal nearing completion is being handled by R B Cadwalader in charge of the country land department of the Fred E Reed Company one of the first firms to bid strongly for the country land business in Oakland Cadwalader announces that the deal involves a large parcel of land near San Francisco Bay which a chain of southern California bankers plan to subdivide into small farms Prohibitive prices and scarcity of unimproved lands in the southern part of the state have been instrumental in directing the attention of dealers there to the lands adjoining the bay region Cadwalader states

REALTY B'D WOULD AID BUILDING

Bulletin Oakland Real Estate Board

Shortage in housing accommodations in Oakland which has for many months been an embarrassing problem is fast becoming a serious menace to the development of the community and one which must be dealt with promptly and energetically as a community problem according to a report made this week to the Oakland Real Estate Board by its committee on building activities consisting of D W La Fortune H P Bancroft and Fred T Wood

There are in Oakland at the present time 41 052 residences and 304 apartment houses providing accommodations for 1824 families according to a report recently issued by T H City county assessor This makes a total of housing accommodations for 42 876 families providing for but one home for five adults in the enumerated population

While new industries are locating in this city in large numbers many of them importing skilled mechanics who are bringing their families the industries already established are finding difficulty in housing their employees on this side of the bay Rental accommodations are practically exhausted particularly those within the financial reach of wage earners New homes are not being built in any proportion to the increase in population

An appeal made by a shipbuilding concern to Oakland realtors this week urges the co operation of realty agents in finding housing accommodations for families of 500 of its employees who prefer residence in this community to crossing the bay twice daily

BIG CITY RANCH SELLS RAPIDLY

One third of the pioneer Stotts ranch in upper Fruitvale has already been sold since the Villa Site Sales company started its subdivision last June In seven months its sales in this tract have exceeded $100 000 Now known as Fruitvale Garden Farms this famous old homestead long held exclusively by one family is being built up in a hundred homes instead More than twenty houses have been completed For the most part they represent the best types of comfortable but inexpensive California bungalows Some of these are temporary dwellings erected in some instances by thrifty individuals entirely with their own labor

By permitting the construction of lost cost houses we have attracted a desirable class of home loving purchasers whose enterprise is proving a good example that is being followed by an increasing number of recent purchasers declares Lawrence Block sales manager of the Villa Site company He cited instances where men have solved their housing problems by working for themselves on a few Saturday afternoons and Sundays raising the framework of their homes After starting to build they paid their last month s rent to their landlords and moved in under their own roofs before rent day came around again Others paid good wages to themselves during periods of irregular employment by saving the labor costs which they would have had to meet if they had been otherwise occupied

Enforced vacations have proven blessings in disguise to some workers this winter says Block They have had free time to use to their advantage With a few hundred dollars in cash and credit they have emancipated themselves They have secured quarter acres of rich garden soil for initial payments of from $60 to $85 With only $6 00 to $8 50 a month installments to meet they have proceeded to build dwellings that would cost them at least five times as much each month if they were to rent similar houses in town

Although surrounded by the beautiful open country rising gently upward from parklike Diamond Canyon to the foothills they are in close touch with the center of the city Two lines of street cars pass within a few minutes walk In less than half an hour from their doorsteps they can reach the heart of Oakland At Dimond four blocks distant from this tract are numerous stores convenient to shoppers Movies schools and churches cluster about this community center Besides city water gas electricity and telephone connections splendid street work is now being installed without further expense to the purchasers Fertile soil and favoring climate assure abundant success to those who till these tiny farms in this garden spot of Fruitvale

ISSUES STOCK

San Jose Water Works has been authorized by the Railroad Commission to issue $124 300 par value of its common capital stock The proceeds are to be used to pay outstanding notes and reimburse the treasury of the company for money expended from earnings for plant extensions and betterments

Active Year Predicted in Building

MARSHALL D HOPPER, who is confident of the future of the building business in Oakland

Building during the year 1921 will be very active in the opinion of Marshall D Hopper contractor and designer who has been investigating conditions throughout the state and over the coast Recent reductions in building materials and the tremendous demand for new construction is going to stimulate the building business he believes

The entire coast is under built said Mr Hopper upon his return from a trip and Oakland is no exception to the rule The only trouble is that many people who are thinking of building are holding off hoping for a reduction in costs There has been a decided reduction in materials and the demand is so great that it is doubtful if there will be any further reductions in either materials or labor The settlement of the labor conditions in San Francisco will have a beneficial effect upon the whole business and I am looking forward to a very active year

We have under way a very large amount of new construction in and about Piedmont People are finding money for building when they are assured of economy in construction They are not opposed to good wages but they want to be assured of careful management of their work We have had more than $100 000 worth of work under way continually and we see no diminution of this for the immediate future

Stage Line Business of R. R. Com.

Claiming that it is operating at a loss of $7000 a month the Star Auto Stage Company has filed with the Railroad Commission an application for authority to increase its rates to a point that will provide a return on the investment The Star company operates between Oakland and Stockton Stockton and Sacramento Stockton and Merced Stockton and Tracy and Stockton and San Jose

Because of road conditions the Petaluma and Sonoma Valley Transportation Company has withdrawn its application to the Railroad Commission for authority to operate an auto stage line between Caliente El Verano Boyes Springs and Petaluma

Walter M Collins is authorized by the Railroad Commission to establish a through auto stage service between Tulare and Porterville He is not to handle local business between Tulare and Lindsay both points inclusive nor between Lindsay and Porterville both inclusive

The Railroad Commission has refused to grant to Francis M Gray a permit to operate an auto passenger and freight service between Fresno and Mariposa serving La Grande as an intermediate point There was no showing that the district proposed to be served required additional transportation service

A permit is refused Alva Fudge and F W Winslow who wanted to establish an auto service between Madera Madera county and Friant Fresno county The application was based principally on the need for transportation for men who would be employed on an irrigation project the bonds for which have not yet been voted

On the ground that the district is already well served by two stage lines the Railroad Commission has refused to grant to Frank Imhoff a permit to operate an auto service for freight and passengers between Cascade and Huntington Lake Fresno county W R Miles and the Huntington Lake Hotel Company now operating in the territory were authorized to extend their stage lines to the northern end of the lake

Declaring that public convenience and necessity require the operation of a through auto stage service between Oakland and Healdsburg Sonoma county the Railroad Commission has granted to the Western Motor Transport Company a permit to establish such a service The permit, however provides that the company is not to carry local [illegible] between North [illegible]

BUILDING BEGINS IN MONTCLAIR

The upbuilding of Montclair has already begun and the coming spring will see a number of additional homes started in the new residence district just east of Piedmont it is stated Three families have built in Montclair within the past year and are now living on the property They are the households of George Kaiser Howard Schafer and Mrs Flora F Kirsch The home of William Thomas is nearing completion as is that of Dr Mohney The latter residence has been designed by Maury Diggs who has been chosen to draw plans for another Montclair home that of Clarence Williams Mr Williams and Clarence C Quinn are among those who will build as soon as the rains have subsided Fred T Fenheunen plans to complete his home the foundations of which are laid within the next few months It will be an attractive residence on the Moraga road near Edith street just opposite the three acre site purchased by William Nelle secretary of the San Francisco Advertising Club The long list of Montclair owners who plan to build within the next year is headed by George Hildebrant and J M Woods of the firm of Hildebrant & Woods who will both erect sightly homes on their large homesites in Montclair

The fact that there were no residences in Montclair before its sale was begun by the Realty Syndicate is one of the reasons for its instant popularity according to James H L Hommedieu engineer for the Realty Syndicate Company "When buyers have the assurance before them that only new and modern homes will be built in a property they feel safeguarded says L Hommedieu

The building restrictions on the half acre and several acre home sites in Montclair are from $3500 to $10 000 depending upon the location in the tract

Promoters Get Modified Order

The Railroad Commission has modified its original order in the case of the San Francisco Richmond Ferry Company by changing condition 3 of the order and making it read as follows

If any prospectus is issued and distributed by applicant such prospectus shall contain language to the effect that the authority granted by the Railroad Commission to issue and sell stock is permissive only and does not constitute a recommendation or endorsement by the Railroad Commission of said stock A copy of the prospectus shall be filed with the Railroad Commission On each stock subscription agreement shall appear the following language

While the Railroad Commission has authorized the issue and sale of this stock its order is permissive only and does not constitute a recommendation or endorsement of the stock (See Railroad Commission s decision No 8144 dated September 24 1920)

It is claimed by the promoters of the enterprise that restrictions placed by the commission upon the method of handling authorized stock issue of $800 000 made it impossible to sell any stock It is proposed to use the proceeds of the stock sale to establish an auto ferry between Richmond and San Francisco

Activity Reported In Many Sections

Continual industrial activity in both the Eastern and Western industrial sections will occasion new home building programs in both Electric Loop and Richmond Annex, according to announcement of the E J Henderson company owners of the tracts

Scores of individuals employed in the various factories surrounding the properties who have purchased lots in Electric Loop and Richmond Annex are making preparations to improve their land with fine type bungalows with the fall in building material prices the company states Activity in Electric Loop has also been accelerated through the recent announcement of the new Durant Motors company of its survey of East Oakland for a site for its factory

Says the usual plan is to try CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTMENTS after everything else has failed. Would it not save a lot of unnecessary expense and suffering if you tried my CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTMENTS first, as CHIROPRACTIC is THE MASTER KEY THAT UNLOCKS THE DOOR OF HEALTH.

The Master Key That Unlocks the Door to Health

Remember, Dr. Stiles is the only licensed resident graduate in Oakland from the Palmer School.

REMEMBER, THE PALMER SCHOOL is rightly styled THE FOUNTAIN-HEAD OF THE SCIENCE, as it was founded and charted by DR. D. D. PALMER.

A PALMER CHIROPRACTOR used no adjuncts such as baths, electricity, hammers, mallets, etc., but adjusts with his bare hands.

DON'T FORGET that DR. STILES is centrally located in the Syndicate Bldg., where he has been for the past six years.

DR. STILES has a complete X-RAY LABORATORY for spinographic work.

STOMACH NAUSEA

Many persons have a good appetite one day and sickness at the sight of food the next. There is often belching of gas and taste of bitter fluid. Frequently the tongue is coated. There may or may not be pain in the stomach. Headache and dizziness often accompany these symptoms. The stomach, like every other part of the body, is dependent upon spinal nerves for strength and vigor. Chiropractic Adjustments of joints of the backbone, which have become out of alignment at "stomach place," restore normal stomach strength. If you want the best in Chiropractic and wish to get well quickly and permanently, call and see me.

About Chiropractic

A DRUGLESS METHOD

For example, take "sour stomach," where it secretes too much acid, with distressing results. The patient is usually given an alkai to counteract the acid and the symptoms subside for a time, when the effects of the alkali wear off, the symptoms return. Why? Because the real cause still remains. A Chiropractor would give the patient nothing. He would simply examine the spine at the "stomach place." Here he would find the subluxated vertebra pressing on the nerve going to the stomach. He would adjust this bone to its proper place and the stomach trouble would disappear permanently.

Other diseases are removed in the same manner. The Chiropractor's object in each case is to remove the cause and NOT to treat effects.

Farmer Villa Rules With Same Iron Hand He Used When Leader of Guerillas

Editor's Note: Villa, the Bandit, is now Villa the Farmer and the United Press believed its readers would be interested in the doings of the former Terror of Mexico now that he has settled down, for a time at least, to peaceful pursuits. The following sketch is not signed because it might be unwise for the author to go back if it was.

(By The United Press.)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 22.—Francisco Villa, the farmer, is still the same Francisco Villa who for nearly ten years was the terror of northern Mexico. His ranch is an armed camp. His people obey him with the same loyalty which has kept his army together through its many campaigns and he rules their destiny with the same iron hand which made him the most terrible of Mexico's many guerrillas. His paternal tyranny is carried to the point where even the money of his men is at his disposal and is deposited in his name in the Bank of the Laguna.

The visitor to the ranch at Canutillo is not allowed to approach the place until Villa himself has given his permission and then he must do so under the escort of one of Villa's guards. One leaves the railway line at the little mining camp of Parral, Coahuila, which Villa has sacked several times during his military career. The Hotel Central is the Villista headquarters and it is there that one must go to get in touch with the former chieftain. The manager will transmit a letter to Canutillo and if the visitor is acceptable to Don Pancho, a member of the escort will be sent to take him to the ranch. If he is not acceptable he may be left to cool his heels for a week or two unless he loses patience and leaves.

It is a ride of some sixty-five miles to Canutillo. The first five miles is over the roughest of mountain roads. After about three hours hard riding one reaches the little village of Las Cuevas, the only one between Parral and the ranch. From there on the road is good and one travels fast.

At present the place is little more than a bivouac. No effort has been made to repair the tumbled down houses and barns and the thousand or so souls who are gathered around the place sleep practically in the open. The guest house is what was once a church, now stripped of all its furnishings. Here one is given a reed mat for a bed and a blanket made of old sacks. There are always twenty or more visitors at Canutillo who are accorded the honor of a place in the guest house.

EVERYBODY ARMED

Everyone with the exception of visitors, is armed. The men carry rifles with them to breakfast, dinner and supper. There is a plentiful supply of ammunition. The guests are relieved of any weapons on their arrival. An aid very politely informs them that they are to make themselves perfectly at home and that weapons are not needed. These are invariably returned when the guest takes his departure.

Villa is up at 4 a. m. and he sees to it that everyone follows his example. Guests, foreign or Mexicans, are no exceptions. As soon as everyone is up, a large fire is built in an open square and all gather around to drive out the chill of the winter air. Villa is seen moving about here and there scolding and jesting with men and women. At half past seven, a bell in the church tower rings and all hands gather for breakfast over which Villa presides. The scene resembles a fair. Breakfast is always the same: beans, bread and coffee.

IS ALWAYS GUARDED

After breakfast Villa starts out on horseback to inspect the work that is going on about the place. He rides hard and fast and is accompanied by a strong guard. He is back again not later than 10 o'clock when he attends to his large correspondence. Dinner is served at 1 o'clock, the bell in the church again summoning all to the meal of beans and pepper with the inevitable tortilla, or corn cake.

Villa never misses his nap after dinner, the inevitable siesta of the tropics. When he awakes he receives such visitors as have been selected for the day and chats with them or carries on such business as they have in hand. They come from all parts of the country, some out of curiosity and some on all manner of business deals in which they hope to interest Villa. He promises them much but gives little. He tells all that he is very poor and that he cannot give any money.

The absence of money is one of the noticeable things about the place. Men squabble over small change and often have not enough money with which to buy cigarettes.

WEARS OLD CLOTHES

After another tour around the outbuildings in the late afternoon, supper is served. This is the only meal which Villa eats with his family.

Villa is dressed in the plainest of clothes. He invariably wears an old Panama hat. He wears no coat, but uses a heavy sweater instead. Drill breeches and a pair of old shoes complete his costume.

During the past few weeks Villa has been making frequent trips to Ciudad Guerrero, Torreon and other places. These trips are for the purpose of digging up silver bars and other valuables which Villa buried during various raids. These are marketed in Torreon by Hipolito Villa, Pancho's brother, who acts as his financial agent.

A report is current at Canutillo that Villa intends to go into mining in the spring. His old friend Angel Caso is with him and is said to have some twenty mines in view which Villa intends to organize into a company and to work with his men in addition to his ranching venture.

"I Loved Him" Is Girl's Plea Though Man Has Wife

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—When she found that the man she cared for was married to another, Myrtle Miles, pretty, and scarcely looking her 22 years, stuck to him anyway.

"I loved him," she said.

When he brought her from New York to Duluth and then left her there with her mother, while he rejoined his wife in Portland, and later came to Los Angeles, she fled to him here.

"I lover him," was still her only excuse.

When he was arrested last Friday charged with violating the Mann white slave act, she stole, according to her own admission, to try and accumulate money to pay his bail.

And once more her explanation was, "I loved him."

Said to be the daughter of a New Cambridge, Mass., millionaire, the girl meth Albert Cross, 24 years old, a motion picture actor, while on a visit to New York city.

According to Cross' wife, whose stage name is Florence Hart, she later discovered that the girl's fascination for Cross started at least a year before Myrtle learned that Cross was married.

Several times while the wife was playing "on the road" the girl, believing Cross single, lived with him as his wife. As soon as Mrs. Cross would move out of the apartment, she says, Cross would move the girl into it.

Finally Mrs. Cross departed on a tour of the Pacific coast, to be gone many months. Cross and the girl left a few weeks afterwards for Duluth. She chose Duluth, she said, because her mother lived there. It is believed that he told her they would be married there.

In Duluth Cross received a hasty message from his wife asking him to join her at Portland. He left Myrtle with her mother and came west. The company with which they were playing worked his way down to Los Angeles.

TELEGRAPHED TO GIRL.

All the while Cross was in constant communication with Myrtle by telegraph.

"Dearest," he wired, "if you can come to Los Angeles for only a couple of weeks I will be the happiest man alive. I will make you a movie star. I cannot live without you."

On August 8 Myrtle came to Los Angeles. She could not live without Cross, either, she said.

After her arrival Mrs. Cross's suspicions, already aroused, became former. At first she thought that her husband was involved in the Eva Esmond white slave case, of which she had read in New York newspapers.

HAS HIM ARRESTED.

Eva Esmond is said to have left New York with a man who enticed her to come west. It was believed by police that, because the girl was eager to become a motion picture actress, she might be found in Los Angeles.

On this suspicion Mrs. Cross had her husband arrested and he was taken from their home at 7413 Hawthorne avenue, Hollywood, to the county jail.

There Cross is said to have confessed that it was not Eva, but Myrtle, who was involved with him.

John Jones, representing the department of justice, and Policeman Gillette, went to Myrtle's room at Third and Olive streets. There they found her and the trunks which she made no effort to hide from them.

In the trunks were the complete series of telegrams from Cross, they found, also women's underwear, bits of jewelry, lace, and other pieces of finery, all new.

ADMITS THEFT.

"Yes, I stole it," admitted Myrtle, according to Jones and Gillette. "My father, who used to send me $300 a month, has cut off my allowance. I must have money—for Albert. He is in trouble."

While Cross paced his cell at the county jail last night, Myrtle walked back and forth in hers at the city jail. She is charged with burglary.

Cross will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Stephen G. Long on the Mann act charge.

At the juvenile bureau late yesterday afternoon, wife and girl met face to face.

"I forgive you," said Mrs. Cross, taking the girl's hand, "but I will never have anything to do with Albert again."

"I loved him," repeated Myrtle, simply. "I could never give him up."

GIRLS COURT, EVEN KIDNAP THEIR HUSBANDS

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Every year is a leap year among the Garo women in Assam, writes a missionary to the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

"Among those who have not been Christianized the bride takes the initiative in marriage," he says. "She goes to fetch the bridegroom, and it is etiquette for him to hide and resist until victoriously carried off. Occasionally a man may get his wife by capture, but usually it is the woman who kidnaps him; that is to say, her male friends do it for her. One may still see such pressgangs bringing home their spoil.

"In the early days the missionaries were inclined to rush to the rescue, thinking that violence was being committed, such is the noise made by the struggling youth. The reluctance and resistance, though, are seldom as real as they sound. If the youth dislikes the match there is rarely any redress.

TEUTON STUDENTS GIVEN ONE MEAL

BY UNITED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—With the beginning of 1921, approximately 20,000 students in German Universities were receiving midday meals as a result of the program of Student Feeding instituted by the Society of Friends' Service Committee in Germany.

The Student Feeding work is regarded by the American and English Friends who have it in charge as one of the most important reconstruction activities now being carried on in Central Europe. It assists the most poverty-stricken and democratic members of the German student body to continue the studies to fit them for leadership in the new Germany.

In essence the Student Feeding work consists in supplying supplementary foods to depots under the jurisdiction of the various Universities. Here the students may obtain a hot lunch by payment of a sum below cost price, in particularly necessitous cases the amount paid by the student is purely nominal.

The men and women undergraduates who receive this relief, are selected from the most needy by local committees composed of the rector of the University concerned, a physician, a member of the Friends' Service Committee, and two undergraduate members of the Deutsche Studentenschaft, a democratic student society. In no case is any student with a total monthly income from all sources of more than 400 marks (about five dollars at present exchange rates) benefiting from the Student Feeding work.

The reduced price lunch can be provided for 20,000 students at a cost of about twelve thousand dollars a month. The work is entirely dependent on voluntary contributions from England and America, and funds at present on hand will support it only until the middle of March.

PRIEST HONORED FOR INVENTION

By HENRY WOOD

PARIS, Jan. 22.—In conferring the Legion of Honor on Abbe Rousselot, a 70-year-old white-haired Catholic priest, France has just made known the author of one of the greatest discoveries of the war.

This was the method of locating enemy's guns by means of the sound waves set in motion by every shot fired. It is doubtful if any one single discovery contributed more to the gradual defeat of the Germans and the ultimate allies' victory than this.

By means of Abbe Rousselot's discovery, French artillerymen were able at all times to locate every enemy gun that was firing against them and to start themselves a counter-battery fire that in the end could be counted on to put the enemy's gun or battery out of business.

This science was in turn communicated by the French to the Allies and when at last it was in full operation not only on the French but the English and Italian fronts as well, the Allies were able gradually to put thfe enemy guns out of business until the Allied armies themselves had the artillery superiority necessary to insure ultimate victory.

With the outbreak of the war Abbe Rousselot was struck by the fact that the sound waves created by the detonation of a cannon were very much the same as those created by the human voice in speaking. He made a machine that not only registered them but also registered the distance of the firing gun. With his discoveries placed at the disposition of the French government and with the aid of artillery and scientific experts, it did not take France long to develop all that was necessary to locate the enemy guns merely from the sound waves which their detonations created.

Mrs. Lucy Hamm Dies While Away on Visit

RICHMOND, Jan. 22.—Mrs. Lucy Hamm, well known Richmond resident, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. O. A. Holthe in Bakersfield, yesterday morning, according to a telegram received by her son, T. Hamm of this city, last night. The cause of death was not stated in word received here today. Death must have been sudden as her son received a card written last Sunday saying that she was in good health.

The deceased was a native of Sacramento, 55 years of age. Her home was at 740 Seventh street. She went south two weeks ago for a visit with her daughter. She is survived by the following children: Walter and Theoren Hamm, Richmond; Percy Hamm, Oakland; Roy Hamm, Bakersfield; Cecil Hamm, Richmond; Mrs. V. Brown, Corning; Mrs. O. A. Holthe, Bakersfield, and Mrs. L. M. Brown, Oakland. The remains are being shipped to this city for the funeral.

LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE.

Lithuanians Fire On League Commission

(By Universal Service.)

LONDON, Jan. 22.—(Special Cable Despatch).—Lithuanian patrols fired upon the league of nations control commission on the demarcation line" near the Polish-Lithuanian frontier, but no one was wounded, says a Warsaw despatch to the Sunday Express. PLEASANTON BACKS FIGHT FOR A LINK IN STATE HIGHWAY

Senator Frank Carr Leads the Campaign to Put Town On "Trunk Line."

PLEASANTON, Jan. 22.—Pleasanton is greatly concerned over the bill introduced in the senate this week by Senator Frank Carr of this district which will put certain roads in this section under the jurisdiction of the State Highway Commission.

A delegation of county officials and prominent citizens from this section headed by Supervisor Dan J. Murphy has been in Sacramento this week in an effort to have the highway commission approve plans for improving the stretch of road between Livermore and Mission San Jose. This link will include Pleasanton, will continue on through Sunol and will not only connect this section with the highway going through the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys but will join at Mission San Jose and connect with the coast route to Southern California. This road is of vital interest to all the residents of the valley and much enthusiasm has been awakened since Senator Carr started his campaign.

The generous rains this week which brought more than three inches to this section were a delight to all even though much farming was interfered with and individual work halted. There has been plenty of water in the Arroyo creek since Wednesday and from all appearances it will run for another few days. Reports of heavy snow storms in the Livermore and Sunol mountains were received on Friday morning, and from the word received they were the heaviest in several years. With the weather predictions concerning another storm for the end of the month this valley will be particularly blessed with a good seasonal rainfall.

A group of local young folks motored out to the Arroyo sanitarium Thursday evening and delighted the patients and staff there by giving a vaudeville show. The interesting program which had been cleverly arranged to dispel all gloom contained eight numbers and more than a hundred and thirty persons at the sanitarium were entertained. Four machines from town took out the talent and after the show the young people were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Bush. Attractive programs furnished by Mr. Davis of the Pleasanton Times were given out as souvenirs to all attending the performance.

The Woman's Improvement club has postponed its card party which was to have been given next Wednesday evening in the Town Hall until February 2. The change has been made necessary on account of the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs holding a joint installation on that evening. The party when given will be in the interests of the school playground.

Theo. Gier of Oakland visited the Giersberg vineyards here this week looking over his former interests here and greeting old friends in this section.

The Levelers held a business meeting at their club house one evening this week which brought together a large membership for a very busy session. Plans to improve the present club house which the club has been occupying the past four years were made and arrangements to move into the Odd Fellows hall and fit up club rooms there were cancelled. The club will make numerous changes in the present quarters which will include renovating the place and refurnishing it. Present plans are very attractive and since the club has undertaken a more extensive program for the new year it will fit the club house to its needs by making numerous important changes.

The wedding of Miss Ethel Hesselgren of Alameda to George Koopman of this place was celebrated Thursday afternoon in the presence of a large circle of relatives. The impressive service was read by Rev. John Stutchell of the Presbyterian church and the wedding took place at the Koopman residence on Neal street. An elaborate wedding dinner was served after which the couple took their departure for a short wedding trip. The bride is a former University of California student and more lately associated with the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco while Koopman is a graduate of Davis farm and connected with the Koopman Brothers Dairy company of this place. The young couple will reside in the Kolb bungalow on Second street upon their return.

Announcement has been made this week concerning a committee from the Moose Lodge arriving in California next week to look over certain sites for a national home. Among the sites to be inspected is the Hacienda Del Poza De Verona, the home of the late Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, and from the reports submitted by the California committee who had charge of presenting a report the local one heads the list as being the most acceptable. In the party to arrive from New Orleans will be James J. Davis, director general and Rodney H. Brandon, supreme secretary. These men are in charge of the final survey and their report will be submitted to the Grand Lodge who will take action and award the location site.

Strikebreakers Are Beaten By Women

NEW YORK, Jan. [illegible]—Strike rioting broke out in Brooklyn yesterday when 200 idle garment workers attacked a truck carrying workers to the factory of Samuel Peck & Co. The truck was wrecked and the occupants were dragged into the street and beaten. Many of the rioters were women. A riot call [illegible] police formed a flying wedge and drove into the mob. Four persons were knocked senseless with police clubs and their bodies lay in the street while the battle raged over them.

The fight continued for half an hour, the attackers being reinforced by roughs from the neighborhood, whose only reason for joining in the fray was their love of a good scrap.

More than a score were injured by flying missiles but only the four who were knocked out by policemen required medical attention.

Ten arrests were made.

Piedmont Mourns Death Of George, Candy Seller

If there be any virtue and heroism in the knowledge of true sympathy and affection then George Marras, aristocratic Piedmont's beloved Greek candy merchant, found death had little sting.

Marras, who [illegible] years ago came to America and fought out poor, alone, unknown, died yesterday at an Oakland hospital surrounded by marks of esteem and regard that might have been coveted by many of far loftier station.

For many days Marras had been ill with Bright's disease. But early when it was known that the end was near, women from aristocratic Piedmont homes whose children had patronized his little confectionery stand went to the hospital where he lay and soothed his hours of pain; men prominent in the business life of the bay region came to his bedside with gifts and words of cheer.

WON HEART OF COMMUNITY

The passing of George Marras is one of the unique chapters in the events of a community that show how near lies its real heart.

It was not long ago that when Piedmont park was eliminated that it was decreed that the little confectionery shop which Marras operated there must go. It would have been a sore blow to Marras, but a sorrier blow to Piedmont to have lost him.

For had not he kept an eye on straying children and returned many a lost babe to its mother; had he not trusted for dimes, nickels, even pennies the children of the whole area who came to his shop for sweets; had he not counseled them?

And when the war was on had he not given one full day's receipts every week to the Red Cross, and had he not made the candy for every charitable bazaar and function in Piedmont out of his own good will, and had he not for the Boy Scouts time without mind ice cream that he bought himself and for which he received no pay?

GOOD GIVEN FOR GOOD

These were the questions that Piedmont answered in the affirmative and having done so called a meeting in the Community church and subscribed $6000 with which to build him a new stand for which he might pay in his own good time and way.

Now perhaps that stand will not be paid for in cash, but Piedmont folk believe themselves paid many times over in that they knew George Marras and candy shop keeper that he was loved and respected him as one of Piedmont's best and strongest men.

Marras will be buried from the Greek church at Tenth and Brush streets that he helped to build. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and there will be many there to do him final homage.

Narcotic Addiction Due To Habit and Not Disease, Declares N. Y. Commissioner

Written by MARGERY REX for the International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Habit, so the [illegible] fixed mode of action. It may be physical or mental or a combination of the two.

In another definition habit [illegible] divided into three classifications: those inborn, induced and last the acquired ones which are made by repetition of act.

To this last named group may be added the most pernicious and powerful of all habits, that of narcotic drug using.

Yet for years the condition of acts [illegible] with needles filled with forcefulness, forbidding white powders that bring oblivion, has been called a disease. Narcotic addiction classed as a disease [illegible] treated accordingly.

Mrs. Sara Graham Mulhall, Deputy Commissioner of the New York State Department of Narcotic Drug Control, has demonstrated [illegible] [illegible]

This official has undertaken the difficult and thankless task of trying to free the [illegible] from the [illegible] of his habit [illegible] Deputy Commissioner [illegible] [illegible] friendship and denied [illegible] [illegible]

REGISTERING ADDICTS

[illegible] no hospitals except the Bellevue hospital on Riker's and Blackwell's Islands where even the most unfortunate men and women [illegible] treatment [illegible]

Too long has the [illegible] of habit been treated by the public [illegible] considered by the public as [illegible] long has he been scorned and despised as an especially defeatable type of criminal. He is none of these [illegible]

There are of course addicts who are also criminals but these are in the minority. There are a vast number who because of their habit only are social misfits. It is unjust to throw them into institutions reserved primarily for lawbreakers.

It is often difficult to persuade the addicts to take hospital treatment but by [illegible] either of depriving them of their registration cards or by persuasion many are induced to place themselves in a hospital where they can be relieved of their craving and by this hospitalization I do not mean that they must be treated though they suffer from a disease. The actual taking off of the drug requires but a few days of medical treatment.

But think of the position of such a person who after medical treatment [illegible] goes out into the world again. Neither his morale nor his physical condition is strong. He is out of touch with normal life and has no inclination to return to except those which are certain to make him [illegible]

[illegible] as well as the physical [illegible] this evil habit must be [illegible] by [illegible]

I find not one instance," says the Deputy Commissioner, "of an addict [illegible] who has cured himself permanently by a supreme effort of his will. There are none. With all [illegible] against him and torment [illegible] the habit is a physical and [illegible] [illegible] unaided [illegible]

Amerind Suggested As Name for U. S. Indians

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Amerind.

That is the new name that has been suggested as the official designation of the original inhabitants of this country, the word being composed of the first syllable of American Indian. The word was first suggested in 1869 by an American lexicographer.

So Lat Dowanee, a Mohawk of the St. Regis reservation in New York, and Carrie P. Meiggs-Adams (Oge Lin Gua), a Cherokee whose native name means "Always Smiling," are sponsors for the movement to give a new name to an old race.

So Lat Dowanee, appreciating the error Christopher Columbus made in applying the title under which the race is now known, is making an effort to accomplish the adoption of this name. "Amerind" is grammatically adaptable to the scientific argument of the subject pertaining to most "Amerindian" or pre Amerindic. He states that a bill will soon be introduced in Congress for the adoption of the new name.

The Mohawk has just returned to Washington after a trip to the various reservations, obtaining his brethren's views on the subject, and was impressed with the great need of its immediate official adoption. He will petition the President of the United States to concur in the proposed legislation.

"It was never more noticeable than during the late war the absolute need of this Government to correct this mistake," said So Lat Dowanee. "While the Amerind members of the A. E. F. were in England the press and public, in order to give expression to their admiration of the fighting qualities of the 'Amerinds,' were forced to use 'Red Indian' for want of a better or proper name to distinguish them from the Hindu or East Indian though they were in no way similar."

NARCOTICS SALES CHARGED TO CAFE MAN AFTER RAID

Police Used Marked Money in Effort to Trap Owner of Restaurant.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—Trapped according to the police with marked money, Hamit Chita, proprietor of a Turkish coffee house at 289 Fourth street, was arrested tonight in a raid conducted by Captain Charles Goff of the southern police station and George Duff, investigator under District Attorney Matthew Brady.

Information had been received by the district attorney that Chita was selling narcotics and was suspected of bootlegging. Several times officers were sent in to investigate but without results. Today a definite plan was worked out and throughout the afternoon and early evening narcotic addicts supplied with marked bills and coins were sent in to the place under the instructions of Captain Goff. In all $200 was thus used when officers arrested Chita. They charged that he served liquor in coffee cups that he handed out narcotics freely to the known addicts. They confiscated 7 ounces of narcotics, several bottles of whisky and a demijohn of moonshine. These together with the marked money were held as evidence against Chita, who was charged with violating the prohibition law and the state poison law.

His place was closed.

STRADIVARIUS' GHOST GIVES UP SECRET, IS CLAIM

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—(Special Cable Despatch.)—The ghost of Stradivarius, the famous violin maker who died at Cremona in 1737, has appeared to Heinrich Ohlhaver, a German merchant of Hamburg and has revealed to him the secret of turning the cheapest ten dollar fiddle into the finest Stradivarius violin, which the merchant says can't be told from an instrument two and a half centuries old.

The German newspapers today prominently feature Ohlhaver's discovery, which Ohlhaver, who is an occultist, attributes to the spirit of Stradivarious which it is declared, appeared to him and revealed the secret long dead.

Three Men Beaten; One Victim Robbed

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—Three men, two of them sons of a prominent real estate broker and the other a former army captain, were set upon, beaten and robbed when they stopped to watch a dice game while on a slumming tour in the Barbary Coast district late tonight.

Captain Daniel Howard of 115 Alma street, Palo Alto, as a guest of B. P. Oliver Jr. and John C. Oliver, brothers, and sons of Bartholomew P. Oliver, real estate broker of 2850 Washington street, were the men attacked. According to the story they told the police they stopped at Columbus avenue and Broadway to watch a craps game. One of the participants suddenly turned and tried to provoke a row and without warning the other two men set upon and beat the strollers.

Howard reported that he lost a $45 gold watch and a $600 diamond ring. He said he was beaten with brass knuckles. His companions were beaten but not robbed. All were treated at the Harbor Emergency Hospital.

Germans Aided By Packers, Kenyon Says

By L. C. MARTIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—British hostility to American packers is based on their efforts during the war to send meat through the allied blockade to feed the German army and to prevent the allies obtaining a loan in the United States, Senator Kenyon of Iowa charged in the Senate today, replying to critics of the packer regulation legislation.

Kenyon defended the Federal Trade Commission against the attacks of Senator Sherman, Illinois, chief opponent of the Kenyon-Kendrick packer bill, on which the Senate will vote late Monday.

He denied that the British hostility was based on the trade commission, scathing criticism of the packers, in a report issued some months ago. Sherman charged yesterday that the British Board of Trade had a copy of this report a year before it was given to the American public and said the British had made it the basis of a drive against American business.

Sherman also attacked William B. Colver, former chairman of the Trade Commission, on the ground that he went to England and made speeches criticising American business.

She Tells How the Party Given by Tribune to Children of Oakland Was Huge Success

By AUNT ELSIE.

I've known of folks who began the New Year by swearing off doughnuts or stopped shining their shoes or adopted other methods of Gloomy Reformation. But of all the proper New Year Starts I've ever [illegible] yesterday I saw the properest down at the American Theater. Talk about landing in the midst of twelve months joy with a flying start. We'll say they did. Who did? Why, bless your souls, Pals, didn't you know. The KIDDIES!

Oakland Kiddies—Berkeley Kiddies—hill kiddies, boy kiddies—piling in like a young tide foaming with glee—all the kiddies in [illegible] sunshiny world come to see The TRIBUNE'S Aunt Elsie and 50,000 Club party.

Whoop! Oh, what's the use of trying to write about this in English language? Have a heart, folks. Use your imaginations and give a fellow a lift. Can't you just see them, hear them, feel them, jamming the streets, cramming the lobby, [illegible] to hang from the ceiling [illegible] loo—wave upon wave, upon a WAVE of Young Joy.

Jostling Joy in the audience. Jostling Joy behind the scenes where more kiddies waited with their eyes popping out to do the entertaining. You may bring on your [illegible] of [illegible] her blooming spring procession. I've [illegible] spring's [illegible] heart of [illegible] of kiddies and I'm so content I shine.

Wager Denton Still Lives Adds to Mystery of Trial Of Mrs. Peete for Murder

Special to THE TRIBUNE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Is Jacob Charles Denton still alive? Five hundred dollars to $100 was bet today by a former friend of Denton's that he is not dead. With new and startling developments coming one upon another today in the sensational murder mystery in which Mrs. Louise L. Peete is the central figure on trial for the crime, that amazing phase created astonishment today in the ranks of those closely associated with the case.

Borne up by today's other developments which are set forth in order below, there were those identified with the mystery who admitted that the theory of Denton being alive is a possibility although so fraught with fact and fiction as to be almost unbelievable.

MRS. PEETE CONFIDENT

The events occurring today which are pointed out as lending some speculation to the theory are these:

First, the bet of $500 to $100 by a former associate of Denton's that not only was the man alive but if Mrs. Peete is convicted of his death will dramatically appear and absolve her from all connection with the supposed crime.

Second, the confident declaration by Mrs. Peete today that "I am now doubly confident of acquittal and have absolutely no fear of the outcome of my trial."

Third, the emphatic statement by public defender Aggeler, her attorney, that "Mrs. Peete will be free by the end of the week."

Fourth, reiteration by Mrs. Peete's lawyers that "We have two great surprises yet in reserve which when sprung will shatter the prosecution's case."

Why Mrs. Peete will be free within a week defender Aggeler declines to discuss beyond the explanation that "Well, the trial will be over by then, I am sure." What the two great surprises are no one has yet even hinted from the public defender's office.

As for the trial running its ordinary course being over within a week, that today appeared impossible. The prosecution has thus far only examined seven of its witnesses which required a day and a half. There are sixty more to be examined. Some of the evidence of these will require much longer to introduce than that given by the witnesses who have completed their duty on the stand. Ten days or two weeks would be a more accurate estimate, it was believed.

Touching on the wager which was made that Denton is still alive, the explanation of this astounding bet was this:

The Spanish woman version first advanced by Mrs. Peete for Denton's disappearance is substantially correct. What caused his disappearance directly, however, was that in self defense he killed an intruder in his home, a friend of the Spanish woman's, and buried the body in the basement. That was the body uncovered in the ghastly cellar crypt.

INTERESTING IF TRUE

Denton then left Mrs. Peete who occupied the house. Knew nothing of the fatal ending of the quarrel, but she did know that there had been difference and that the trouble necessitated Denton's disappearance from the country for an indefinite time.

Interesting if true, say those who heard the strange theory and it is the key to the mystery if Mrs. Peete is innocent, as she so calmly and steadfastly maintains.

Speculation on what the two surprises are promised by the defense included the "Denton still alive" angle and this:

That Denton's two first fingers on each hand were of equal length, that the fingers on the dead man's hand were of normal formation, the second finger longer than the first.

Again came the comment: "Interesting, if true."

Mrs. Peete spent a quiet morning in the jail. She accepted with some relief the recess of her case until Monday, as she was more than ordinarily fatigued. She remained in seclusion at the jail and spent her time reading, [illegible] to occupy her mind [illegible] with her [illegible]

Packed House Bids Farewell To Songbirds

Big Audience Hears "Il Trovatore" by San Carlo Company at Ye Liberty

By ROY HARRISON DANFORTH.

One more and [illegible] their concluding offering, the San Carlo Company showed the stuff the [illegible] made of. [illegible] last night [illegible] The [illegible] was Il Trovatore. [illegible] to give was apparently enough for [illegible] The old patch work of absurdities and entrancing music served to pack the house. The manner in which the music was given [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] opera [illegible] [illegible] provided on [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] enjoyment [illegible] beautiful melodies [illegible] all of the [illegible] of the [illegible] which Verdi turned them out [illegible] white heat in the period of his greatest virility [illegible] development of his genius.

ALICE GENTLE IS STAR

The triumph of the evening belonged rightfully to Alice Gentle. No Azucena was ever so dramatically sung here as she sang it last night. The [illegible] with infernal [illegible] Ferrando's soldiers had dubbed her, was quite that in Miss Gentle's hands. Yet through such a scene as the "Stride la vampa" originates she remained [illegible] that she was vocalist as well as actress, and the vocal charm of her presentation so held its own. Often enough in the columns I have had occasion to remind of the beauties of Miss Gentle's voice. Add to these such a richness, resonance and power as she showed every minute she was on stage, and the picture of her as concert recitalist becomes her presentment as so exciting a part as this.

Bettina Freeman improved upon requirement. She sang a Leonora of various charm. Her voice was permitted more display than even in Aida, and it fared well through many difficult songs. The "Tacea la notte" was sung with pleasing wistfulness and her various contribution to ensemble scenes were of evident value.

BALLESTER AT HIS BEST

Easily at his vocal best for the week was Vincente Ballester, who was cast as Di Luna. This best of his is fully complemental to his histrionism. His voice is suave, resonant, musical and he has a power in sustained tones which he occasionally uses with tremendous effect. He has moreover the best of all qualifications for a singer in Verdi opera, an ability to build up a climax. Giuseppe Inzerillo was the Manrico of the cast.

Inzerillo is a perfect mountain of a man from whom the exodus of a tenor voice is a constant surprise. Yet it is a voice of much sweetness artificially handled and never forced. Indeed it stands at the border between a lyric and a dramatic tenor. Alice Homer, Natale Cervi and Amadeo Baldi were the others of the cast.

Factional Fight by Democrats in Sight

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Democratic factional fight over proposals for immediate revivification of the party will come to a head here next week with the visit of Governor Cox, it was learned tonight.

Revivification means the selection of a new national chairman and involves in the opinion of some leaders a contest for party control by McAdoo men.

It was learned that some Democratic leaders will seek a conference with Governor Cox when he reaches Washington Monday and will attempt to secure his active assistance in assembling the national committee to effect immediate revivification [illegible]

If he does not enter into this program a member of the committee will telegraph all other members asking if they will join him in calling a meeting. This member says a majority favors such action.

SNORERS, CUD CHEWERS HIT BY FREAK LAW

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—(By United Press.)—The voice of the people speaks in the duly elected representatives, either in legislative halls to make history.

It looks as if the female of the species had a hand in the bill introduced in the Oklahoma legislature making it unlawful for the male members of the household to snore or talk in their sleep after 1 a. m. Offenders are to be sentenced to live with their mothers-in-laws in case they have none they may be fined $1000 or given one month in the brig.

UNDERTAKERS BUMPED

The Missouri legislature is attempting to take the sting out of death. A bill fathered by Representative Ellis would prohibit manufacturers from making more than 15 per cent on coffins or other funeral supplies. Retailers would be confined to a measly [illegible] per cent profit. The penalty, $[illegible] to $500 fine and from three to six months in the bastile.

Devotees of eating tobacco are dealt a blow in a bill thrown in the hopper in Kansas. Representative George Smith's bill makes it unlawful to squirt tobacco juice on furniture, appliances, floors, walls, carpets of schools and churches.

The whole of Minnesota is rooting for the bill compelling barbers to practice up for three years before performing tonsorial operations on cash customers. Hotel or Pullman employees are prohibited from accepting tips in another bill.

Trick bills in Indiana would do the following: Give persons right to kill strange chickens wandering on their property, restore roller towels in hotels, provide for building fences around cemeteries.

The Iowa legislature may make the sale of bob sleds other than those four feet six inches in width illegal.

MOTORISTS ASK FOR HELP AND ARE ARRESTED

Special to THE TRIBUNE

SAN JOSE, Jan. 22.—When [illegible] Budotti [illegible] grill in San Francisco, and Joseph Ravich, a waiter at Tait's in San Francisco, appealed for assistance after their automobile containing thirty gallons of contraband liquor broke down on the highway near Mountain View tonight they made the mistake of choosing a deputy sheriff. As a result both were arrested on charges of violating the national prohibition act.

Budotti and Ravich sought assistance from the first passing tourist, who happened to be Deputy Sheriff Harry Martin. Attracted by the presence of two barrels in the tonneau of the crippled car, Martin made an investigation. He then convoyed the alleged bootleggers and their cargo to San Jose.

HARDING LEAVES ON CRUISE DOWN FLORIDA COAST

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 22.—President-elect Harding left here [illegible] the house boat Victoria for a two weeks cruise down the eastern coast of Florida. The boat was scheduled to tie up tonight at Summer Haven and to stop at Ormond tomorrow.

Harding dodged all reception ceremonies and got into his golf clothes immediately on arriving here, shortly before noon by train. Several hundred winter resorters crowded around the station platform but he merely smiled a greeting and hurried in an automobile. He spent several hours on the links.

The party on the houseboat is small. It includes Senator Fall, New Mexico; Harry M. Daugherty, Ohio; Henry M. Fletcher, former ambassador to Mexico; Senator Frelinghuysen, New Jersey; George B. Christian Jr., secretary to Harding, and Mike McCahill, secret service agent.

HOOVER RELIEF FOR CHILDREN OVER-SUBSCRIBED

BERKELEY, Jan. 22.—Although called upon to raise a quota of $10,000, Berkeley has responded to the Hoover campaign for the relief of starving children of Europe with contributions which may exceed $17,000. Mrs. Lewis A. Hicks, president of the Mobilized Women, who conducted a house to house canvass, raised close to $16,000. Rev. H. J. B. Speight, chairman of the local drive committee, said tonight that other contributions would total about $1700.

The largest single contribution was for $700 from the pupils of Miss Anna Head's school. In commenting upon the drive, Mrs. Hicks said: "Berkeley has responded to this drive with all the old time war spirit. The Mobilized Women not only gave of their money but of their time. Through pouring rain they walked from house to house, sometimes going to one house three and four times."

Remains of New Unknown People Found in Mexico

(By United Press.)

VERA CRUZ, Jan. 22.—Discovery of remains of an ancient race apparently unknown to archaeologists, was reported here today.

Word was brought that a number of ruins have been found near the old town of Perote in the state of Vera Cruz. The hieroglyphics found on implements and masonry were said to be of a different type than any hitherto discovered in Mexico. In the ruins were great quantities of idols of a strange metal extremely brilliant and of great weight. They were so abundant that every resident of Perote was able to possess one after the ruins had been unearthed.

BELGIUM BUILDS AGAINST GERMAN

By R. H. SHEFFIELD
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BRUSSELS, Jan. 22.—Belgian mistrust of Germany has brought even the Socialists to consent to the formation of a strong army. While recognizing that the ultimate aim is [illegible] the Socialists still [illegible] that for the present [illegible] must be ready to defend herself in case of an attack which is considered within the bounds of [illegible] possibility. So Belgium is going to [illegible] not perhaps [illegible] numerically than before [illegible] but better [illegible] mobile army rather than a mere array of defensive forts, the [illegible] utility of which [illegible] more than doubtful in 1914.

A hundred thousand men will be called up this year, [illegible] fourteen thousand will be specially enlisted for service in the occupied territory of Germany. Before the war there were nominally about 180,000 soldiers in Belgium, but less than half that number were immediately available when war struck this country. While the new army scheme provides for a shorter term of service, probably sone [illegible] months instead of two years—there will be a period of preliminary training in civil life which will considerably expedite the making of the serviceable soldier.

The Socialists have accepted this compromise as a sort of necessary evil while awaiting for the hoped for six months service and later on for the total abolition of conscription.

The special army commission which has been considering the [illegible] for several months is convinced that Belgium must have a strong army capable not only of defence but also when required of attack. The military experts who have given evidence before the commission may infer that clear. Perhaps this was one of the reasons that induced M. Huber, the socialist deputy, who presided over the commission to resign that presidency as being incompatible with the avowed aim of his party.

With the abolition of the contingent of civic guard—men who from various reasons were exempted from service with the regular army, practically every able bodied Belgian will now have to go through a course of military training and a period of service with the colors, while special attention is being devoted to the organization of a system whereby this trained body of men may be made available at a moment's notice.

The French authorities are unofficially favoring this system of Belgian army reform, being convinced that a strong Belgian army on the right French flank is a necessity of the effective protection of French territory.

NEW YORK PLANS BIGGEST BRIDGE YET CONCEIVED

Special to THE TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The largest bridge in the world, a double decked highway and railway structure with a total span of 10,000 feet and a capacity of 600,000 persons an hour is to be built across the Hudson river from Fifty-ninth street, New York, to the New Jersey shore.

The bridge is to be 150 feet wide and at the center will be 165 feet above the river. It will cost $100,000,000 and its terminal structures including a new union railway station will cost another $100,000,000.

Its capacity is to be only 100,000 less per hour than the total passenger capacity of the four bridges that now span the East river.

They can hold 700,000 passengers, 12,000 vehicles and 38,000 tons per hour. The new bridge would permit the Pennsylvania railroad to carry export freight direct to steamers.

The plans were announced today coincident with the filing at Albany of the incorporation papers for the Hudson River Bridge Corporation.

Workmen's Demand for Soviets Denied

By Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—(Special Cable Despatch.)—The demand of the French metal workers union that the employers grant them the right to form what are popularly termed "soviets" in each factory to supervise the work was refused tonight by the employers.

The latter contended that the matters over which control was requested did not concern the workers, but they promised simultaneously to make an attempt to alleviate the unemployment situation.

The workers had demanded among other things supervision of wages, working and sanitary conditions.

Tonight it was not known what decision the metal workers will take in the face of the employers' refusal but the situation admittedly is very serious.

Better Treatment Of Car Lines Urged

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A liberal and tolerant public attitude toward street car companies was suggested tonight by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It was urged that local transportation is an industry to be fostered and developed, that such industries should be permitted to earn enough to induce investments for extensions and improvements and that public ownership does not afford a solution of the problem.
